CONTROVERSIAL STAR TELLS OF GIRLHOOD, HOLLYWOOD AND MARRIAGE

Elizabeth Taylor's Own Unvarnished Story

Elizabeth Taylor, now starring with Richard Burton in "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" has been simultaneously admired and attacked most of her life. In her book, ::Elizabeth Taylor: An Informal Memoir," she speaks openly, candidly and disarmingly about her career, her love affairs, her illnesses, her children, her "new life" with Richard Burton. This is the first of an eight-part series taken from the autobiography in which the controversial actress tells how she feels about herself.

LONDON—I had the most idyllic childhood in England. I really grew up in Kent on my godfather's estate, where my parents had a house. There were hundreds of acres to roam over and a farm of sorts.

My brother and I made pets of all the animals—rabbits, turtles, lambs, goats, chickens. It was my idea of real bliss. I was very small—3 when I was given a pony named Betty. The first time I got on her back — wearing a little organdy dress — she bucked me into a patch of stinging nettles. But they made me get right back on, and I hardly got off again till we left England.

IN 1939, WHEN I was 7, we knew the war was coming. Mother and my dad, who was an art dealer in London, were advised to leave England, so we moved to Pacific Palisades near Hollywood and Dad opened a gallery.

Those years before I started acting were truly happy. But I wanted to be an actress—like my mother, who had been on the stage before she married.

I think I was probably born a ham. I was constricted by shyness—I still am—and acting meant I could be at ease behind somebody else's facade. And with my very high imagination I spent most of my time in deliberate daydreams—"Walter Mitty-ing"—which I still do now when I'm putting on makeup or doing my nails.

Sometimes I Walter Mitty about what I might have done, should have said. Or I write scenes, cast them with people I know or imaginary ones, and play out the plots as if I were the director.

ONE OF DAD'S fellow air-raid wardens was a producer named Sam Marx who was doing a film called "Lassie." It was almost finished except for perhaps 10 scenes. These required a little girl with an English accent.

I went down to the studio and pretended to pat an imaginary coolie on a bare sound stage. It was a snap for a Walter Mittying dog lover.

That film is notable to me mainly because I met its star, a little boy named Roddy McDowell who is

Air Traffic Woes Grow

United Press International

The spreading impact of the three-day old airlines strike shattered travel and vacation plans of thousands and reached out Saturday to touch the lives of persons who never get close to an airport.

Mail deliveries slowed. Embargoes were placed on air freight. The tourist and convention industry, particularly hotels and restaurants which cater to it, felt the pinch. Servicemen and dependants who often travel under orders and strict schedules were particularly affected.

Army Pvt. Gustavo Vasquez, for instance, planned to fly from Philadelphia to visit his mother in Puerto Rico before he left for duty in Viet Nam. He hoped to leave Friday but gave up hope of getting home by late Saturday and concentrated instead on transportation back to his outfit at Ft. Lewis.

Five Indianapolis policemen were worried about being docked for being late in reporting back to duty. They were left high and dry when the Shrine convention in San Francisco ended.

A circuit court judge attending the convention said "I'm going to call back and arrange for another judge to take over my calendar Monday."

Ticket-seekers lined up four and five deep at reservation counters of airlines not being struck.

Hotelmen at Miami Beach, Fla., said the strike would cause "partial or complete disaster" to its summer tourist business. The Chicago Convention Bureau was hard hit. Some 65,000 conventioneers had been expected in the city this weekend.

Postmaster General Lawrence F. O'Brien took emergency measures but said there will be serious delays in mail deliveries. At Chicago's giant post office officials ruled that only items stamped "air mail" would be sent by air. Normally, much ordinary mail goes by air as well.

Nonstruck airlines reported capacity bookings. Feeder airlines, railroads and buses also said they were much busier than usual. Surprisingly, crowds eased off at airports. Instead, persons seeking reservations jammed switchboards of operating airlines. But a number slept all night at Kennedy Airport in New York and O'Hare at Chicago.

Airlines Strikers Pressured by U.S.

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The Johnson administration Saturday put the striking machinists union under pressure to end its walkout against five major airlines as mediation efforts resumed amid gloomy comments about prospects for a quick settlement.

The pressure was exerted in a statement by two members of a three-man presidential emergency board that the strike was "unnecessary and unjustified." They urged the International Association of Machinists to end it.

Richard E. Neustadt, a Harvard University dean, and David Ginsburg, a Washington lawyer, said it was "inconceivable" the parties could not reach agreement "without delay" based on terms that the board recommended last month. Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., who headed the board, issued a similar statement Friday.

The administration pressure came as James J. Reynolds, assistant secretary of labor, began efforts to end the strike. He said following five hours of meetings that no significant progress had been made, and the talks were re-

No Sparring As NAACP Ends Parley

Convention Hints Wait-and-See On Black Power Move

Delegates to the 57th annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People concluded a week-long meeting in Los Angeles Saturday by carefully avoiding the highly explosive issue of "black power," the key to future unity in the civil rights movement.

Earlier in the convention, NAACP Executive Director Roy Wilkins had taken some strong jabs at the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) and the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), as well as their rallying cry of "black power."

* * * *

BUT THE DELEGATES seemed anxious to steer a neutral course for the time being. In a preamble to their resolutions, they skillfully skirted the words "black power."

Saturday, in an interview with The Independent, Press - Telegram, Wilkins sought to clarify his earlier remarks on "black power" and the NAACP's relationship to SNCC and CORE in order to dispel the impression that the association had reached the stage of an open rupture with the smaller activist groups.

His own position, he said, did not imply any summary break with the two other organizations. At the same time, however, he made it plain that any future cooperation between them would depend on a redefinition of the term to rule out any connotation of ethnic power.

The convention seemed to take the position that it would wait and see what

3 Vessels in Port as N. Viet Hit

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union accused the United States Saturday of threatening Soviet merchant shipping in its bombing attacks on North Viet Nam. U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk, on his return home to Washington from Asia, dismissed the Russian protest note as "unnecessary."

Rusk called on the Soviet Union to bring a halt to the war and again welcomed proposals, most recently made by India, for a Geneva conference on Viet Nam.

He said: "Our planes have been hitting the exact targets they have been looking for, namely P.O.L. (petroleum installations). All that kind of talk by the Soviet Union is unnecessary. They are cochairman of the Geneva Conference. They can get together and call a conference and get this thing started toward a peaceful settlement."

THE RUSSIAN note of protest was handed in to the U.S. Embassy directing attention to American bombing raids on July 7 at the North Vietnamese port of Haiphong, according to Tass, the official Soviet press agency.

These raids "created a direct threat to Soviet merchant ships and the lives of Soviet seamen," the Foreign Ministry's note said.

Haiphong Estimate Way Off

WASHINGTON (AP)—The key North Vietnamese oil depot near Haiphong was hit much less severely than the U.S. government claimed after the first U.S. bombing strike there June 29, it was learned Saturday.

Pentagon sources said postattack reconnaissance photos showed the Haiphong complex suffered between 40 and 50% destruction, rather than the 80% claimed by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

The lower than announced destruction in the first raid is what prompted a second strike at Haiphong.

GIs Outwit Cong

SAIGON (UPI)—A U.S. armored column deliberately set out as "bait" Saturday to draw a Viet Cong ambush force of some 2,000 men out into the open near the Cambodian border. Then American planes, artillery and thousands of infantrymen promptly pounced on the Communists, killing 160 and driving the others back into the jungle.

American casualties were officially described as light in the battle that raged for four hours 60 miles north of Saigon after a Communist regiment fell into the daring trap laid by the U.S. Army's 1st Infantry Division.

Making up the bait was a column of tanks and armored personnel carriers of the 1st Division's 4th Cavalry Squadron.

The Communists, in classic guerrilla style, opened fire on the American column with mortars, recoilless rifles, and machine guns set up in trees as close as 30 feet from the tanks. De Puy's cavalrymen swung their 90mm cannon and 50-caliber machine guns on the Viet Cong. As soon as the Communists sprung their ambush De Puy called in U.S. air artillery strikes, poured in more armored and rushed up four battalions of infantrymen—some 3,200 men—to the scene.

WASHINGTON—Defense Secretary Robert McNamara took his turn Saturday in the administration's sustained celebration of progress in the war in Viet Nam.

Citing essentially the same indicators that other high officials had listed throughout the week, McNamara described himself as "cautiously optimistic" about the military situation. He returned Saturday from military consulations in

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION LOSES ITS 'SNOOPER' CREW

Lurid Sex Report on Calif. Teachers Backfires

By JIM McCAULEY
From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — A "classroom Kinsey report" on state investigations into alleged sexual misbehavior and other misconduct by certain California teachers has ignited a new Capitol controversy.

The report, distributed to legislative committees at least three times in the past year by the State Department of Education, backfired.

The 1966 legislature voted to strip the department of its three-man investigative force, and placed it instead under the State Criminal Identification and Investigation Bureau.

The "educational" investigators had been under criticism for their role in the state probe into a San Diego teacher's play, "A Cat Named Jesus," but the furor over the report lingers on.

Assemblyman Leo Ryan, D-South San Francisco, called it a "questionable document." Assemblyman Willie Brown Jr., D-San Francisco, also ripped into it. Brown deplored that it placed some instructors and ex-teachers in double jeopardy by rehashing their case publicly.

The controversial report identified the alleged offenders by name, then wrote up the account in style which specifically said they committed certain crimes — even in cases where subsequent notations indicated they had been acquitted in court.

The book-length report, distributed to legislators to justify retaining three investigators on the State Education Department payroll, gives lurid case-histories how:

— Eighty teachers and former teachers were arrested for sexual crimes, including 65 for homosexual offenses and five for prostitution.

— Twenty-two others got in trouble over thefts, burglaries and other offenses relating to money.

— Another 33 teachers faced licensed investigations over other things, including four for alleged Communist backgrounds, two for refusing to sign a loyalty oath, three for Selective Service violations, two for alcoholism and eight for mental instability.

— Some of the sexual offenses involved students also.

— One teacher romped nude along a public beach in Southern California.

— A male teacher took three minor girls on a beer-drinking spree in Reno.

— A psychology teacher asked his students a series of personal questions, including: Have you ever had sexual intercourse?

The report involved case history complaints on 135 teachers as compiled over a 3½-year period. They obviously were the most sensational ones in the investigation files. California has more than 120,000 classroom teachers.

Many of the teachers under fire since have lost their credentials, though some still presumably are in the classrooms.

ARTHUR KROCK:

LBJ News Conference Is Revising Art of War

WASHINGTON — The bombing of the chief industrial components of the war-making potential of North Viet Nam is not the only shift of tactics in President Johnson's pursuit of his immediate objective to halt world Communism territorial expansion at the borders of South Viet Nam. Another shift is the resort to official news conferences to try out experiments in the strategies of war.

KROCK

Since news conferences became a fixed institution of the U.S. government, they have regularly been used to stimulate a favorable public opinion of its record, and to forestall spreading dissent when an act or policy has come under critical attack. But it is an innovation to make mass press interviews a vehicle of waging war, as the President did on June 18 and July 5. He used the first presumably to soften the international and domestic impact of the attacks on Hanoi and Haiphong that soon followed. He used the second news conference to create a psychology of certain victory, with the purpose of quieting some critics at home and discouraging expanded aid to the enemy by Moscow and Peking.

His pronouncements on both these occasions departed from maxims which have been scrupulously followed by governments in the conduct of war. One is military: never increase the risk potential in a complete tactical change by even an implication to the enemy that it is impending. The second, which is deeply imprinted in both military and diplomatic manuals, is always to leave an adversary room for a face-saving retreat from battle to negotiation in good faith, particularly when negotiation is a stated policy objective of the other adversary. The value of the first axiom, in terms of limiting casualtiese, has been repeatedly demonstrated in war. The value of the second is a recurrent fact of history.

Nevertheless. the President, after what surely was careful deliberation, virtually warned the North Vietnamese on June 18 of the imminent end of the period in which he had spared the vital enemy supply plants adjacent to the urban masses of Hanoi and Haiphong. "We must," he said, "continue to raise the cost of aggression at its source," a word which had only one meaning in the context.

The light resistance the bombers encountered has been accounted for in some quarters as evidence that the Hanoi government, not finding it crediable that advance notice would even be implied, dismissed the President's hint to the news conference as merely another threat which once again would not materialize. Whether or not this is the explanation, the President's innovation in the strategy of war—implying a change in military tactics before it was made and using a medium of communication which assured worldwide publicity—did not result in the battle casualties whose prevention is the purpose of the military convention he disregarded.

Johnson may have as gratifying results from his rejection of the other rule derived from long military and diplomatic experience: say and do nothing likely to stiffen or revive the combat effort of a discouraged enemy. Only a few years ago the allies in World War II paid an enormous penalty in casualties for President Roosevelt's demand of "unconditional surrender" at a time when the dimming prospect of military victory was producing internal pressures on the high command of the enemy for a negotiated peace. But the precedent is recent enough to justify some apprehension that history may repeat itself.

This dubious venture in propaganda as active military strategy, projected through the unusual channel of a news conference, was initiated by the President at his Texas ranch, July 5, with the following comment: "Their record (U.S. Armed Forces in the Vietnamese war) has been outstanding. Their results are very good. Our diplomatic sources indicate that the opposing forces no longer expect a military victory in Viet Nam."

He immediately added he was well "aware of the dangers of speculation," apparently feeling it advisable to warn that the encouraging "indications from . . . diplomatic sources" should be evaluated as just speculation. But, if this was an impulse of caution, in remembrance that similar remarks had acted as a goad of renewed enemy resistance, the impulse was of very temporary duration. The next day Under Secretary of State George Ball called a news conference to promote credence in the reports the President had briefly cited.

In this administration, under-secretaries, and even their chiefs, do not summon news conferences to expatiate on a presidential theme without specific direction. So it was generally taken for granted that Johnson had given Ball the assignment.

After putting more emphasis than the President had on the "reports" of war weariness and a sense of defeat at Hanoi, Ball speculated at great length on his own reasons for feeling that North Viet Nam should have abandoned hope of military victory some time ago. The intent was plainly to advance the psychological pressure which is designed to bring Hanoi to meaningful negotiation. But the question remains whether portraying the foe as already beaten and aware of that will convince him that only by prolonging the war can he hope to avert the necessity of consenting to a Carthaginian peace.

U.S. Must Avoid Creation of Empire in Southeast Asia

PARIS — It is time to concern ourselves with a profound but far from evident danger, the danger that the United States might unconsciously create an empire in Southeast Asia. At whatever cost we must avoid any absent-minded imperialism that would not only contradict America's national philosophy but could lead to nothing but trouble. Our object is to win a war, not territory.

In political planning Washington should avoid two paths, either of which might seem militarily convenient. The U.S. must be careful not to assume too great an influence in small countries like Thailand or South Viet Nam and thereby without knowing it, menace them with neo-colonial dependence. And not deceive ourselves into thinking that heavy investment in huge bases that have been needed for war should commit us to exaggerated rights of tenure once the threat passes.

Of course, American base agreements need not necessarily affect the political or diplomatic attitude of a host country. U.S. base rights in the Philippines, Saudi Arabia or Pakistan have produced litle discernible influence on their policy nor can one argue that continued U.S. presence in Castro's Cuba a faithful satellite.

Nevertheless, it is time to contemplate the future of U.S. bases and influence in Southeast Asia. There is a growing American military presence in Thailand (it should reach 30,000 before long) and a vast U.S. army plus ancillary corps in South Viet Nam.

U.S. airbases in Thailand have been developed at Udorn, Nakhon Phanom, Udon, Korat, Takhli and Don Muang, but by far the most important installation is the massive sea-air complex at Sattahip. The U.S. investment in Thailand's permanent military infrastructure comes to hundreds of millions of dollars.

* * * *

THE COST of permanent infrastructure in South Viet Nam exceeds $1 billion, more than half the country's annual gross national product. To erect a dike against aggression the U.S. has invested enormous sums on Asian mainland installations. Only a few of these, like Sattahip in Thailand or Camranh Bay in Viet Nam, can play a useful future peacetime role.

When stability eventually supervenes, Washington should take special pains not to be tempted to protect this huge investment by seeking a kind of imperial status in Southeast Asia. Both our interests and those of our hosts dictate that we yield most of these fixtures when the proper time comes. However, for a few such as Sattahip or Camranh, it might be desirable for the U.S. to negotiate limited rights or emergency return privileges.

New York Times Service

Once the Viet Nam fighting ends the U.S. will have the chance to prove it has no conscious intention of capitalizing on its wealth and power by creating a new empire and also that it has enough wisdom and self control to avoid doing so unconsciously. Washington seems convinced that ultimate peace in Southeast Asia can be maintained through SEATO and its codicils without any large U.S. military presence.

* * * *

EVEN today some U.S. policy makers look forward to expanding SEATO into a Pacific security alliance linked with ANZUS (the Australian, New Zealand, U.S. security pact) and also linked with our Japanese security treaty. Such prospects are, of course, still a long way off. Japan remains reluctant to play a strategic role.

Nevertheless Washington suspects that Peking is starting to realize the U.S. really does want to withdraw its physical presence from mainland Asia when the situation permits. China may some day come around to favoring negotiations with this goal in mind although Hanoi might then show a certain eagerness to keep U.S. strength in the vicinity. All Vietnamese, northern and southern, share historical distrust for Chinese imperial ambitions.

President Johnson has given thought to Southeast Asia's peacetime economic future as shown by his stymied plan for the Mekong Valley. But Washington must also soon start studying the area's eventual political pattern. Should this be a neutral one?

An evidently acceptable form of neutrality has already developed in Singapore, despite its military base lease to Britain, and is developing in Indonesia.

* * * *

THESE trends might some day come to resemble the kind of neutrality practiced by India. Such neutrality, founded on true independence and willingness to oppose external aggression, could certainly recommend itself as an ultimate Southeast Asian solution compatible with U.S. interests.

One may fairly be accused of counting unhatched chickens when speculating about peace amidst the rigors of an unwon war. Hanoi still announces it will never compromise and Peking mutters lurid threats. Yet sometimes in Asia things change swiftly. We would do well to plan for the future and thereby insure against any absent-minded drift to unwanted empire.

JAMES RESTON:

Congress Clings to Creaky Status Quo

WASHINGTON—All the institutions of America—political, religious, commercial, educational—are having trouble these days adjusting to the changes of the age, but none is making less progress than the Congress of the United States.

It is not only rooted in the past, but organized to perpetuate the past. The executive branch of the federal government, the big corporations, the churches, and the universities have all organized themselves to encourage the advancement of younger men and women, but the Congress, and especially the Senate, is still going against the trend, still discouraging youth and protecting age, and steadily losing power and authority to the President in the process.

RESTON

The Democratic primary election in Virginia Tuesday illustrates the point. It is being advertised as a battle against the Byrd machane, and in some ways it is, but the two closest races are against Sen. Willis Robertson, 78, and Rep. Howard Smith, 83, chairman of the powerful House Rules Committee. So the main issue is not so much the Byrd machine as age itself.

Sen. Harry Byrd Jr., is seeking election to the seat occupied by his famous conservative father, now desperately ill, but he does not control his father's political organization, and he has the energy to carry on his father's work if he beats Armistead Boothe in the primary.

THE SMITH and Robertson campaigns are somewhat different. They are arguing that age is power, because service in the Congress gives them seniority and has moved Robertson into the chairmanship of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, and Smith into the chairmanship of the rules committee. Vote for us, they say, not because we will move with the trend of the times, but because we have enough power in our committees to oppose the trend of the times.

It is a powerful argument under present circumstances. State Sen. William B. Spong Jr., a 45-year-old moderate running against Robertson, and George C. Rawlings Jr., a much more liberal 44-year-old from Fredericksburg opposing Smith, have had trouble dealing with it. The conservative elements in the state, including the bankers and most of the newspapers, are against them, but the question in this election is what is in the interests of Virginia in the long run?

The question in the Virginia election is whether it is going with the deeper tides of the nation or whether it is going to oppose them, whether it is going with the past and the old, or with the future and the young. By the 1968 election, the average age of the American electorate will be down to 27, and in the next generation, the majority of the population will get increasingly younger.

The U.S. Senate Republican policy committee, headed by Sen. Bourke Hickenlooper, R-Iowa, a political ally of the senior Byrd, put out a report this weekend arguing that the political future in America lies with the candidates who kept in touch with the young.

The report noted that in the next 20 years, the people in America over 65 will increase by about 7 million, those between 35 and 65 by less than 11 million, but those between 20 and 34 by 25 million and those under 20 by 35 million.

"The center of our political stage," the report quoted Peter Drucker, the historian and economist, as saying, "is now being taken over by a new power group—a professional, technical, and managerial class; very young, affluent, used to great job security, and highly educated. It will soon replace the old power centers — labor, the farm bloc, and big business, in the old fashioned sense of of that term.

* * * *

"AROUND THIS NEW power center, tomorrow's majority and tomorrow's concensus about the new issues will have to be built."

The Virginia primary is perhaps the most interesting in the nation this year because it will indicate whether the state is going with the old power centers or moving toward the new. This is not a question of moving radically to the left, for both Spong, who opposes Robertson, and Rawling who opposes Jud Smith, are moderates, about half way between their opponents and the national trend.

All the powerful institutions of the state of Virginia and of Washington, however, are against them. All the elders of the House and Senate are supporting Robertson and Smith — to say nothing of the wealthy interests of the state and nation — and even the secretary of the treasury, Henry H. Fowler, a Virginian, has come into the primary to back the status quo and oppose the rise of the young moderates.

Beauty Pageant Dates for 1967 Slated Feb. 7-18

The International Beauty Congress will be held here Feb. 7-18, it was announced Saturday by James A. Willingham, president of the civic group sponsoring the event.

Earlier this year, Willingham announced that the finals of the contest to select Miss United States and Miss International would move to a winter date instead of this August as originally planned.

The new dates were selected on the basis of a survey made by pageant director Wayne Dallard. Dallard pointed out that the February date will spotlight the Long Beach pageant as the first beauty event on the calendar each year.

* * * *

DAILARD SAID other advantages of the winter show include removal of the pageant from the summer log-jam of beauty events, wider press interest because of the timing and greater availability of air transportation during the off-peak season.

HIROKO SASAKI
Japanese Entry

Preliminary events to select candidates in the United States and foreign countries continue as scheduled this year through November. The present reigning queens retain their titles until the finals here in February.

Ingrid "Fiffi" Finger of West Germany is the current Miss International Beauty and Gail Karen Krielow of Cleveland holds the title Miss United States.

* * * *

NEWEST CONTENDER for Miss International Beauty of 1967 is Hiroko Sasaki, 23, winner of the Miss Japan title in Tokyo. Australia, Colombia and Uruguay have also selected candidates. Franchises for this year's preliminary contests have been signed with sponsors in 40 foreign countries.

A total of 35 franchises have been signed for United States preliminaries, with another 12 expected to become official before the season closes. Missouri, New Mexico, Nevada and Pennsylvania candidates have been chosen to date.

The Long Beach-based beauty pageant has attracted worldwide attention since 1952. Dallard's study indicates the presentation earlier in the year will provide even greater appeal, nationally and internationally.

Surveyor 'Cools It,' Fights On

PASADENA (UPI)—America's Surveyor spacecraft on the moon, a gallant little guy with brain and heart of cables and transistors, fought a stubborn battle Saturday to stay alive for Science.

"We don't know what's going on," admitted a baffled spokesman for the California Institute of Technology's Jet Propulsion Laboratory here.

Scientists Friday reported that Surveyor was near death because the temperature of its battery rose to its design limit of 140 degrees fahrenheit.

* * * *

"WE THOUGHT IT would be dead Friday night," said a JPL spokesman early Saturday. "It could last for several days or it could fail in the next hour or two. It's one of those things you can't tell."

However, by 2 p.m. PDT Saturday the battery temperature had cooled to about 130 degrees. Scientists moved Surveyor's solar panel slightly to absorb energy from the sun.

As a result of this movement, Surveyor's battery was reported "getting a slight charge" from the Sun's energy.

"We don't know what to think," the JPL spokesman said. "If the temperature gets below 125 degrees — below normal operating range — we will continue to adjust the solar panels. If it stays this way, we may start taking pictures again, possibly Tuesday morning."

Should Surveyor live until Wednesday and its cameras resume functioning, some spectacular pictures of the sun disappearing over the moon's horizon might be taken next Wednesday night with the onset of the lunar sunset, scientists said.

The 620-pound, three-legged spacecraft, which survived temperatures of 260 degrees below zero during a two-week lunar night, was stricken Friday with rising battery temperatures that threatened to destroy is power center at any moment.

Teen Brothers Fly Coast-to-Coast

A 23-year-old bird soared from the sky Saturday afternoon as Capistranans looked skyward, but it wasn't the return of the legendary swallows.

It marked the end of a week-long coast-to-coast flight by two teen-age brothers in a 23-year-old Piper Cub plane they rebuilt for their journey.

Kern and Rinker Buck of New Vernon, N.J., landed their small craft at San Juan Capistrano Airport at 3 p.m. sharp. The teen-agers were greeted by their aunt and uncle, two cousins, and Kern Buck's 16-year-old girl friend, Carol Brantley.

The young pilots said they experienced no trouble during the flight.

The boys averaged 85 miles an hour and logged 600 miles per day on the cross-country jaunt. At one point when they had to cross mountain ranges that were 11,000 feet high, the young Bucks had to navigate the craft through mountain passes. The plane's ceiling is 10,000 feet.

The airport-touchdown marked the midway point of eight months of work for the two teen-agers. They worked with their father rebuilding the craft and earned $200 apiece at odd jobs to pay for the flight.

Yuan clutched his daughter tightly in his arms and broke into sobs when he saw her for the first time since she was 20 days old. Occasionally, he reached a hand up and gently ruffled her hair.

The little girl, Peggy, who's barely 4 years old, appeared tired and confused by the many strangers around her and cried softly from time to time.

Happy Comic

Comedian Jackie Mason, elated over a court ruling upholding the basis of his $3 million libel and slander suit against television host Ed Sullivan, Saturday said in Las Vegas, he is willing to drop the action if he is asked back on the show.

"I want to vindicate myself before the whole country by appearing on his show again," Mason said. "If he agreed to have me reappear on his show I'd drop the matter."

Sullivan had accused Mason, a former practicing rabbi in Weldon, S.C., of making obscene gestures with his hand. Mason contended he was only responding to Sullivan's finger signals indicating the time he had left.

March Urges DiGiorgi Boycott

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Praised by Sen. Robert Kennedy, D-N.Y., and given a hand by Harry Bridges' longshore union, the National Farm Workers Association paraded up Market Street, Saturday urging boycott of a big food firm which does not recognize it.

The 1,000 in the march included a group from the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union carrying cargo hooks.

The NFWA called for the boycott against DiGiorgio Corp. after DiGiorgio said its grape pickers in the Central Valley had no desire to be represented by that union. When NFWA pickets showed up recently on the waterfront in an effort to prevent loading DiGiorgio products on ships, Bridges men refused to cross the lines. A court order later erased the picket line.

BEFORE THE parade, John Raymond of the NFWA march committee sent appeals to persons of prominence asking for support.

Kennedy replied:

"I want to let you know again of my continuing support of the cause of bettering the conditions of farm workers in California and around the country. Farm workers and particularly migratory farm workers have been left behind as our country has achieved record prosperity.

"I am advised that the arbitrator assigned by Gov. Brown to look into the DiGiorgio election is making some progress toward the resolution of that problem."

Students Parade With Farm Laborers in Texas

RIO GRANDE CITY, Tex. (UPI) — A half-day's march down sunbaked Texas Highway 83, tall, gangling Michael Holcombe, 20, used an ointment to plaster gauze strips to his beet-red nose.

Holcomb an another "Anglo," Susan Baker, 22, a tall, University of Oregon coed with brown hair up in a bun, marched puffing beside some 100 Latin-American farm laborers, who chatted cheerfully as they effortlessly covered the miles.

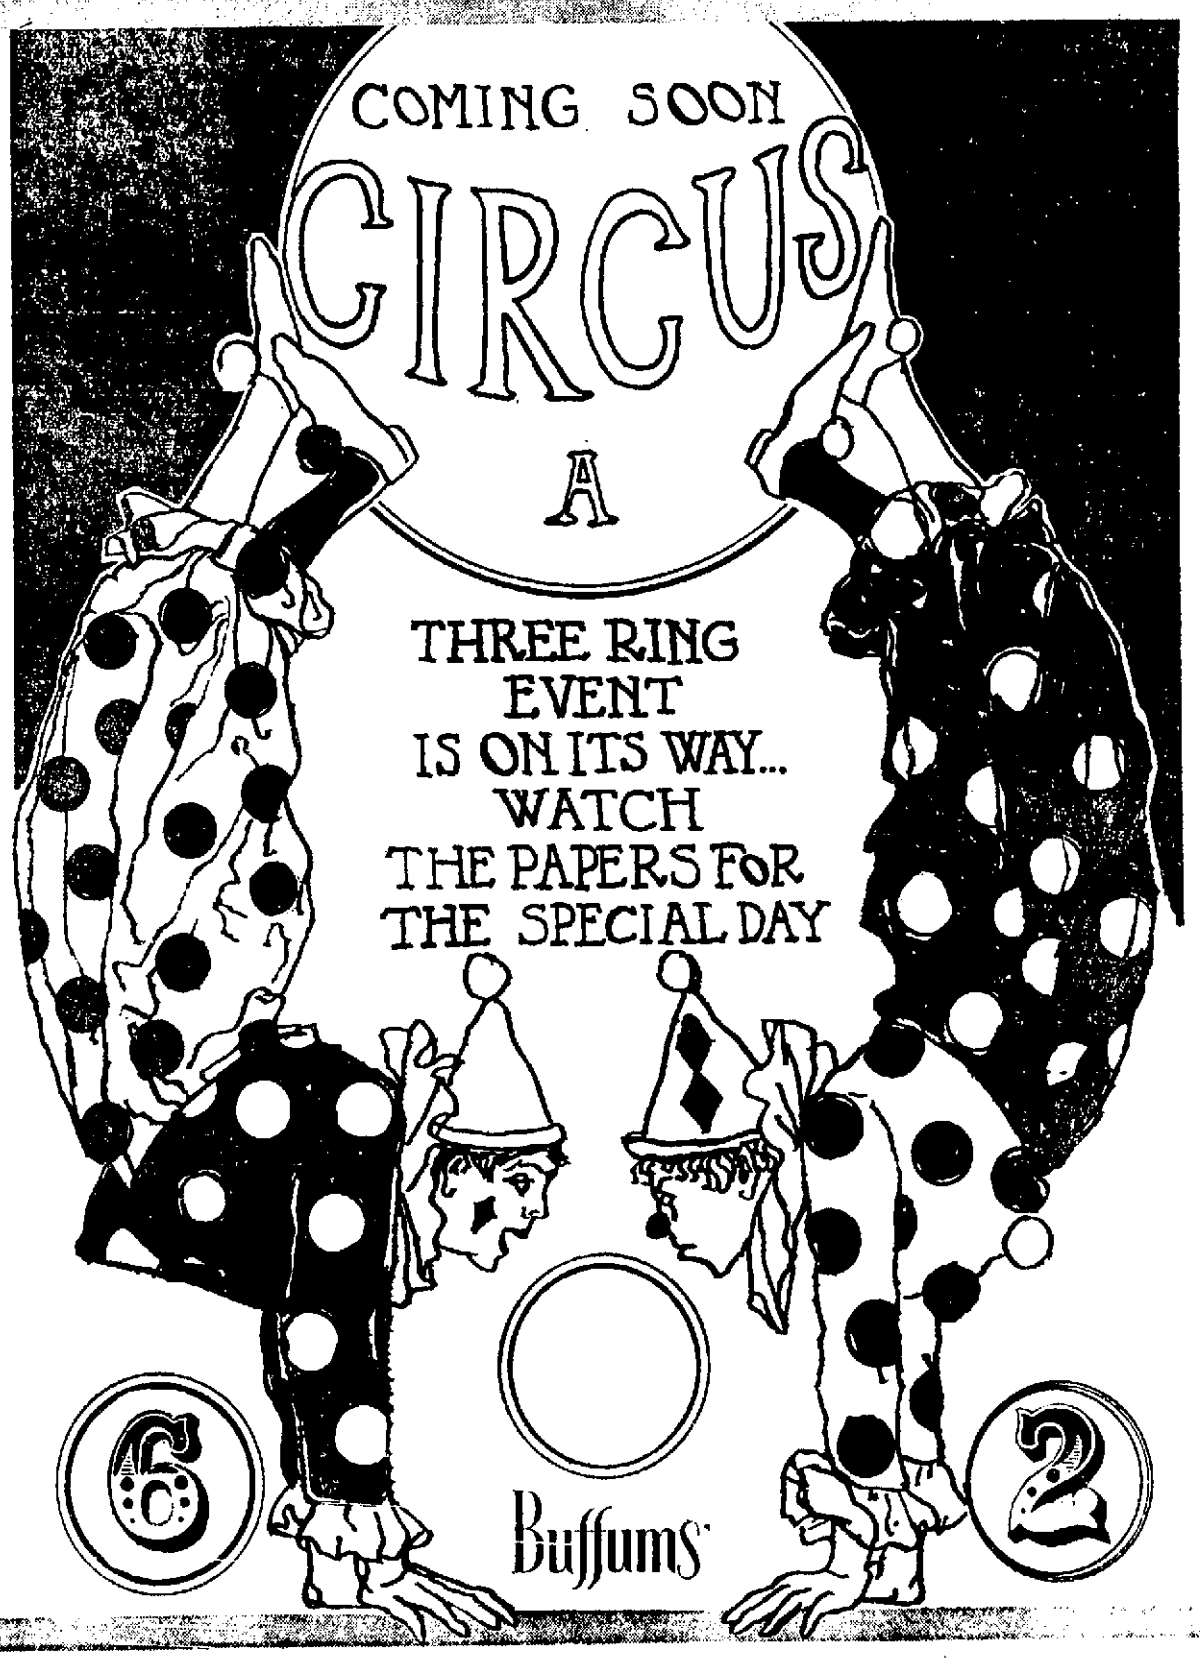

The two are student apprentices for the National Farm Workers Association.

Holcomb, a student at Austin Peay State College, Clarksville, Tenn., said he and five others were renting "one of less than half the houses in Rio Grande City that have indoor plumbing."

Miss Baker, who participated in the Delano, Calif., grape pickers strike, said she was staying with strike leader Eugene Nelson and his wife temporarily, but was "really without a permanent place to stay."

She said she hadn't written her father, Bill Baker, a Ketchikan, Alaska, radio announcer, in quite a while, "but if he reads about the strike, maybe he'll know where I am."

They marched in a five-day, 61-mile trek last week with farm laborers of Starr County, Texas, who had a per capita income of $534 in 1960, lowest in the state.

Liz Taylor Tells Her Unvarnished Story

ELIZABETH TAYLOR AS INFANT

now just about my oldest friend—and really the perfect friend.

M-G-M had owned "National Velvet" for a long time and every once in a while they'd sort of dust it off. But they either couldn't find somebody of the right size or somebody who rode or somebody with an English accent. They began casting glances in my direction. But when I came down to the producer's office, he saw that though I was 11, I was only as tall as a 6-year-old. He measured me on the wall and made a line with a pencil.

* * * *

HE SAID, "I'M sorry, honey, but you're just too short. No one would ever believe that you could get in through the jockey's weighing room. You look like a child."

And I said, "Well, I'll grow up." He laughed and patted me on the head.

But I was absolutely determined. "National Velvet" was really me. I started riding every morning for an hour and a half before school.

For lunch I'd have steaks and salads, then swim and do exercises to stretch myself.

In three months I'd grown somewhat. I went back to see the producer and said, "I did grow."

He said, "You do look taller."

He still had the little mark by the side of the door, and I had grown three inches. He kept that mark on the wall for years. And I got the part.

To do "National Velvet" I signed a contract with M-G-M — and became their chattel until I did "Cleopatra."

* * * *

THE STUDIO THEN was still in its super era and was truly a most remarkable machine. L. B. Mayer and M-G-M created stars out of tinsel, cellophane and newspapers. Their tremendous publicity staff built the background, built the personality, built the character.

But all the stars were born and built and died more or less at the whim of L. B. Mayer, who was absolute dictator of the studio—and of a good deal of Hollywood to boot.

But I admit that all this time when I was young, M-G-M was a very exciting place to be. I've always loved movie stars, loved movies, loved everything about them except doing them.

There were two other girls on the block where I lived and we called ourselves the Three Musketeers.

We'd make up plays for ourselves and make up stories, and of course I was really IN, because I could say, "Well, I know Van Johnson, so Van Johnson is going to be my boy friend today. But I'll let you have him tomorrow."

God! That seems so long ago, so sweet, so clean.

* * * *

I HAD ALWAYS had a very strict and proper upbringing —and absolutely necessary it was, living the existence I did.

The irony is that the morality I learned at home required marriage. I couldn't just have an affair. So I got married all those times, and now I'm accused of being a scarlet woman.

I guess I never gave myself the time to find out whether a thing was love or infatuation. I always chose to think I was in love. I didn't know.

I didn't have my own yardstick. But I believed that love was synonymous with marriage.

So I got engaged—to Nick Hilton—at barely 18. I really did think that being married would be like living in a little white cottage with a little picket fence and little roses and little me in an organdy apron.

The wedding was like a fairy tale. It was perfect. I was terrified. So was Nick—I remember taking out my handkerchief and mopping the sweat off his face during the ceremony.

* * * *

THERE WAS A BIG reception and, for the first time in my life, I had two glasses of champagne. Then the time came to leave and I had a third glass of champagne.

And I became more and more afraid.

The honeymoon in Europe lasted two weeks. I should say the marriage lasted for two weeks. Then came, yours sincerely, disillusionment — rude and brutal.

There's nothing more to be said about that first marriage. It scared me and left me with horrible memories.

I am sure this was also true for Nick. But the marriage has nothing to do with my life now; I have no children by him. He's not part of my life and I'm no part of his life.

Marrying Nick had been so easy, so like a fairy tale. Everything was lovely; my parents, everyone approved—too perfect, too picturesque, too ideal.

* * * *

WHEN I LEFT HIM, it was the first divorce in our family, and I was totally crushed. I was afraid of sympathy or understanding from anybody.

I was afraid of myself. I was afraid to go back to Nick. I was afraid of my total failure. I was afraid of the disappointment to my parents and his parents. I was afraid to be alone.

I guess I was afraid of growing up.

But I didn't go home, back to the warm nest. I moved into an apartment with my stand-in—trying to stand on my own and not be afraid!

When I kicked myself out of the nest and got married, I had been vaguely aware that I ought to have been more self-sufficient.

But it really cracked home when I realized I had been a virgin not only physically but mentally. I mean I didn't know ANYTHING—like cooking a meal, like not being sloppy, not throwing your clothes on the floor and expecting somebody else to hang them up.

I didn't like to give orders to servants—it made me feel funny—but I was incapable of doing anything for myself or for other people.

* * * *

AT THE FIRST SIGN of trouble between Nick and me I didn't have one clue how to cope with it.

When I divorced Nick, I said on the witness stand that he had told me to go to hell, and insulted my mother and insulted me in front of friends. I could have gone into such a multitude of really horrendous things to make what I was doing understandable.

But I didn't want anything from Nick. I didn't want alimony. I certainly didn't want to hurt him.

I didn't want to be the wronged woman. The hurt that had happened was too private. Ever since I'd been 12, I'd been a child star with no privacy, and very possessive about my own thoughts and problems.

Until the separation I told practically nobody that there were problems, to say nothing of the nature of the problems.

Pick Panel to Honor Designers

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A seven-member jury on good design and beauty was appointed Saturday by Gov. Edmund G. Brown to honor outstanding architecture, engineering and other developments in the state.

Architect Nathaniel Owings of Big Sur was appointed chairman of the governor's panel. Brown said he hopes to start making annual awards in 1967.

Other members of the jury are Harry Ashmore, Pulitzer prize-winning editor and now at the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions in Santa Barbara; Allan Temko of the University of California at Berkeley; Dean Sam T. Southern California architectural school; Cesar Pelli, design engineer; T. Y. Lin, University of California civil engineering professor, and Mrs. Helen Reynolds, president of the California Roadside Council.

Cooking Contest in Rationed Cuba

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Housewives in Cuba — one of the few countries in the western hemisphere where food is rationed—have been invited to take part in a cooking contest.

Havana Radio, monitored in Miami, said the contest would be sponsored by the Cuban Women's Federation.

A federation spokesman said any ingredients could be used . . . except rice.

No explanation was given for the ban on rice but rations have been cut since Communist China decided to reduce shipments to Cuba.

HARD-NOSED ABOUT SOFT BRAKES

Flood of Car Gripes Released by Hearings

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF

WASHINGTON (AP) — People like to tell their troubles to congressmen, and now they're writing in to complain about their automobiles.

Hundreds of letters have poured in to congressional committees and individual congressmen as an outgrowth of auto safety hearings by five Senate and House committees or subcommittees over the past year.

Some people seek advice on what kind of car to get. Others are angry either because their autos aren't working properly or because of what they term refusal of auto companies to correct the defects.

"I have only limited confidence in the brakes for I fear one day they will not work at all," one man wrote. He said his brakes were soft and that despite repeated trips to the dealer's repair shop they weren't improved.

Some writers gripe about their car's design. "The front seat is so low that visibility over the hood is severely restricted," one wrote to the manufacturer.

In sending a copy of this letter to a congressional committee, he said "it is not to force your hand but rather (to) assist the committee in its efforts to bring about safer automobiles."

Another man reported that his car needed transmission work three times in 17 months—the first time a week after he bought it.

Gemini Pilots Blind at Liftoff; Want—Won't Get Sunglasses

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — When the Gemini 9 astronauts returned from their three-day mission last month, they had a suggestion for future astronauts —wear sunglasses during liftoff.

It was revealed for the first time Saturday that the astronauts had been blinded by the sun beaming into their cockpit during much of the critical liftoff period. The astronauts—Lt. Col. Thomas P. Stafford of the Air Force and Comdr. Eugene A. Cernan of the Navy — were launched June 3 and landed June 6.

The official description of their flight recorded soon after return has not been released to the public. But sources at Cape Kennedy, Fla., disclosed portions of the debriefing Saturday.

The Gemini 9 launching was the first to occur close to noon. For more than two minutes after liftoff, the astronauts could not read their control gauges and dials. They could not have seen a warning light if it had flashed on.

* * * *

IF THERE HAD been an emergency, they reported in their debriefing, they might not have known in time to take action.

The sun, Cernan reported, "just wiped out your whole cockpit. A correction would be the possibility of wearing sunglasses."

The advice will likely go unheeded, the space agency said, because it is impossible to wear sunglasses under the helmets.

But an engineer at the California Democratic manned spacecraft center in Houston said that as a result consideration was being given to outfitting the outside of spacecraft windows with tinted coverings. These would be used only on launchings when the sun could be a serious problem. The coverings would be sprung free of the windows once the craft was in orbit.

The Gemini 9 astronauts also reported that their splashdown, the most accurate ever made by American pilots, was a head-jerking experience. Stafford, who had flown before on Gemini 6, called it "by far the worst impact I have ever experienced in my life."

THE NEXT Gemini mission—Gemini 10—is scheduled to be launched July 18.

Overconfidence 'Great' Reagan Peril--Parkinson

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Dr. Gaylord B. Parkinson, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, said Saturday there is a "great danger of overconfidence" among California Republicans regarding Ronald Reagan's chances to be elected governor in November.

"I'm pragmatic," Parkinson told an executive committee meeting in San Francisco.

"Sure, the polls show Reagan ahead right now, but it's the election that counts and (Gov. Edward G.) Brown is working hard to improve his public image."

The Republican state chairman said he agreed with Frank Nicol of San Diego, Republican state registration chairman, that the GOP must win the "registration race" in order to gain the governorship.

Nicol reported earlier that a spring Republican registration drive narrowed the margin of registered Democrats over Republicans to 57.1% for the Democrats and 39.8% for the GOP.

"It's not good enough," Nicol said. "We've got to register 700,000 more Republicans by Sept. 15, the closing date for official registration."

Parkinson told newsmen following the executive committee meeting that he believed the "other key" to a Republican victory in November is winning over the heavy vote which went to Los Angeles Mayor Samuel W. Yorty, who opposed Brown in the June primary.

"I personally believe the Yorty vote, particularly in Northern California, was an anti-Brown vote," Parkinson said, "but I don't want to predict how it will go in November. I want to see it before I count it as ours."

He said the GOP platform committee, which meets Aug. 6 in Sacramento, "may well" draft a plank condemning extremism. However, Parkinson said, "it must include the far left as well as the so-called Republican extremism groups. It's got to include the Americans for Democratic Action."

But an engineer at the California Democratic Committee and the other groups that support Brown."

FENCES IN DISREPAIR

Key County Cuts Johnson, But Good

By DONALD JANSON

New York Times Service

AYRSHIRE, Iowa —President Johnson has acres of fence-mending to do in the next two years to be re-elected, unless Iowa's political weathervane is out of whack for the first time.

The bellwether is Palo Alto County, one of five in the nation that has been recorded on the winning side in every presidential election this century. It gave the President a whopping 2-to-1 margin over Barry Goldwater in 1964.

A just-completed survey of voter sentiment showed disenchantment with the President so great that the country might go Republican if a presidential election were to be held now. Johnson has lost support here because of the war in Viet Nam, federal spending and the feeling of farmers that the Administration opposes price increases for farm products.

In 1964 Palo Alto favored Johnson by 4,441 votes to 2,206. Nearly three-fifths of the sample in this wholly agricultural area at present would vote Republican for president unless Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., became the Democratic nominee instead of Johnson. In that event the percentages would be reversed. Kennedy is now preferred to Johnson by both registered Dmocrats and independent voters here.

Many Republicans who switched in 1964 in order to vote against Goldwater say they will not vote for Johnson again under any circumstances. Their preferences are now divided among several potential candidates, with Gov. George Romney of Michigan in the lead.

* * * *

A GRAY-HAIRED widow said she voted for Johnson but would not do so again. She said her son had been drafted but George Hamilton, a friend of the President's daughter, Lynda, has been deferred.

Mrs. D. A. Rouse said she would return to the Republican column both because the President "didn't have any business sending our boys to Viet Nam" and because "he's too plush handing out the money." The only national political name that engenders real enthusiasm today is Kennedy.

"We need to reevaluate our foreign policy and achieve communication with China," said Mrs. James Harvey. "Bobby Kennedy would do this."

"His brother was good for the farmer," said farmer Jerrie Leonard.

"A Kennedy, yes, but I'll never vote for Johnson," said Mrs. Robert Berger.

AEC to Propose Step-up On Harnessing H-Bomb

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Atomic Energy Commission, it was learned Saturday, will soon propose a step-up in the U.S. effort to harness the hydrogen bomb reaction to produce electricity — lest Russia get the jump.

The AEC's move is in the form of a progress report and recommendations for future action to be delivered in a few days to the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee.

It comes in the wake of unpublicized reports by AEC advisers—including one by its own staff scientists—that: —Russia has forged ahead of the United States in financial and manpower outlays for the quest and that Russia is threatening to overtake America's lead in scientific gains towards the goal of using the hydrogen of the world's oceans as a cheap, safe and efficient fuel of limitless supply to generate electricity.

The U.S. effort toward taming the H-bomb fusion reaction — known as "controlled thermonuclear research"—has been impeded by budgets now running at about $22 million yearly.

Give Negro Career Aid, GOP Told

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Republicans were advised Saturday to capitalize on their business connections and help Negroes toward business careers as part of a drive to reestablish the GOP as the nation's majority political party.

"With the simple facts of population growth and migration bringing control of eight out of America's 10 biggest cities within the potential control of Negroes in the next generation, Republicans—particularly on the national level—face an opportunity equal to that of the Democrats in the 1930s," GOP strategists were told.

The advice was contained in an 84-page staff study, "Where the Votes Are," prepared by the Senate Republican policy committee. The study assesses the political implications of predicted population growth and social trends.

"The decade ahead offers Republicans their first opportunity in nearly 40 years to establish themselves once again as the majority party in the United States," it said. It added that only 25% of the voters called themselves regularly affiliated with the GOP by 1964.

* * * *

"WE SUGGEST that the United States is now entering into the second period in this century of potential change among voters' political allegiance, this time due not so much to mobility as to an unprecedented circumstance of population," it said.

It predicted that the number of families under age 35 will increase by 40% in the next 10 years, and continued:

"Since party identification is at its weakest among voters in their early and middle 20s, we suggest the presence of enormous opportunity; opportunity to make of these new voters Republicans; opportunity to reach these new voters in terms of their own problems, their own issues, their own needs and hopes."

Besides its prescription for expanding the party's share of the Negro vote, the study urged the GOP to gear its operations to a changing and declining farm bloc, a mushrooming education complex and growing teacher vote, and to such issues as conservation and mass transit.

TUSTIN GIRL MISS CALIFORNIA

Victory crown is placed on head of Sue Bradley, 19, of Tustin, by last year's winner, Kathy Hage, after naming of Miss California of 1967 Friday night in Los Angeles. Kathy will vie for Miss U.S.A. next spring.

U.S. Pushes for Airlines Strike End

cessed until 1:30 p.m. today.

The White House remained silent on the strike by 35,400 mechanics and ground service workers which began Friday morning against Eastern, National, Northwest, Trans World and United airlines. But informed sources said the statements from the emergency board members were encouraged by the Johnson administration.

* * * *

JOHNSON SAID last month that the board's recommendations, which called for a settlement costing about 3.5% above a $4.50 an hour wage and benefit average over 42 months, should form the framework for an accord. The airlines have offered to settle for that, but the union has refused.

The Civil Aeronautics Board, meantime, acted to ease the impact of the strike through a series of steps designed to improve air service between some of the 231 cities affected. An official said the steps would have relatively little impact in easing the crisis that has affected more than 150,000 daily passengers, or about 60% of the domestic air volume.

NAACP Adjourns With No Sparring

happened in the months ahead. It also decided to send the question of its future relations with SNCC and CORE—and other civil rights groups—to the NAACP board of directors.

* * * *

IN ITS PREAMBLE to the resolutions, the organization declared that "although the NAACP has carefully plotted the demise of racial discrimination, at no time have we contemplated ethnicide (or racial obliteration).

"Ethnic continuity as well as ethnic unity are not only desirable," the preamble added, "but perhaps indispensable in a pluralistic society."

At the same time, the association reiterated its long-standing policy of not trying to isolate the Negro from the mainstream of American life, but of including him in it. ("Black power," on the other hand, has often had separatist connotations.)

At its windup Saturday in the Embassy Auditorium, the delegates voted overwhelmingly to carry their 1969 convention to Jackson, Miss., "where the action is," as the slogan of the Jackson supporters put it.

* * * *

THE MOVE WAS seen partly as a concession to the Southern delegates and partly as an answer to critics who have accused the NAACP of being too concerned with comfortable surroundings. Jackson, a city of 210,000, is not as well-equipped to handle conventions as some of the larger metropolitan areas in the country.

The convention had some harsh words for the police in some parts of the United States, saying the "trend of misconduct by law enforcement officers against certain people in various parts of our nation seems to be moving at an alarming rate."

It decried the beating of civil rights workers by police in the South, and insisted that FBI agents—when they are present in such cases—"make on-the-spot arrests." (The FBI contends it is an investigatory agency, and its agents are understood to have refrained from such arrests.)

The convention also called for civilian police review boards and the integration of the nation's entire law enforcement system.

In a resolution on labor, it called for a repeal of Sec. 14-B of the Taft-Hartley Act, which allows the states to ban union shops. But it coupled its call with a stinging criticism of the labor movement which, it said, is still rife with racial discrimination, particularly in the building trades.

* * * *

THE RESOLUTION on foreign policy avoided the Viet Nam war issue, and another resolution declared that the country can afford both guns and butter. The convention went on to call for greater spending for social welfare, and urged the government to establish a broad public works program.

In another move, the convention criticized the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormons) for failing to take an affirmative stand "on the great moral issue of civil rights."

Later, Wilkins took pains to point out that the resolution in no way implied any criticism of Michigan Gov. George Romney, a member of the church.

Tustin Brunette Crowned as Miss California 1967

An 18-year-old brunette from Tustin will represent California in the U.S.A. portion of the Miss Universe Beauty Pageant next May at Miami Beach, Fla.

Brown-eyed Sue Bradley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bradley and June graduate of Tustin's Foothill High School, won the title of Miss California 1967 in competition with six other finalists at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles.

The runnersup, including Georga Mae Didlake of Palos Verdes Peninsula, Miss Long Beach titleholder, will serve as Miss Bradley's honor court, each with the title of Miss California Beauty.

In addition to Miss Didlake, they are Pat Derby, Miss North Highlands; Nancy Fredson, Miss Hollywood; Lucy Ann Cook, Miss Los Angeles; Cheryl Arnold, Miss Santa Monica, and Nancy Hoskins, Miss South Los Angeles.

The new Miss California, who succeeds Kathy Hage of Santa Monica in the role, has dark brown eyes to go with her raven tresses, is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 113 pounds and measures 36-22-36 in appropriate places. She won scads of merchandise and other prizes, in addition to a vacation in Nassau and a goodwill tour of Mexico.

Miss Bradley's mother said Sue, who has been modeling in her spare time, had intended to continue her studies at a college in the Southland this fall — "but with all this excitement her plans are up in the air. We're just thrilled about her winning the contest . . ."

* * * *

GEORGA MAE, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Didlake of Palos Verdes Peninsula, is a student of California State College at Long Beach. She is a blonde with brown eyes, measures 5 feet 9½ inches in height, weighed in for contest finals at a neat 130 pounds and reported other endowments as 37-24-37.

Like Miss Bradley and the five other California Beauties, Miss Didlake will be kept busy in the coming year with individual and group appearances on behalf of the Miss Universe Pageant.

Bernard Appointed Ford Plant Manager

PICO RIVERA (CNS) — Ford Motor Co. announced Saturday the appointment of Clifford E. Bernard as manager of the company's assembly plant in Pico Rivera.

Bernard has been assistant plant manager since August, 1961. He succeeds J. B. Howard, who is on an extended medical leave. Howard, a veteran of 36 years with Ford, had been manager of the Los Angeles plant since January, 1961.

Chicago Rally to Test Support for Dr. King's Brand of Power

CHICAGO (AP)—Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., who has been organizing a campaign in Chicago this year, will get an indication today of the scope of his support.

The occasion will be a Freedom Rally in Soldier Field and a march on City Hall. A list of speakers, issued Saturday, includes Dr. King, two labor leaders and James Meredith, who was shot and wounded last month on a march in Mississippi.

A spokesman said Floyd McKissick, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, was invited but sent word he couldn't attend. Dr. Joseph H. Jackson of Chicago, head of the National Baptist Convention, which says it embraces 5.5 million Negro members, has announced he won't support the rally.

Sponsors are King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) and the Coordinating Council of Community Organizations, an alliance of Chicago civil rights groups. They hope for a turnout of 100,000.

Dr. King led a march on City Hall July 26, 1965, a Monday. Participants numbered more than 10,000. The city has a Negro population of about 900,000.

King has been spending two or three days a week in Chicago since February. Most of the work has been organizing for improved housing, education and employment for Negroes.

* * * *

ONE FUNCTIONING division, called Operation Breadbasket, has been negotiating with employes for more or better jobs for Negroes. Spokesmen said the result thus far has been jobs that added more than $1 million to the annual income of Negroes.

City, county and federal government agencies are pushing programs that parallel Dr. King's plans. Among them are rehabilitation of rundown apartment buildings through the new Chicago Dwellings Association, job training by the Cook County Welfare Department and teaching preschool children in the Head Start project of Office of Economic Opportunity.

The marchers plan to wind up their parade today by affixing a list of demands to a city hall door.

They are directed against discrimination and aimed at more economic and political power for Negroes, who represent one fourth of Chicago's population.

Among the demands:

—Precinct captain posts in political parties for Negroes to replace whites who have moved from the precincts.

—A state minimum wage law pegged to $2 an hour.

—No racial discrimination in listings by real estate brokers or mortgage making by financial institutions.

—More low-cost public housing on a scattered basis.

—Desegregation of public schools in the forthcoming school year.

—Racial head counts of people on public and business payrolls and in unions.

Mayor Richard J. Daley has arranged to meet Dr. King Monday to talk over the city's problems.

Among the speakers listed for today are Robert Johnston, regional director of the United Auto Workers Union, and Ralph Helstein, president of the United Packinghouse Workers.

More than 600 policemen have been assigned to the rally and march.

CORE In on Bogalusa Rights Trek

BOGALUSA, La. (UPI) — A Negro civil rights group begins a two-day, 20-mile protest trek from here to the Washington Parish (county) seat of Franklinton today to demonstrate what one rights leader termed "the need for black power in Louisiana."

"Black power," the new watchword for militants in the civil rights movement, was inserted into the protest movement Saturday by Lincoln Lynch, associate national director of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE). CORE recently adopted a "black power" approach to civil rights.

Lynch, speaking by telephone from New York, said he would join the march, which is sponsored by the Bogalusa Civic and voters League, a CORE affiliate.

The planned route is along Louisiana Highway 10, which winds through a virtually uninhabited stretch of pine woods hills close to the Mississippi boarder.

Mississippi Negroes List 51 'Open-City' Demands

GRENADA, Miss. (UPI)—Negro leaders listed 51 demands for an "open city" Saturday and asked local and county officials to reply by Monday.

The demands were presented by Hosea Williams, a top aide of Southern Christian Leadership Conference director Martin Luther King.

The list demanded first-class citizenship for Negroes in Grenada County and called for city and county governments to open for "full and equal participation by all of its citizens." Another SCLC worker, Leon Hall, said Negroes planned to try to desegregate at least six churches today.

The 51 demands were drawn up after it appeared that a civil rights campaign King launched here was stalled for lack of coordination among leaders and a scarcity of volunteers.

Williams issued a call for hundreds of volunteers to gather Saturday to test the compliance of local public accommodations with the civil rights law. Only 15 volunteers showed up, however, and even Williams was not present.

Brazil Soap Operas Bring Tavern Woes

GOIANIA, Brazil (AP) — Evening soap operas on television here have produced a third dimension of woe among the city's innkeepers, and they are begging for mercy. First the proprietors wondered where their old bar regulars had gone.

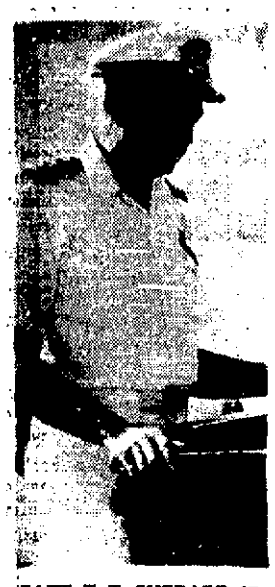

Now they have asked programmers to change time schedules of the evening "novels," as the soaps are called, and wonder if they can lure back the bar trade.

CAPT. T. T. SHEPARD JR.
New Princeton Skipper

Princeton Gets a New Skipper

A new commanding officer has taken over the Long Beach based amphibious assault carrier USS Princeton.

Capt. Tazewell T. Shepard Jr. relieved Capt. Thomas J. Gallagher Jr. in a sun-drenched shipboard ceremony in Cam Ranh Bay, Viet Nam.

Princeton left Long Beach on Feb. 16 and has been serving as the nucleus of the 7th Fleet's Amphibious Ready Group. She has participated in two highly successful amphibious landings this year—Jackstay and Osage.

Capt. Gallagher's next duty assignment is in Washington as project officer for the A-7, the Navy's latest attack airplane.

The new skipper came from Washington duty where he was a member of the Retention Task Force. Prior to that he was Naval aide to the late President John F. Kennedy from 1961 to 1964, and then commanded the fleet oiler USS Ancilla.

Calif. Policy on Tahoe Water Told

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California policy toward Lake Tahoe meets all federal requirements for protecting water quality in interstate waters, Gov. Brown's office said Saturday.

The governor sent a letter to U.S. Interior Secretary Stewart Udall outlining California's action under the 1965 Federal Water Polution Control Act.

Brown mentioned legislative-approved loans to Lake Tahoe areas for exporting sewage from the lake basin. The governor also said that Nevada is scheduled to hold hearings on pollution to consider standards developed by representatives of both states.

Aborigines Find Vein of Gemstones

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Two aboriginal pensioners at Norsemen, 450 miles east of Perth, have discovered a vein of opaline gemstones.

A missionary friend, Keith Stevenson, helped Peter and Eileen Flynn peg out a 20-acre claim and take some of the stones to a mining registrar.

"The find is one of the most promising I've ever seen," Stevenson said. "So far we have scratched only the surface, but the yield has been amazing.

"The stones are of the opaline type but there is every possibility we may come across a vein of pure opal."

The Flynns had been digging for the stones with their hands and primitive sticks. Stevenson supplied a shovel, mattock aand pick.

"I have no idea of the ultimate value, but the Flynns hope to make enough to buy a car and have plenty left to bank," Stevenson said.

He has promised to look after marketing, cutting, facetting and polishing details for them.

WILL HE ENDORSE REAGAN?

Kuchel Keeping Cool, Mum Under Increasing Pressure

By Baxter Omohundro
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Although he's the Republican on the hot spot in California's current political stew, Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel is maintaining his cool.

The state's senior senator has been under increasing pressure to lend his weight to the top GOP slate headed by gubernatorial nominee Ronald Reagan against the Democratic ticket headed by Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown.

Various Republican factions have been putting intense heat on Kuchel to get behind the ticket, but the senator and his top aides have kept behind a figurative asbestos curtain to quietly study the situatioin.

Most of the study is focused on what extent Kuchel, leader of the state GOP's moderate wing, might back Reagan, regarded as the darling of the right.

Kuchel's choices boil down to these three:

1. Remain completely mum or endorse only those candidates he is sure are within radar range of his political philosophy.

2. Back Reagan either by name or by blanket support of the entire top ticket.

3. Endorse Reagan and others on an issue-by-issue basis.

Hints that Kuchel is being wooed by the Democrats have been so firmly rejected by the senator as to rule out the possibility that he would bolt the party and endorse Brown.

The first alternative is most in keeping with

SEN. T. H. KUCHEL
On Hot Spot

Kuchel's practices of recent years. For example he withheld endorsement from Richard Nixon in the 1962 gubernatorial campaign and from Barry Goldwater and Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., in the 1964 political war.

Remaining mum, an attitude some partisans have wildly exaggerated as "stabs in the back," is regarded by Kuchel as entirely in keeping with a long California GOP tradition of personal independence. It was a hallmark of Kuchel's political godfathers, the late Sen. Hiram Johnson and U.S. Chief Justice Earl Warren, who held state office before the end of Cross-filing intensified partisanship.

The second alternative is that which most Republican leaders would like Kuchel to choose. The senator, who has always gotten strong bi-partisan backing in his races, could influence a possibly decisive number of voters.

The blanket endorsement approach was used by the state GOP House delegation last month, but only after moderate members averted a move to endorse Reagan by name. Nonetheless, it was an unprecedented action and one which has been held up to Kuchel as a wise example.

Endorsement on an issue - by - issue basis, a method rarely used, has been getting close examination by Kuchel and his aides.

This third alternative would have the advantage of maintaining the issue-oriented Kuchel's ideological integrity.

But it carries the pitfall of creating among inattentive voters the impression that Kuchel was behind Reagan in all respects when, in fact, he might have some strong reservations.

Kuchel undoubtedly would like to take one of the latter alternatives, if for no other reason that it likely would make the primary sledding easier if he runs for reelection in 1968.

However, the senator sees this as up to Reagan. Kuchel has been closely following Reagan pronouncements as the nominee works to moderate his image—a process expected to accelerate between now and the November general election.

Should Reagan come up with forthrightly moderate views on issues that are important to Kuchel—such as extremism and social legislation—then the senator could be expected to endorse him.

If not, mum's the word.

House Probe of Pollution Set July 20

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Even if used to the fullest extent, present technology could barely keep up with, let alone reduce, air and water pollution, a congressional advisory panel reported Saturday.

The report was released along with an announcement that the House Science and Astronautics Committee will begin hearings about July 20 on pollution abatement.

"At present we have no way to assess or to deal with some aspects of pollution," the advisory panel concluded. It posed questions which will be taken up at hearings of a subcommittee on science, research and development.

The report, presented to Rep. Emilio Q. Daddario, D-Conn., subcommittee chairman, launches a week of congressional action on so-called environmental pollution.

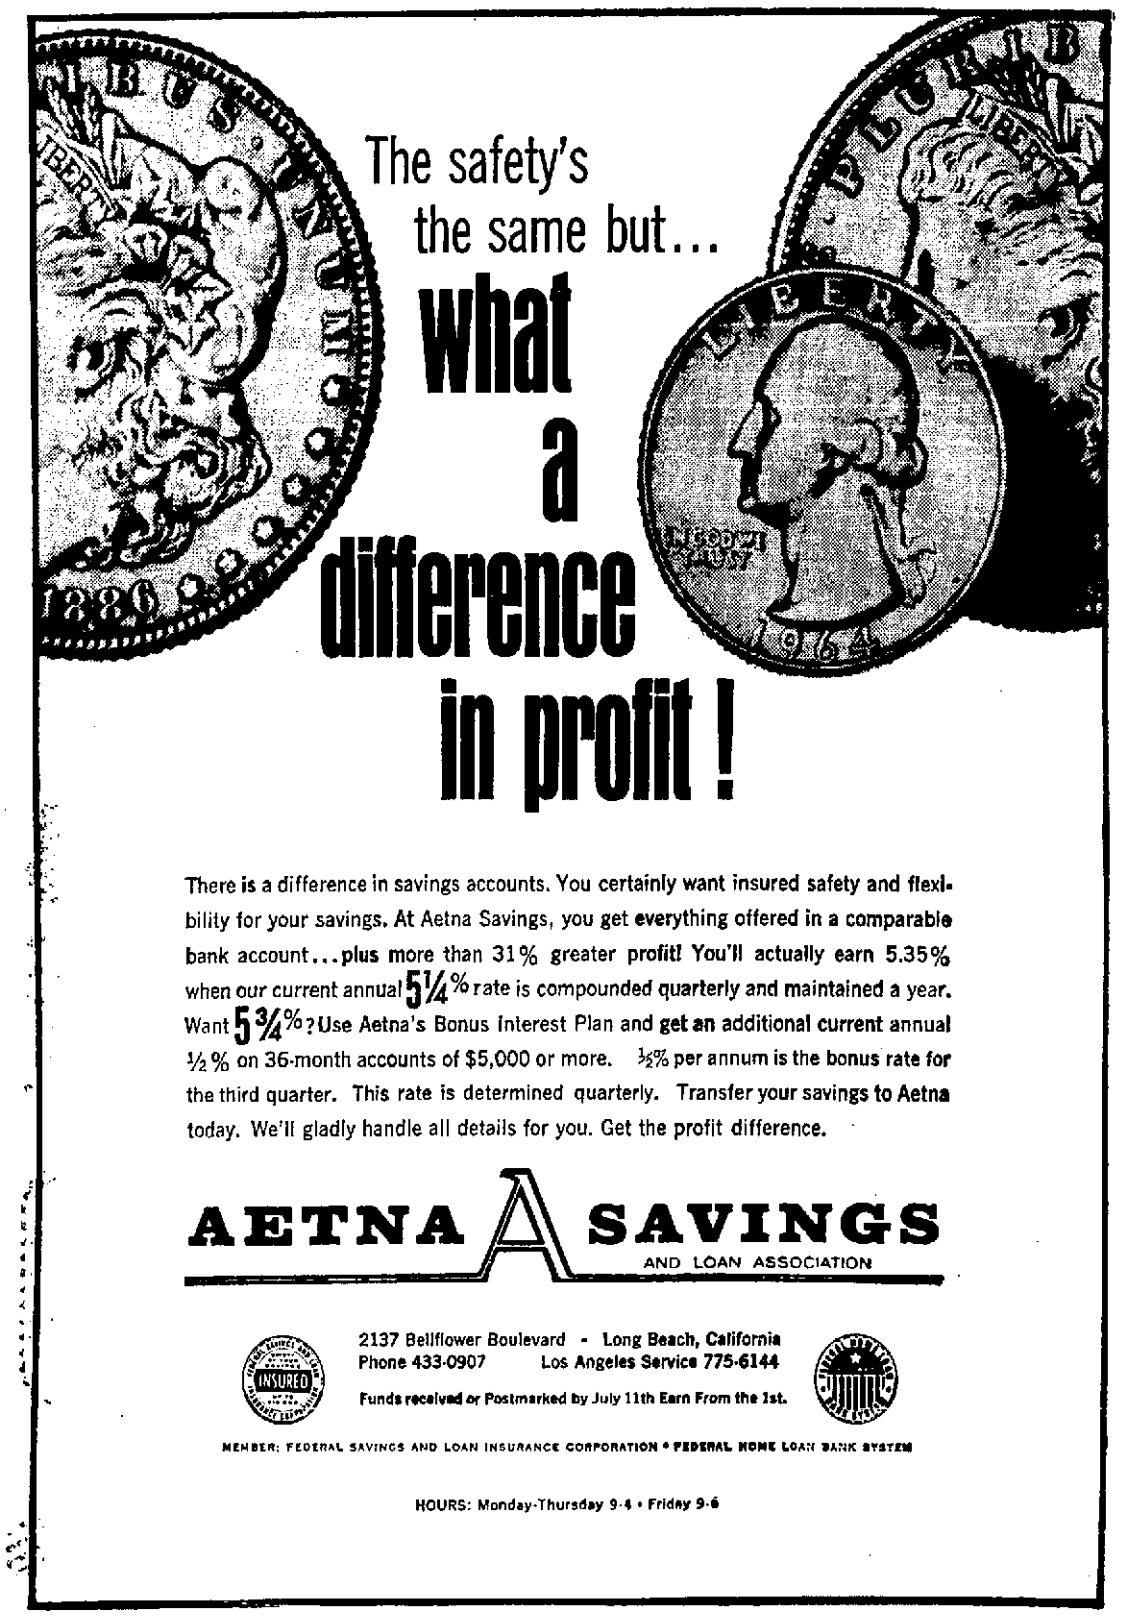

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie's pollution subcommittee will shortly report amendment calling for spending $6 billion over the next six years for pollution abatement. This will be the largest appropriation ever sought for clean water.

* * * *

WITH 48 SPONSORS, the measure is not expected to face much difficulty when it comes to the floor, probably on Tuesday. It does, however, totally disregard President Johnson's fiscal 1967 budget. Johnson sought only an additional $50 million to study proposed creation of a river basin control system.

Muskie's subcommittee also will report an air pollution bill calling for appropriation of $195 million over the next three years. This also is expected to come to the floor Tuesday.

On Wednesday, the House Public Works Committee is scheduled to begin its own pollution abatement hearings on a bill proposed by Rep. John A. Blatnik, D-Minn. This measure is a combination of the Muskie and administration proposals.

2 Klansmen Will Appeal Sentences

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI)—Two Ku Klux Klansmen named as trigger men in the 1964 Lemuel A. Penn nightrider slaying drew maximum 10-year federal prison terms, but said they will appeal at government expense. Conviction of Joseph Howard Sims, 43, and Cecil Myers, 26, marked the first time in modern Georgia history that a white man has been convicted under a federal civil rights statue. Both defendants previously had been acquitted in state courts.

Four others were acquitted Friday but one of them—Herbert Guest, 39—was sentenced Saturday to two years in prison for illegally dispensing "pep pills."

Gandhi-Kosygin Peace Talks

CAIRO (AP)—Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of India affirmed Saturday that she intends to discuss ways to end the war in Viet Nam with Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin when she goes to Moscow next week.

MRS. INDIRA GANDHI
Peace Bid to Kosygin

Mrs. Gandhi, in Cairo for a two-day visit, told a news conference that "I plan to discuss my point of view on Viet Nam with Premier Kosygin." It had been expected that the Viet Nam situation would arise during her talks with Soviet officials, but there had been no official confirmation.

In a television address to her people before she left home Thursday, Mrs. Gandhi urged an immediate reconvening of the 1954 Geneva conference on Viet Nam, to be followed by a cessation of hostilities on both sides, including U.S. bombing of North Viet Nam. She proposed a settlement based on withdrawal of all foreign troops from Viet Nam and guarantees of independence for Viet Nam, Laos and Cambodia.

Mrs. Gandhi said here that President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic was in "broad agreement" with her thinking on Viet Nam.

Communist China Saturday rejected Mrs. Gandhi's call for a Geneva peace conference on Viet Nam. It called for complete withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Viet Nam before holding such a conference.

Antiv-Poverty Report Cheers Johnson

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson got a cheering report on the antipoverty program and helped his prospective son-in-law observe his 23rd birthday. Johnson "expressed great pleasure" over what he heard from Sargent Shriver, overnight guest at the ranch, who urged Johnson to visit projects in urban and rural areas. The observance of Patrick J. Nugent's birthday was characterized as "just a quiet family gathering." Only last Saturday, Luci Johnson, who becomes Nugent's bride Aug. 6, turned 19 years of age.

Twisters, Rain Hit Sticky Midwest

CHICAGO (AP)—Twisters and thunderstorms churned over the hot and sticky Midwest, and heat records toppled in the middle Mississippi Valley. A tornado touched down near Chesterton, Ind., but damage was light. A 46-year-old postman, Walter V. Mellens, was killed by lighting on Chicago's south side. Winds whipped across a subdivision near Chicago's western suburb of Naperville, blowing out windows and damaging TV antennas and roofs. Heavy rain and half-inch hail hit Dubuque, Iowa. Storms also rumbled over lower Michigan and northern Indiana.

Rolvagg to Run—Without Party

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Gov. Rolvagg said he will file in the Minnesota primary in a bid for reelection despite failure to gain his Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party's endorsement. The DFL convention earlier endorsed Lt. Gov. A. M. Keith for the race. "Minnesotans historically have resisted letting any political clique decide who shall or shall not be governor," he said. "In recent weeks, thousands have written, wired, called and sought me out on the streets." He and his wife, Florence, made the decision at 2 a.m. after a telephone chat with Vice President Humphrey, still titutler head of the DFL Party.

Erhard Predicts Election Victory

BONN (UPI) — Chancellor Erhard and his Christian Democrats confidently predicted victory in today's elections in North Rhine-Westphalia, the nation's industrial heart, with 11 million voters. Since 1947 the Christian Democrats have been the largest party in the Landtag (state legislature.)

3 Critically Hurt in Alps Mishap

CHAMONIX, France (AP) — Three of the 18 persons injured when an aerial cableway plunged 30 yards onto a glacier in the Alps were reported in critical condition. Police said 13 of the injured were in the gondola that fell and the other in a gondola which was tossed about in the air but did not fall. Sixty-five other persons were stranded in the gondolas over Mont Blanc, Europe's highest peak.

200 Evacuated from Their Homes

BRAWLEY (UPI) — The first of 200 persons who evacuated their homes began returning Saturday as firemen conferred on how to decontaminate the toxic fumes from fire at a warehouse containing two tons of agricultural insecticide. Firemen said two youngsters playing nearby may have started the blaze. About 100 persons were treated at hospitals and released. The decontaminated insecticide is to be buried in the desert. Total loss could run as high as $209,000, firemen said.

Hoffa Plans 1967 Union Expansions

New York Times Service

MIAMI BEACH — James Hoffa said last week that in 1967 he will demand nationwide labor negotiations with leading grocery store chains and consolidated bargaining on a regional basis with big dairy companies.

The president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters says these will be the initial steps taken under the broad new authority he was given last week by the union's convention to pursue multi-area, companywide and nationwide labor contracts.

* * * *

HOFFA WAS granted the broader authority as part of his program to gather local unions dealing with the same company or industry into one set of negotiations in order to bring more pressure to bear on employers.

The union leader also disclosed that the Teamster exexutive board on Thursday set up a committee to meet with leading civil rights groups that he said have criticized the union for racial discrimination and demanded that it set aside specific quotas of various jobs for Negroes.

Hoffa observed that these committee, denied that the union practiced discrimination and asserted that he would not agree to impose job quotas on a racial basis.

* * * *

HE SAID it would be no more logical to impose job quotas for Negroes than it would be for Italians, or any other ethnic group. Quotas would "create discrimination" by barring qualified people from jobs on racial grounds, he added.

The Teamster president expressed his views in an interview in his office at the Fountainbleau Hotel here the day after he had been re-elected at the convention's closing session to a five-year term as president of the 1.7-million-member union.

Hoffa said that the duties of Frank Fitzsimmons, elected to the new office of Teamster general vice president, would remain unchanged from what they were when he was vice president from Detroit.

Fitzsimmons will be given "authority to sign documents," such as legal and financial papers, on the union's behalf, Hoffa said. But he will remain based in Detroit and use the international office there, the president added.

* * * *

HOFFA WILL make a 1967 drive for broader-based negotiations under a constitutional amendment approved by the convention that gives him authority to set up multi-area, companywide negotiations for national bargaining where he can get a majority of locals to go alog.

He has had some authority in this area for several years and has used it to introduce national negotiations in freight trucking and some other industries.

possible consequences of such actions rests fully with the United States government," the note stated.

From first reports, the tone of the Soviet protest note appeared to be relatively restrained and the least belligerent that Mossow could send under the circumstances. The vague charge of "responsibility" for all "consequences" of an international situation has traditionally been the mildest form of Soviet protest.

* * * *

ACCORDING to the protest, three Soviet merchant ships, the Kuibyshev, Sovietsk and Ustilug, were at Haiphong at noon last Thursday when "strafing of the Haiphong mooring places by American planes" took place.

"Fragments and machine gun fire struck in close proximity to the Soviet merchant ships," the note said.

Four hours later planes dropped a number of big metal objects around the motorship Komsomol lying at anchor in Ha Long Bay, which had they hit the ship could have seriously damaged it."

The presence of Soviet shipping at Haiphong, the principal port of North Viet Nam, is believed to have been a major inhibiting factor for American military planners considering attack on the city or port installations.

Any direct damage caused to Soviet vessels or injuries to Soviet personnel would, in effect, produce a direct confrontation between the U.S. and the Soviet Union in Viet Nam military action.

* * * *

THE JULY 7 raid referred to in the Soviet note was the second attack in the Haiphong area since the initial bombardment of the fuel depot near the port on June 29.

It was officially stated in Washington that no Soviet ships were moored at Haiphong during the first attack. After last Thursday's raid American pilots reportedly sighted three ships in outer Haiphong Harbor but none along the mooring near the target area, the oil storage depot.

Much of the Soviet materiel and military goods supplied for the North Vietnamese war effort is believed to arrive by Soviet ships through Haiphong. There have been frequent and regular reports, always denied by Communist China, that Soviet attempts to send supplies to Hanoi by rail have been impeded during the transit across Chinese territory.

* * * *

DIPLOMATIC analysts have reasoned that the Chinese would logically wish to encourage the Russians to ship their aid supplies by sea, for the specific reason that an armed confrontation with the U.S. might thereby be provoked.

Earlier in Tokyo, Rusk called the U.S. bombings of Hanoi and Haiphong oil depots a direct response to increased North Vietnamese aggression in South Viet Nam.

The Secretary of State said that in the Far East "the governments out there fully understand what is going on in Southeast Asia."

And throughout Asia he noted "a deep mistrust and fear of Hanoi and Peking."

LT. GEN. THI
Onetime 'Warlord'

Viet Nam Fires 5 Generals

By R. W. APPLE JR.
New York Times Service

SAIGON—A South Vietnamese military tribunal Saturday dismissed from the army five generals who aided the Buddhist-led antigovernment campaign earlier this year.

The generals were also sentenced to 60 days detention each. Two of them—Lt. Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi and Lt. Gen. Ton That Dinh—were ordered to spend their terms in prison. The others will remain under house arrest.

Four of the officers were former commanders of the I Army Corps, composed of the five northern provinces where Buddhist agitation was most severe. The fifth was a former commander of the 1st Infantry Division, which is based at Hue.

Air Vice Marshal Nguyen Cao Ky, the premier, and Lt. Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu, the chief of state, were members of the tribunal. It met secretly for two days at the general staff headquarters near Tansonnhui Airport outside Saigon.

POLITICAL observers interpreted the action as another indication that the government, having put down dissidence in Da Nang, Hue and Saigon, was growing increasingly sure of itself. The observers said the sentences were relatively lenient.

The generals involved were:

Thi, a 39-year-old paratrooper whose dismissal as I Corps commander on March 10 on charges of "warlordism" started the political crisis.

Brig. Gen. Nguyen Van Chuan, who succeeded Thi, but was himself replaced when he failed to move against the Buddhists in Da Nang as quickly as the government wished.

Dinh, a 37-year-old infantry officer, who led the late Premier Ngo Dinh Diem's raid on Buddhist pagodas in August, 1963. He succeeded Chuan, was relieved when the government sent troops to pacify Da Nang, and fled to Hue to join the dissidents there.

Maj. Gen. Huynh Van Cao, who succeeded Dinh, but took refuge in an American headquarters at Da Nang after a dispute with the government over anti-Buddhist tactics.

U.S. Strikes 4 More Red Fuel Depots

SAIGON (AP)—The United States announced today strikes at four more of North Viet Nam's oil installations in the aerial drive to wipe out enemy fuel reserves.

A fuel tank factory 31 miles north of Saigon was among other targets in 75 missions flown over the Communist north by U.S. jets today.

Briefing officers said one plane, an Air Force F105 Thunderchief, had been shot down. Antiaircraft gunners got it 40 miles north of Hanoi, and the pilot was listed as missing. This was the 283rd plane acknowledged lost in the 17-month-old campaign north of the border.

The Communists were reported dispersing remaining fuel supplies into the middle of villages to give them human shields.

Sources say Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara was told of this development in his Honolulu meeting with the U.S. Pacific high command.

Meanwhile, North Viet Nam's news agency says two more captive U.S. pilots have "admitted their crimes" and asked forgiveness for raiding that country.

A broadcast dispatch identifies them as Lt. Cmdr. Cole Black of Lake City, Minn., and Capt. Bruce Seber of Kansas (no home town given).

Ho Chi Minh's Communist government has been hinting captured fliers may be tried on war crimes charges.

McNamara War Report

Honolulu saying that the Viet Cong had been kept from mounting a monsoon season offensive while their North Vietnamese allies were suffering weariness and an "erosion of morale."

HOWEVER, neither the secretary nor anyone else here had any sign that North Viet Nam planned soon to sue for peace or negotiations or that it was moving to curb its military activities.

The persistent administration declarations of optimism, therefore, are not based on hopes of an early peace. Rather, they are interpreted here as having a double purpose.

One is to reinforce the psychological pressure upon North Viet Nam in the wake of the bombings of oil depots at Hanoi and Haiphong. The second is to persuade Americans that the war has reached a turning point.

BY BLUNTING the criticism at home officials are said to seek not only political advantage but a further demonstration to Hanoi that it cannot count upon domestic opposition to inhibit the American war effort.

President Johnson has personally led the campaign, forcefully pleading to defend South Viet Nam at any cost and taking heart from reports that Hanoi is having second thoughts about its chances against the American war machine.

Other high officials have reiterated the theme, supplying long lists of reasons why the North Vietnamese ought to feel depressed and discouraged. The officials have pointed to vague diplomatic reports about the mood of gloom in Hanoi. They have pointed to the ineffectiveness of Soviet air defenses against American air raids and to the apparent unwillingness of Communist China to come directly to Hanoi's assistance at this stage.

Red China Purges Propaganda Chief

TOKYO, Sunday (AP) — Red China disclosed today the ouster of propaganda chief Lu Ting-I, the second - highest ranking victim of the current purge.

Lu, 62, was replaced as head of the propaganda department of the Communist Party's central committee, the Agency (NCNA) said.

It did not say whether he also lost his other jobs as culture minister and one of China's 16 vice premiers but observers said he was expected to lose these posts as well.

The highest ranking victim of the purge so far was once-powerful Peking Mayor Peng Chen, who was sacked last month as first secretary of the Peking Municipal Communist Party committee.

Observers said Lu was expected to lose his other posts, in view of the recent sacking of two of his chief aides—Vice Ministers of Culture Lin Mo-Han and Chou Yang.

These two and Shao Chuan-Lin, a writer, were accused by the party's theoretical journal, Red Flag, of turning the Culture Ministry into "a ministry of emperors, kings, generals, ministers, scholars and beauties." Red Flag accused it of distributing "reactionary capitalist, feudal and revisionist literature and art."

LBJ Weighing Town, Country Poverty Tour

By AVLIN SPIVAK
United Press International

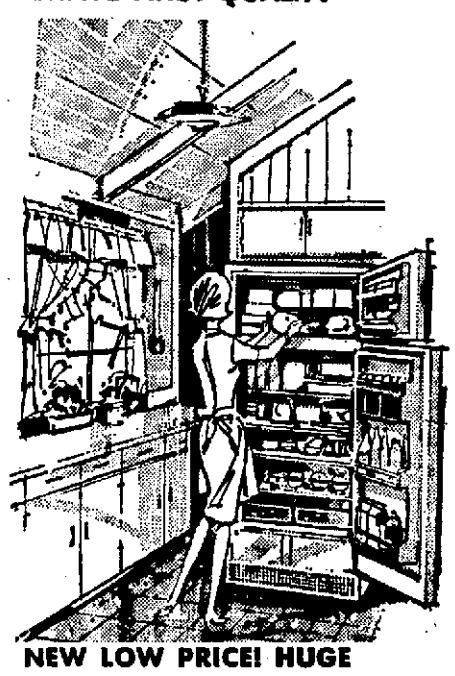

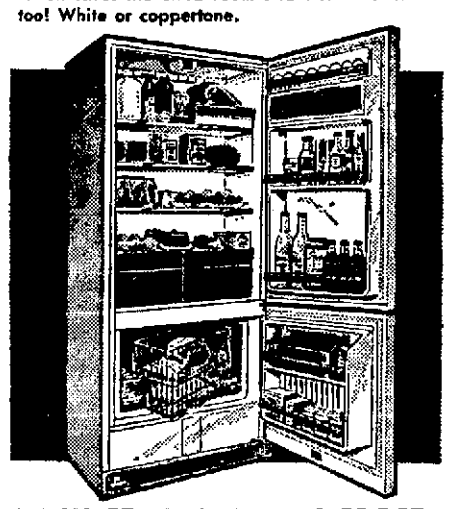

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI)—President Johnson, who has talked of visiting all 50 states before the November elections, is considering a tour of urban and rural areas as part of his travels.

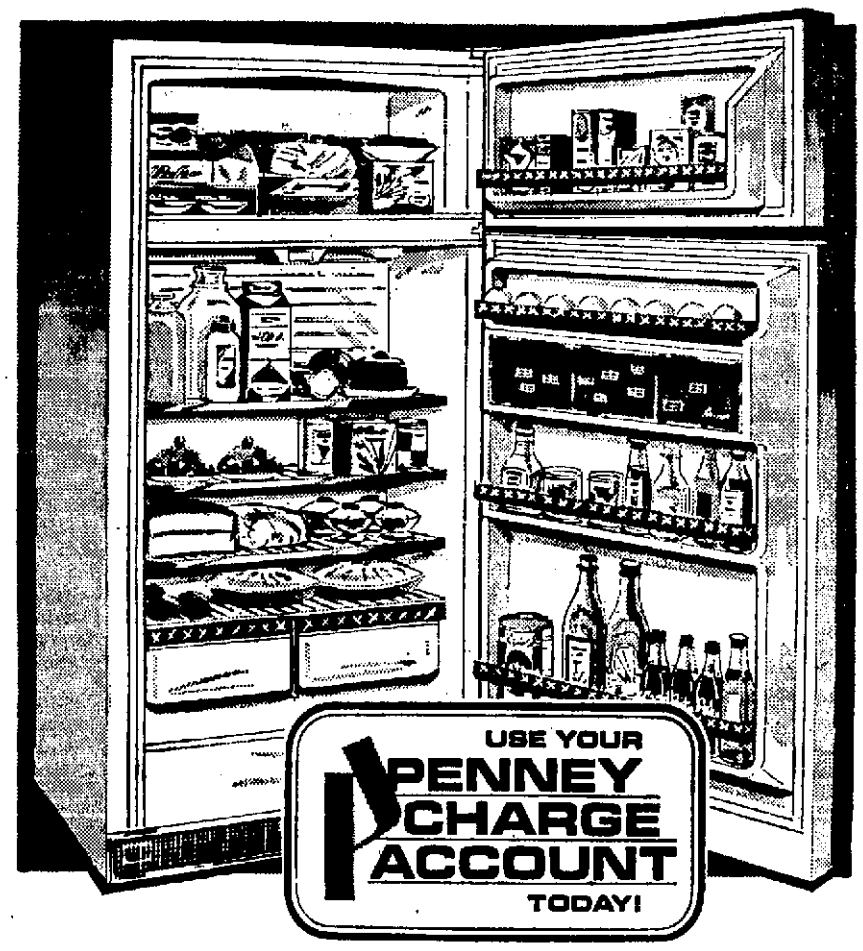

Sargent Shriver, director of the Office of Economic Opportunity, made the suggestion to Johnson at the President's Texas Ranch Saturday while reporting to him on progress of the war against poverty. Shriver said it was progressing well, the Texas White House announced, and Johnson "expressed his great pleasure."

'Tin Goose' Basis of This Airline

By STEPHEN H. MILLER

PORT CLINTON, Ohio (AP)—While most airlines boast of sleek jetliners, the "tin goose" of the 1920s keeps Port Clinton's Island Airlines aloft and thriving.

The airline's two 1929 Ford tri-motors, with their blunt snouts and corrugated metal skins, are familiar sights in this community, where the planes provide year-round mail and passenger service to nearby islands in Lake Erie.

Airline President Ralph Dietrich, whose planes carried 55,000 passengers last year, is bringing home a third tri-motor next week. It is being refurbished in Tucson, Ariz.

The new plane will make Island Airlines the nation's largest owner of tri-motors. There are only 10 in flyable condition in the country.

* * * *

DIETRICH BOUGHT his latest tri-motor from the San Luis Mining Co., in Mazatlan, Mexico, early this year. He found it while on a trip to hunt parts for the other tri-motors.

"I knew there was a tri-motor in Mexico somewhere," he says, "and just by chance happened to land at the right airport."

His new Ford 5AT-B will be the heaviest, biggest and fastest of the line's tri-motors, carrying 23 passengers at a top speed of 115 mph.

The planes are a big nostalgic attraction, said Dietrich, but that isn't why he uses them.

"They're good short-distance airplanes. They get in short, get out short and carry almost their own weight in payload.

There's never been one cracked up due to structural failure."

Dietrich's airline has flown for 35 years without losing a plane or passenger.

* * * *

DILIGENT SEARCHING over the years has licked the problem of finding parts for the 38-year-old airliners. Dietrich has 50 extra engines, enough corrugated metal to reskin all his planes, and "more spare parts than we'll ever use in my lifetime."

The line's tri-motors, and a 1932 Boeing 247D, fly from Port Clinton to South Bass, Middle Bass, North Bass and Rattlesnake islands. Their longest flight is a nine-mile jump to Put-In-Bay on South Bass.

"We could run our whole operation within the hangar line at Kennedy International Airport," says Dietrich.

GOP Unit Asks Social Security Escalation

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Republican Coordinating Committee Saturday proposed automatic cost-of-living increases for Social Security and railroad retirement act pensioners.

In a 10-point program titled "A Republican Approach to the Needs of the Aging," it also called for steps to make Medicare more helpful, to provide jobs for the pensioners, and allow them to ern more than $1,500 a year without forfeiting part or all of their Social Security benefits.

The recommendations were adopted at a committee meeting here as the party prepared to plunge into the 1966 election campaign.

* * * *

"WHY SHOULD aged pensioners continue to suffer while runaway inflation further destroys the purchasing power of the pension dollar?" the committee asked.

It said that despite a 7% raise in Social Security benefits last year, inflation had cut the purchasing power of the pension dollar below 1954-58.

"Inflation has swept in upon us because of the policies of the Johnson-Humphrey administration and its controlled congress," the committee said. "Inflation steals from everyone, young and old alike, but hurts especially those elderly who live on pensions and other fixed incomes."

The committee would tie the pension hikes to the cost of living by amending the Social Security and railroad retirement acts.

As to Medicare, it said existing programs should be supplemented with "services and facilities as may be necessary to care adequately for the health of our elderly citizens."

It proposed construction of new facilities under existing laws and better use of present authority to provide more nurses, physicians, health technicians and other needed manpower.

* * * *

THE COMMITTEE said that although Medicare became law almost a year ago "the administration has failed tragically to prepare for start of the program." It added that "hardly more than 20% of the nursing homes of the country are equipped to care for the elderly under the nursing home feature of Medicare, which goes into effect Jan. 1."

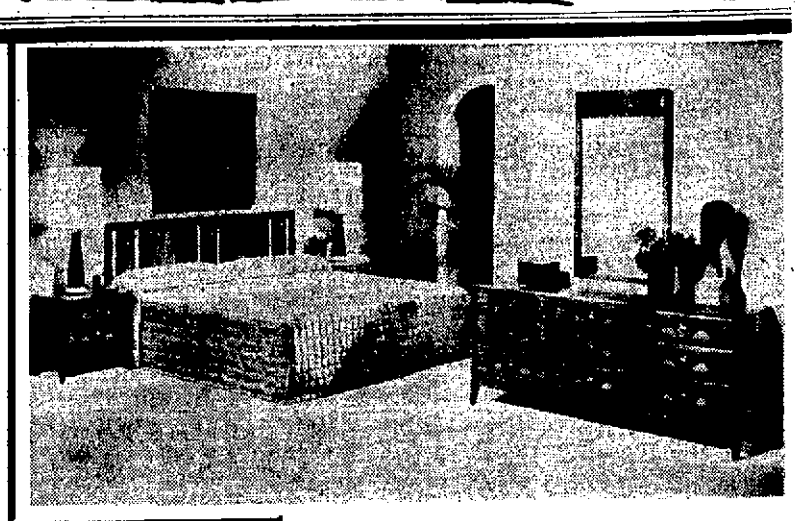

In its other recommendations, the committee called on the states to see that old age assistance grants are enough to meet the basic needs o the elderly; that coverage of private pension plans are encouraged, and the government housing programs for oldsters be reappraised "to assure that they are serving the people they were intended to serve and doing the things they were intended to accomplish."

WITH demonstration marches apparently figured as the best way of expressing sentiment nowadays, a bizarre idea occurs to me.

How come the disappointed bettors at Hollywood Park and other hoss-racing centers haven't taken up this form of showing their displeasure?

After one of those races when the form nags run out and a longshot wins, a majority of the spectators, being on the losing side, are pretty sad if not downright sore.

When people are sad and sore, they're supposed to march in protest. The losers at the park could stage a heckuva demonstration.

They do boo a little at the losing jockeys.

Then they start a march, but it's not a protest. It leads to the seller's windows for tickets on the next race. Hope springs eternal. . .

---

ALL OF which leads me to a little matter I probably shouldn't mention, and I wouldn't if it weren't a promotion item for our sports dept.

Hosting some out-of-town relatives at Hollywood, I was hopeful I could show off some big-time know-how about the horses. When it came to the seventh race, I looked over our handicap—the one authored by Roy Betz—and noted that he picked an entry named "High Perch" as the longshot.

Nowhere else could I find favorable mention of High Perch, but I decided to risk a $2 bet. High Perch stole the race at the wire and paid $131 for the two. That made me a real smart fella in the eyes of my guests, and for that I must thank, and recommend, Roy Betz.

Note to creditors: Please don't get any ideas. I didn't do well at all on the other races. After them I'd have gladly joined a riot.

WHILE back a reader asked about the initials ACY on a freight car. I guess everybody in town, except he and I, knew they stand for Akron, Canton and Youngstown. Helpful notes have poured in.

Roberta Wakefield adds an interesting touch by saying the letters, for her, stand for nostalgia. "I have walked its rails and picked wild strawberries. . . My first math lesson was counting the cars. . . The whistle always blew opposite our farmhouse. . ." You never know what an item here may develop.

One expert says the ACY is 169 miles long, another avers it's only 17. D.R. Smith says it handles freight only between Mogadore and Delphos, O. Smith's a railroad man and ought to know.

AND ABOUT railroads, Sterling Bemis was up in Mother Lode country and came upon one you may not have heard about.

It's 10 miles long and runs between the pioneer mining town of Jackson, Calif., and the S.P. main line and boasts —or did at one time—the fancy moniker, "Amador Central." It mainly carries lumber.

On Jackson's main drag Bemis struck up a conversation with a thin, aging citizen whose appearance indicated his dreams of gold hadn't panned out.

"Shorty over there," said the oldster, pointing to another man who looked much like him, "helped drive the spikes for the Amador Central half a century ago.

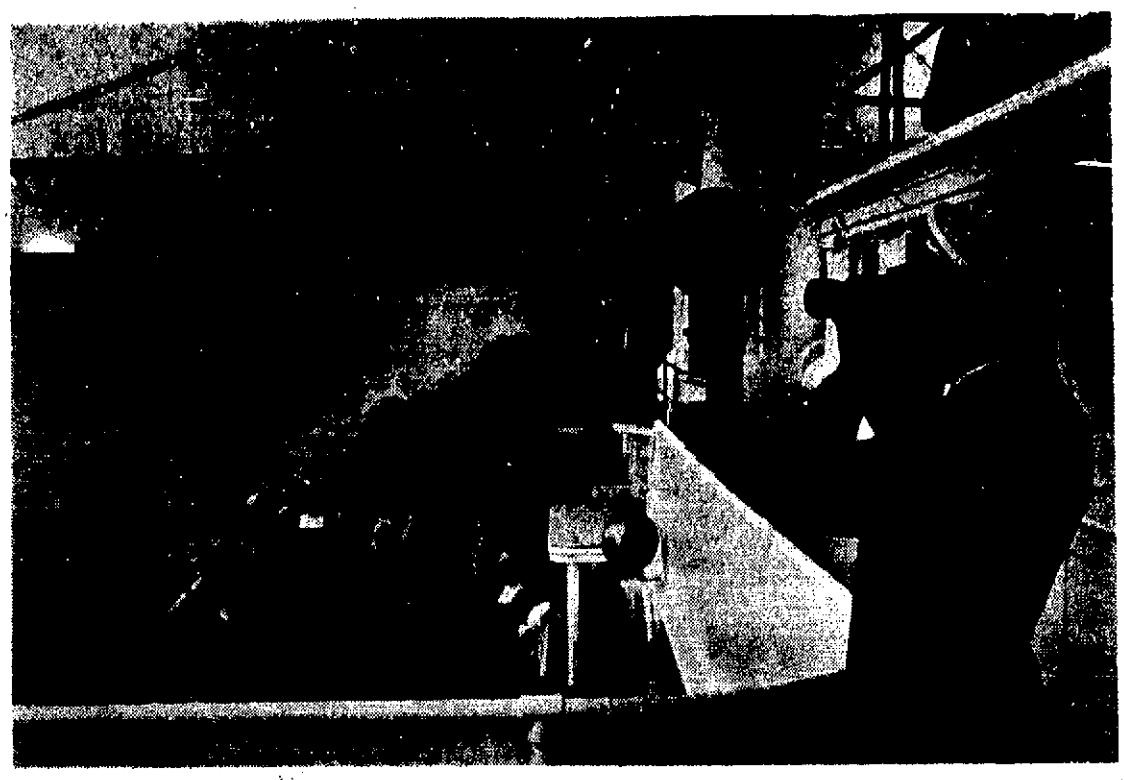

"The fellow who ran the Amador Central in its heyday asked the Southern Pacific to give him pass privileges. The S.P. refused. This made the Amador boss sore and he wrote the S.P. president' "My railroad may not be as long as your railroad, but by gee, it's just as wide."

Atty. Walter Desmond, one of my informants about the ACY, tells me that the same quip was often used in reference to that Ohio line.

Apparently, it's a favorite with short line defenders. But it couldn't be applied to one type of pioneer line—the narrow gaugers. They weren't as wide, either, as main line railroads.

Moonlight cruising to Catalina can turn out to be a hard day's night's play.

Everybody on the way over is a' go-go!

On the way back everybody is a' sleep-sleep.

This was the routine when the S.S. Catalina, "the Big White Steamer" made its summertime maiden "Moonlight Cruise" to the offshore vacationland on July 2.

Although the seas were calm, the ship was rockin' and a-rollin' from the first note of the ship's high spirited four-piece combo. Some of the younger set "swimmed" all the way over without getting any closer to the water than the fun deck.

As the more energetic frugged and jerked their way across the channel to Avalon, the older people on board (25 and over) waited for the band to play something a little more sedate.

Popular was "Moonlight on the Wabash" renamed "Moonlight on San Pedro Channel" especially for the occasion.

While operators of the Big White Steamer won't go so far as to promise a full moon every week, they say the hour and forty-five minute moonlight cruises will continue each Saturday night through July and August.

The steamer departs at 7:45 p.m. from the all-new Catalina Terminal located beneath the mainland side of the Vincent Thomas Bridge. It leaves Avalon at 12:45 a.m.

Bonus Suit Hearing Slated

A full hearing on a suit by county social workers to force the Board of Supervisors to void a so-called "strikebreakers bonus" has been scheduled in Superior Court for Aug. 12.

The board voted the two-week, 11% temporary pay increase for Bureau of Public Assistance employes who stayed on the job during the recent social workers strike.

Judge Ralph H. Nutter delayed the hearing after Asst. County Counsel Edward H. Gaylord told him the non-strikers should have an opportunity to defend their bonuses.

Local 535 of the Social Workers Union brought the suit, which also asked that the court order supervisors to enter into a collective bargaining contract — a move the county claims is illegal.

* * * *

ATTY. LEO GEFFNER, representing the union, said the striking social workers returned to their jobs after Supt. of Charities William A. Barr wrote a letter promising strikers and non-strikers would be treated equally and "without prejudice."

The county supervisors subsequently enacted the bonus pay raise, which touched off a second, but briefer walkout.

Meanwhile, County Auditor Roscue Hollinger reported the so-called "bonus" paychecks — averaging $16 to $45 per employe —would not be distributed with today's regular payroll.

Hollinger said his office had been swamped with extra payroll problems because of the social workers' strike and a one-day walkout later in the month by welfare clerks.

As a result, he said, the bonus payments will be processed separately sometime this week.

SALE OF INDUSTRIAL SUBDIVISIONS A BIG SUCCESS

L.B. Water Agency Land-Poor

By GEORGE WEEKS

Long Beach's Municipal Water Department, which 20 years ago controlled some 1,037 acres, is running out of land.

One reason is the strong success of the department's development and sale of industrial subdivisions during the last five years. The program has produced some $2.7 million for department budgeting in lieu of higher water rates.

Of the two principal tracts known collectively as Airport Industrial Park, all 19 lots have been sold in one 30-acre subdivision south of the San Diego Freeway between Redondo and Temple Avenues.

In the second tract, encompassing 34½ acres north of the freeway in the same area, only five of 24 lots remain unsold. Two are within the flight pattern of an airport runway. The three others are occupied by two warehouse buildings soon to be replaced.

* * * *

DEMAND HAS BEEN almost equally strong in five other subdivisions embracing 35 acres with 41 lots, according to Harold C. Levy, the Water Department's land and leases manager.

Only one sizable area is still available for early development, Levy said. It consists of 40 acres on the south side of Spring Street between California and Orange Avenues. Now the site of old oil wells, it is being reclaimed for industrial use.

A three-acre parcel east of the Union Pacific Railroad and south of Wardlow Road is being filled in preparation for development. But current plans, Levy said, call for its use mainly as a rail freight switching center for joint use of many industries.

So-called Water Department land—actually owned by the city but under jurisdiction of the Board of Water Commissioners—began shrinking long before the industrial development program.

* * * *

OF THE ORIGINAL 1,037 acres, various parcels totaling 880 acres were turned over to the general city government for specified municipal uses dating back to the 1940's.

More than half, some 470 acres, is included in the Long Beach Airport. Park purposes now occupy 133 acres, upland oil sites account for 126 acres and recreation uses total 63 acres. The police honor farm encompasses almost 25 acres, and other city uses cover a variety of purposes from a public library to the animal shelter.

Water commissioners established the general policy of selling rather than leasing properties not needed by the city, on the theory that the land should be returned to the tax rolls. But in all cases they retained water and oil rights for the city.

* * * *

LEVY GAVE THIS summary of the five other industrial tracts:

Nine acres with nine lots on the west side of Cherry Avenue at 33rd Street: Five lots sold, three occupied by city facilities, one used by a service station under an old lease.

Twelve acres with 13 lots on the east side of Cherry Avenue from Wardlow Road to 32nd Street: All sold except three, of which one is an oil well drill site, another a water well site and the third leased for an oil well supply service.

Four acres with six lots on north side of Spring Street east of Cherry Avenue: All lots sold.

Two acres with eight lots at southwest corner of Spring Street and Temple Avenue: All lots sold.

Eight acres with five lots north of Spring Street and west of Orange Avenue: Three of lots sold, another is an oil well site and another is encumbered with a pipeline easement now being removed.

L.B. Doctor to Describe 'Anti-Rh Baby' Technique

By BEN ZINSER

Medical-Science Editor

A research project involving more than 250 Long Beach area women, largest scientific study of its kind in the United States, will be described for European physicians in coming weeks by a Long Beach doctor.

Dr. E. R. Jennings, director of the pathology department at Memorial Hospital, will report that research to date indicates injections of a blood product into women may protect subsequent offspring against a dangerous blood disorder.

Dr. Jennings will report to the department of obstetrics at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, July 15, and to hematologists at the University of Munich, Germany, on July 26.

* * * *

HE WILL describe a technique aimed at warding off the possibility of birth of "Rh babies." It calls for injection of a specially-prepared blood factor, gamma globulin, into a mother soon after delivery of her baby.

Doctors hope that this blood product, called anti-Rh serum, will destroy all incompatible fetal red blood cells that may have entered the maternal circulation.

If the method works, it will prevent development of antibodies that could prove potentially lethal to subsequent babies.

The problem arises when a mother has Rh negative blood and the father is Rh positive.

If Rh positive cells, from a fetus, get into the mother's circulation, she may become sensitized, and a second or still-later baby thus becomes vulnerable to a blood-destroying disease. The disorder is known as hemolytic disease of the newborn or erythroblastosis fetalis.

* * * *

PARTICIPATING with Memorial in the project are St. Mary's Hospital and Long Beach Community Hospital.

Similar studies are underway in Baltimore, New York City, Winnipeg, Liverpool and Edinburgh.

The Long Beach study is the largest in the United States, Dr. Jennings said.

Each week, information on inoculated mothers is sent to Prof. Luis F. Nanni, professor of statistics of the department of engineering at Rutgers University, for analysis.

A report on the project for the medical profession in the United States is in the July issue of the American Journal of Clinical Pathology, Dr. Jennings said.

* * * *

FOURTEEN women who were inoculated with anti-Rh serum now are pregnant again, and doctors are anxiously waiting to see if the injections will protect the new offspring against blood disease.

The research in Long Beach is being supported with funds from the Children's Memorial Hospital Auxiliary and the National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Md. The later is the research arm of the U.S. Public Health Service.

Unruh Gives Big Boost to Transit

THANKS MAINLY to Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh the Legislature in its closing hours finally recognized the importance of mass rapid transit in the Los Angeles basin by providing funds to get a system started.

Largely through the persuasive efforts of Unruh, D-Inglewood, $3.9 million in tidelands oil funds was granted to the Southern California Rapid Transit District for planning an $800 million four-corridor transit system running from Long Beach to the San Fernando Valley and from Santa Monica to El Monte.

The grant was passed as an amendment to a bill setting up tidelands funds (mainly from the Long Beach oil fields) for water and education use. Authored by Assemblyman Robert Stevens, R-Santa Monica, the amendment for the first time acknowledges that the state has a financial obligation to assist transit.

IN HIS SUPPORT of the amendment Unruh pressed the argument that transit is a state problem, that much of the economic health of the state—and the state government itself—depends upon good transportation.

The funds are split into two parts. First is a flat $3 million from tidelands oil money available this year. Second is a $900,000 loan from state motor vehicle funds (to be repaid from oil revenue). Of this portion $700,000 already has been appropriated in the budget signed several days ago by Gov. Edmund Brown.

The governor has stated that he will sign the new bill for the whole grant but he added that he didn't want to make any commitments for future use of tidelands oil revenues for transit.

Hopefully this does not mean that he has taken a hard stand against use of state funds to assist in constructing a transit system in Southern California.

It should be noted, as Unruh did in his arguments to the Legislature, that there is ample precedent for using state money since the state already has given some $160 million in toll bridge money to San Francisco for its transit program.

The signing of the new bill by the governor will speed up transit planning here by at least a year, possibly more. Previously transit district directors have asked and received legislation permitting the County Board of Supervisors to levy a tax to raise the planning funds. The supervisors, however, have been reluctant to do so and indicated they would put the issue on the ballot. If (and it's a big if) voter approval had been forthcoming no funds could have been secured until the 1967-68 budget.

THERE IS STILL one big hurdle to get over before transit can start to become a reality. That is to raise the $800 million for construction.

Unruh took note of this, too, by saying that he feels the state will have to go into major financing problems next year. He indicated that he would not only support construction money for Southern California but is willing to look into additional financing for the San Francisco system.

It should be apparent to any thoughtful student of government and public financing that it would be impossible to get an $800 million bond issue against property approved by voters. However, with adequate state assistance, it would be entirely possible to gain voter approval for a lesser amount—providing the burden is spread over a number of tax sources, not just property.

IN THIS REGARD, it should be remembered that the whole $800 million cost of construction would not have to come from taxes. A large portion of it—considerably more than half—would come from fare box revenues after the system is operating.

There is much work yet to be done. But thanks to the leadership of Speaker Unruh the day when transit can begin to help our area is much closer.

Some Convicts Could Serve

IN SEATTLE a youth stole a car radio in the hope that a conviction would free him from the draft. But many convicts would join the armed forces in a minute —if they could.

America holds that its warriors must be men of untarnished honor. War, the military maintains, is the duty of good citizens.

By and large, the rule is probably right, but everyone makes mistakes and some mistakes land essentially good men in prison. With the psychological screening that exists today it would be possible to find those convicts who would adapt to the discipline and who would be discharged to become good citizens.

The French Foreign Legion was made up mostly of men who "were on the lam" from something. The legion maintained discipline and fought well.

If selected convicts were permitted to volunteer, it should shame the draft-card burners.

Governors 'Allergic' to Headlines

"HUMAN BEINGS," said Erwin D. Canham, editor in chief of the Christian Science Monitor—and he apparently included newsmen — "can't be totally objective."

But they can be, he continued, honest, fair and detached. He said good news reporting also requires

BOB HOUSER

"analytical perspective," the incorporation of pertinent and relevant auxillary facts, because "bare facts are often misleading."

Canham said these things while moderating a panel on news media responsibilities at last week's National Governors' Conference in Los Angeles.

Governors burst into applause at another Canham statement, "I think sometimes that headlines ought to be abolished." Later in a question session, several governors complained of the misimpressions created by headlines.

They were critical also of what they considered news pre-occupation with the unusual, the exciting, the dramatic and bizarre stories to the exclusion of "more worthwhile" news.

PANELISTS ARGUED that "good news" is generally no news at all. And Canham said a major problem is "getting entry into the human mind." He agreed that a real challenge to writers is to present less exciting, but important, news in a more interesting manner.

Some of the newsmen insisted the public isn't ready for as much serious news as the governors would prescribe. They pointed out that an interruption of TV's "Batman" program for news of trouble with Gemini 8 brought thousands of howls of protest to ABC.

William H. Lawrence, ABC newsman, pointed out that CBS really caught hell when it canceled one of its "Lost in Space" science fiction shows to tell America about some people who were REALLY lost in space.

Gov. John A. Love, R-Colo., considered headlines to be "more irresponsible than any other form of reporting." Canham admitted that there's little to be said for "headlines" but reminded that head writers are required to present "a striking, arresting fact."

And James Flinchum, of Cheyenne Newspapers, Inc., suggested to governors they might be a little bit more lenient with head writers if they had ever tried to headline a complex story in six words.

REPORTAGE of Barry Goldwater's presidential run was presented as a case in which "analytical perspective" was a real challenge.

Lawrence asserted, answering a challenge, that Goldwater was not badly reported, adding, "Barry Goldwater's trouble was that he was reported too accurately. . . . If he had a bad press, he made it so."

Canham asked if this were not a case in point of bare facts often being misleading. Goldwater was "hard to report," Canham said. "You could take him too literally."

Lawrence agreed that if you could have taken Goldwater aside after one of his "hip-shooting" statements and asked him if he "really wanted to go to war over the water incident at Guantanamo, he would have said no."

Pressure Increasing on Sen. Kuchel That He Back Reagan for Governor

WASHINGTON (NEA)—Even some of his best friends and admirers are telling Republican Sen. Thomas Kuchel of California that he'll be in deep political trouble if he does not endorse Ronald Reagan, the GOP nominee for governor.

Unlike scalp-hunting right-wingers who obviously hope Kuchel's difficulties increase, these people — who include many of the party's seasoned hands — say they want to save him from defeat in his next re-election bid in 1968.

But they do not think he has been pulling his weight as a party man and their patience has worn thin. And they have made endorsement of Reagan a supreme and urgent test of his Republican regularity.

FOR YEARS Kuchel has made almost a specialty of neither endorsing nor working for such Republican nominees as Barry Goldwater, Richard Nixon (for governor), and U.S. Sen. George Murphy. He is charged with ignoring an endless array of party functions (including a big one this June 23), and with generally going it alone.

This time, however, the heat is truly intense. Says a respected northern California Republican hardly wedded to Reagan's conservatism: "Everybody's going with Reagan." Not to go for him, the man indicated, would be to stand out much too sharply as a target for general party wrath.

Almost daily telephone calls from the coast keep the pressure on. Kuchel is known to be thinking hard about the matter. He has told Reagan he wants to sit down and talk. The former actor wrote him a friendly letter in response to a congratulatory telegram the senator sent after Reagan's primary victory.

But finding the proper common ground is not automatic. Says a Kuchel friend: "It's not going to be easy to rush in and throw his arms around a guy who in 1962 called him a socialist and who in 1964 called him a traitor to his party."

Another problem is that Kuchel does not seem to buy the spreading notion that Reagan in 1966 is markedly different from the Goldwaterite he was in 1964. Nor does the senator accept the apparently contradictory argument that Reagan's smashing primary triumph proves that conservatism is on a steeply rising curve in California.

Some sources are betting Kuchel will give Reagan some kind of nod, despite the evident ideological gulf between them. If he does and Reagan beats Democratic Gov. Edmund (Pat) Brown, the senator's 1968 outlook will brighten immeasurably.

It is argued that a Governor Reagan elected after a long campaign of preaching party unity could hardly work to dump an incumbent Republican senator. Without a victorious Reagan's backing, an intra-party move against Kuchel in 1968 would surely be doomed. It would become a narrow right-wing effort. Kuchel won 3 to 1 over a combination of three opponents the last time that was tried.

THE CURRENT FURORE over Kuchel, almost hysterical in its overtones, may simmer down in the months ahead. It is in part the product of the excitement generated in California Republican circles by Reagan's big win. But the pressures are making some Kuchel intimates a little edgy.

Long-distance callers from the coast who warn bluntly that failure to back Reagan may plunge Kuchel into the abyss are reminded just as bluntly that a successful party effort to scuttle the senator in the 1968 primary might be rewarded by victory that November for a very junior Democratic senator who could do virtually nothing helpful for California.

This kind of talk is not exactly idle. In a state with roughly 3 to 2 Democratic registration, Kuchel won re-election in 1962 by 730,000 while Nixon was losing to Brown by 300,000. He gets the Democratic votes any Republican needs to win.

Moreover, independent judgments support the senator's claim to highly valuable service to his state. He has been a tiger in getting aids of all kinds. He is the top Republican on the Senate Interior Committee, crucial to a state deeply involved with water and other resources development.

Yet the key party regulars are less and less convinced that this admittedly faithful service need stand in the way of party good works. They point out that hard-working, liberal New York Sen. Jacob Javits finds plenty of time for major Republican chores in his home state. From Kuchel they want the same—for Ronald Reagan—and soon.

Murphy Lends Campaign Expert

From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON—Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., is dispatching his chief political lieutenant to help fellow-actor Ronald Reagan's effort to win the Golden State governorship for the GOP.

CAPITAL CHATTER

Murphy gave a leave of absence to his executice assistant, Richard M. (Sandy) Quinn, to lend his talents to the already smoothly-functioning Reagan-for-governor machine.

Quinn, 31, a bright specialist in public relations and a former campaign aide to Richard Nixon, is regarded as one of the principal architects of Murphy's surprise win over Pierre Salinger during the Democratic sweep of 1964.

Although he'll be working for the statewide Reagan organization, Quinn apparently will concentrate his efforts in Southern California. A native of Los Angeles, Quinn knows the area well and it's also the ground where there are the most political marbles to be picked up.

The dispatching of Quinn to Southern California might be tied to the fact that Reagan's rival, Democratic Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown, is beefing up his forces there.

STATE LEGISLATORS across the country are being questioned on electoral college reform.

Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-N.D., is sending questionnaires to more than 7,800 legislators to determine their feelings on possible constitutional amendments.

Burdick has a bill before Congress that calls for abolition of the electoral college and election of the president and vice president by direct popular vote.

States Moving On Civil Rights Issue

Washington Star Service

AMID ALL the congressional hullabaloo over civil rights legislation, representatives of the 50 state governors quietly have been preparing a packet of suggested state laws to cover much of the same ground.

The difference, of course, is that action by Congress binds all Americans, while recommendations of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws are only suggestions.

Nevertheless, a stalemate in Congress over, for example, fair housing proposals could leave the state-appointed commissioners with first crack at a consensus on some items the federal legislators are finding hard to handle.

THE UNIFORM LAW commissioners' annual meeting early next month in Montreal also will give the country a chance to see what happens when lawyers and law reformers tackle the subjects that throw politicians into tailspins.

The sessions in Montreal could whirl the law commissioners into orbit too, but the prospect is otherwise. Civil rights measures before the group won tentative approval at last year's meeting.

Recognizing that all states will not look kindly on their proposals, the commissioners have come up with a novel approach to permit states to go only part way in adopting the measures, if that is all they want to do.

For less eager states, the commissioners are taking the carrot-and-stick approach.

Up for final approval at next month's meeting is a suggested "basic" civil rights law generally harmonizing with provisions of the 1964 Civil Rights Act already adopted by Congress. The focus is on discrimination in public accommodations and employment.

With states already bound by congressional action, the carrot is the provision in the 1964 act that federal enforcement activity can be stayed in some cases if state laws and machinery are available to do the job.

This could pull in states that really do not go for equal rights in a big way but would prefer, if they must bow, to have things handled by their own people.

For states willing to go further, the commissioners also are considering additional "model" law sections covering education and housing, items before Congress in this year's civil rights bill.

THE HOUSING PROVISIONS especially are interesting because of the flack sections on this in the administration's bill have been drawn.

After banning traditional discriminatory practices, as did the administration's bill, the commissioners' version would go on to rule out "block-busting," the name given the real estate practice of scaring white owners into selling properties cheaply so they can then be resold at much higher prices to Negroes.

A section of the "model" law also would expressly permit plans to reduce racial imbalances in housing. Taken together, this and the "block-busting" section hint that drafters of the "model" law are pointing more toward northern states than southern ones.

The commissioners have not forgotten "Mrs. Murphy" either. The "model" law would exempt from anti-discrimination provisions the rental of space in rooming houses or duplex structures occupied in part by the owner or a member of his family.

Some 17 states and a number of cities already have fair housing measures on the books, and there will be a big drive to increase the number if Congress fails to act on some version of the administration's bill.

While civil rights is a new field for the uniform law commissioners, it is worth remembering that a commercial code worked up by the conference and the American Law Institute has been adopted in all but three states.

THE LAW GROUP was established 25 years ago to promote uniformity in state laws. One of the oldest of the various units designed to encourage interstate cooperation, it also has been active in property, criminal and family law fields.

The group got into civil rights three years ago, after Gov. Otto Kerner of Illinois, a Democrat, urged the commissioners at that year's meeting in Chicago to help devise peaceful ways for the handling of race problems.

L. A. C. SAYS

Disregarding Integrity Now Way of Life

IT WAS QUITE touching to read of the return to Sheldon, Iowa, of the former bank cashier who had embezzled over $2 million of the bank's funds. The story tells of the town folks' kindly treatment of the woman paroled after serving six years. She is now a member of the city library staff. The kindly attitude is given because it is said "few persons actually lost money, because all deposits up to $10,000 were insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp."

THAT ASSUMPTION is an indication of how people are willing to forget dishonesty unless it directly affects their own pocketbook. In this case the cost of this theft was paid for by everyone who has money in, or borrows money from, a bank. The deposit insurance is paid for by contributions by each bank. That cost is reflected in every charge for interest or other services provided by a bank. It is interesting to wonder what the attitude of the people of Sheldon would be if they had lost money by this theft.

At the time of reading this story Jimmy Hoffa was arrogantly directing the voting of his Teamsters Union. Awaiting his prison term, the whole question seemed to be whether he would continue as president and boss of the union while in prison, or if he would have a self-picked stand-in to run the union with Hoffa resuming the post after serving his prison term. His record of attempted jury-fixing, misuse of union funds and financing of gambling in Las Vegas is disregarded by the 1,700,000 teamsters whom Hoffa controls—and who voted to raise his salary $25,000 a year to $100,000.

WE RARELY hear or read anything these days about Bobby Baker. The fact that he used his position as an aide to the then Sen. Johnson to build a $2 million fortune seems to have lost public interest. The Senate has carefully swept under the carpet the charges that Baker used his influence with its members to gain favors for those he helped get contracts and appointments—and to build his own huge bank account. It leaves the impression that the senators are afraid to hold an open hearing because it would embarrass the President and many of the senators.

Then we still have the fact that the President used his influence as the leader of the Senate to achieve an estimated $14 million fortune through his monopoly of radio and television in his home state capital of Austin, Texas. This was possible only by ruling of the Federal Communications Commission over which he had great influence. No other area of this size has monopoly control of all broadcasts of the major networks of a city.

WHEN SUCH glaring examples of bank thefts, union leadership, misuse of power and the fortunes made by misuse of political power are accepted as "a way of life" we are in a bad way. It may seem tiresome to repeat Bernard Baruch's comment that the American people have "lost their capacity for indignation." But it seems more true today than when he so commented.

Unless we regain that capacity the trend will grow and public confidence in integrity of its government will continue to be apathetic and there will be little incentive for young people to believe in decency and honesty. It is not a nice subject. But it is one we need to understand and demand that the attitude be changed.—L.A.C.

Lodge Due Out of Crucial Post Soon

New York Times Service

PARIS—On July 8, 1965, President Johnson took the unusual step of nominating Henry Cabot Lodge to a second tour as ambassador in Saigon. This crucial job is about as agreeable as vice consul in hell. Now Lodge has finished another year of sweltering, restraining generals, juggling politicians, entertaining V.I.P. tourists and keeping construction workers out of jail.

Although he is in superb health, all this fatigues a man of 64. The time is coming for Lodge to contemplate retirement from Southeast Asia and it would be surprising if he were still at his present post when winter sets in.

LODGE BEGAN his second lap around the Vietnamese obstacle course when things were looking appallingly grim. Only recently have the military and political situations begun seriously to improve.

Lodge has steadfastly argued that battlefield success was an absolute prerequisite to any permanent settlement. Nevertheless, even then, he acknowldges that while North Viet Nam could perhaps be rendered militarily harmless by next spring, this fact would not necessarily end the South Viet Nam war.

Although a Republican, Lodge is a non-political envoy. He feels the American obligation to keep South Viet Nam from Communist control is imposed by vital national interest and that what the U.S. is doing there now is what it did not do elsewhere in 1936 and 1938 when Hitler could have been kept from militarizing the Rhineland and seizing Sudeten, Czechoslovakia. For Lodge the U.S. must accept a disagreeable limited conflict and, by winning it, avoid World War III.

Lodge believes Washington must give the South Vietnamese a better revolution than that offered by Hanoi but he perceives how Augean (filthy or corrupt) the stable is. He acknowledges that no cement binds South Viet Nam together so that, if any force pushes against the wall, bricks pop out separately.

During the past difficult spring the ambassador insisted U.S. policy must try to keep Marshal Ky's military junta in power until a legal turnover could be arranged. He has no illusions that Ky is a Lincoln or a Bismarck. He simply regards him as an astute, hard worker who has learned a lot and can move things forward whereas any sudden replacement would have to start all over again.

Nor did Lodge ever place much reliance on the Buddhist political faction of venerable Tri Quang who tried so hard to grab power. Lodge actually sheltered Tri Quang in 1963 when the dynamic little Bonze, disguised as a Catholic priest, was dodging the police.

Notwithstanding, the ambassador thinks Tri Quang wants a theocratic state with Buddhism as the official religion, that his Buddhist faction comprises wreckers, not builders, who create opportunities for communism without worrying about it. This hurdle on the obstacle course has now, the U.S. hopes, been crossed. Moreover, Lodge feels the Viet Cong has lost considerable magic in the countryside.

LODGE EVIDENTLY considers it would be a mistake to yield too much in order to entice Hanoi into negotiation. He prefers that we should first be 85% along the way to a satisfactory outcome. He is convinced that more than twice as much of South Viet Nam's population is already under Saigon rather than under Viet Cong control, thanks to governmental hold on the cities and provincial capitals. A sizable floating fraction wavers in the boondocks.

When Lodge eventually leaves Saigon the least he should merit is a well done from the President, and the nation's gratitude. Who will then take over is a matter of speculation.

The remarkable and modest Ellsworth Bunker has been considered but he is really too old for the climate and the task. There is always a possibility that if Dean Rusk resigns as secretary of state he might shoulder the burden, as he has volunteered to do.

WHATEVER HAPPENS, it is desirable that a renowned American assume the job—for prestige reasons obvious in both Saigon and Washington.

Whoever does take it will have the invaluable services of William Porter, the career deputy ambassador whose past guerrilla experience from Palestine to Algeria now stands him in good stead. So there it is, Lodge, an unprecedented two-time ambassador in the same ghastly spot, must inevitably go soon. It will be hard for the President to fill his shoes.

Picnic Table Grievance

EDITOR:

Recently my husband and I went to Houghton Park at 8:30 a. m. to set up four tables for a picnic. There were to be 23 in our party.

At 9 a. m. a park director came through the area posting tables as reserved, including the four we had spread with our food and dishes, without saying anything to us. I read one of the signs and it said: "Reserved—Presbyterian Church—Westminster—12-6."

When I told the director we had been there since 8:30 a. m. and had cleaned up garbage and trash from the tables, benches and asphalt, he said that was too bad—we'd have to move or he would call the police. Later he brought out another man who very politely explained park policy to us and asked us to move, which we did. We then cleaned up more garbage and trash so we could use other tables.

Two other parties were at tables in the same row we chose when we first arrived at the park. These tables were not posted, and the people were not asked to move.

At 1 p. m. some people from the church group (I asked to be sure) covered with paper the tables my husband and I had first. Our party (all taxpayers in Long Beach) were there until 6:30 p. m. These tables were never used by anyone all day long.

There were four more tables reserved in the name of Browson for 1:30 p. m. These tables were not used until 4, when another group came along and took the sign off.

At no time did the director check to see if the people who had made the reservations were using them or remove the signs when their time had passed. Scores of people were forced to sit on the ground to eat, while many tables were empty except for their reserved sign.

It just doesn't seem fair that people can call in from out of town and keep park facilities from being used by the ones who are paying for them. What ever happened to the first come, first served method?

There were three groups in the picnic area drinking beer—but we were the ones threatened with the police, for sitting at the wrong tables.

'Unnecessary Judgeship'

EDITOR:

The paper reported the result of a vote, by 300 Bar Association members, which suggested to Gov. Brown the names of three attorneys, one to fill the vacancy created by the retirement of Martin De Vries from the municipal court bench, a post to which he had been re-elected (for six years) only 19 months ago.

Also before me is a clipping dated four years and 11 months ago which reads in part "the Municipal Court is expected to boast of six judges instead of five through a bill introduced by Assemblyman Joe Kennick which Gov. Brown signed . . . the legislation . . . was unanimously denounced by the L. B. Municipal jurists."

It is to be noted that the municipal judges' opposition was "unanimous"—and who should know the work load best?

A judge has estimated the yearly operation of one court to be $40,000 to $50,000.

There have been 2 or 3 between-election vacancies in municipal court since this unnecessary judgeship was created, but Long Beach attorneys go merrily along, endorsing fellow attorneys to carry on this unnecessary expense. Nothing has been said about an increased load but if there is an added load the court has had an "extra" judge for nearly five years. Further, as younger judges take over more work can be done in less time. The added load question was pretty well answered about two years ago when one judge was on (terminal) sick leave for months; "The cases are up to date."

Now is the time for alert taxpayers, who gripe about taxes, to ask Gov. Brown, right now, not to fill this judgeship vacancy.

He Wrote LBJ, but Never Got to Read Reply

WASHINGTON — President Johnson gets thousands of letters every week, many of them dealing with the Viet Nam war. He doesn't have time to answer many of them. But he got one from Lt. Michael T. Glynne, Company B of the 35th Infantry in Viet Nam, which he answered.

"I feel it a duty, as well as a privilege," Lt. Glynne wrote the President, "to express not only for myself but for thousands of other American soldiers here in Viet Nam the admiration and pride which you have made us feel in our country by your steadfast leadership in these trying times. I make this statement out of no jingoist sentiment or false pride but in the knowledge which I have gathered firsthand here that this war is one in which every American can take pride."

To this President Johnson wrote a personal reply.

"I have kept your letter before me for some time," he said, "because it has been such a comfort and so very helpful.

"It was in my pocket when I spoke at a large dinner here in Washington several weeks ago. I carried it with me to a similar gathering in Chicago just the other day.

"I spoke frankly and with feeling to both audiences. I told them that, while some Americans are troubled and frustrated about Viet Nam, I have proof that Americans have not lost the spirit or the courage or the wisdom which have kept us a free people.

"The proof, I said, was the thousands of letters I receive from our men in Viet Nam, their families, and countless of their supporters across the land.

"I WANT TO THANK YOU for giving me such magnificent proof that Americans will always stand with patience, determination and honor where they must stand—the guardians at the gates of peace and freedom.

"In return, I give you my assurance that the heart and hope of this nation is with you and your men. Please tell them that."

So wrote the President of the United States. But Lt. Mike Glynne never read the letter. It was returned to the White House unopened. One day before it arrived, Lt. Glynne was killed by a sniper's bullet.

WALTER JETTON, the President's personal barbecuer, is not only a great cook but a very versatile gentleman. He can barbecue for the President, for Parisians, and shortly will officiate at the annual Big Brothers barbecue in nearby Maryland.

Jetton recently returned from opening the Paris Hilton Hotel, where he served good old-fashioned spareribs, fried Texas pies, and his famous barbecue sauce to Parisian guests accustomed to the productions of Cordon Bleu chefs. The Parisians loved it.

Jetton also engaged in a little interior decorating. The managers of the Paris Hilton didn't know too much about the West so Jetton went to Paris loaded with pictures of Diamond Lil, Two-Gun Pete, and the Western bars of frontier days. As a result the motif of the Paris Hilton was live horses, an old country store, tin cups, red-checked tablecloths, Western music, and red bandannas.

Jetton flew his seasonings, his sauces and his beans from Texas to Paris, plus his formulas for fried pies. He relied on the Hilton management to produce the meat. But instead of providing 175 pounds of dressed beef, they provided an 800-pound steer. Jetton operates out of Fort Worth, will truck his cooking equipment all the way across the United States for the Big Brothers barbecue.

ADMITTED SHOOTER, WORKING WITH POLICE, EXONERATED BY GRAND JURY

Strange Case of Motel Double Killing

By BOB DAVIS

A hot-tempered southerner, cooled by an Amish upbringing, is an unlikely undercover agent. Yet car salesman William Wayne Wagner, working with the police, became involved in one of the most unusual murder cases in Orange County history.

In slightly more than one month, Wagner was quizzed about a double shooting in Santa Ana, congratulated, released, arrested for killing two men, released without bail, and finally exonerated when the grand jury failed to indict him for murder.

Now, branded publicly as an informer, Wagner is "apprehensive" about possible retaliation by associates of the ex-convict who was one of two men he shot to death in a Santa Ana motel on May 23.

While the death of one-time New York racketeer Morris Lipsius, 54, has been described by Orange County Dist. Atty. Kenneth Williams as "possibly justified," the death of Donald B. MacMillan, 54, in whose motel room the slayings occurred, has been called accidental by the grand jury.

"I don't regret killing Lipsius," Wagner, 29, said. "I knew what I was doing. But there is no way I can ever make up for shooting MacMillan. That is the real tragedy."

* * * *

WAGNER, a native of Memphis, Tenn., moved to the Amish community of West Alexander, Pa., and grew up in close contact with the rigid religious tenets held by the Amish.

In 1953, he moved to Canton, Ohio, and first met the man he would later slay. Wagner was boxing as a light welterweight in Canton smokers, and knew Lipsius as a gambler.

Wagner said:

"If a gambler bet on you, and you won, he usually showed his appreciation by giving you gifts and favors. While I only had about 18 fights, I attracted the attention of Lipsius, who won some money by betting on me. He paid for my robe, gave me some money, and picked up a couple of food tabs I had run up. I knew Lipsius for less than six months, then I went into the Army."

Wagner said he long has been interested in police work.

He said:

"I'm one of those guys who just has to butt his nose in whereever trouble pops up. I can't back and watch someone break the law, or do harm to someone without interfering, particularly when I might be able to prevent the trouble."

* * * *

THE STAGE for Wagner's experience in police work was set in 1959 when he "bumped into Lipsius in El Monte."

Wagner said:

"I had been keeping some horses in a stable there when I met Lipsius' daughter, Linda, now 19. I didn't associate her with Lipsius until one day when I gave her a ride home. It was a real surprise meeting Lipsius again."

Wagner recounted:

'Lipsius filled me in on what had been happening to him. He told me he had blown all the money he got for serving as a technical adviser on a movie that reportedly was based partially on his life. He said he was a hit man (hired killer), and told me of a number of killings he claimed to have committed."

Wagner said Lipsius began coming around to the house, "but he upset my wife so much, she threw him out one night."

Wagner said:

"This worried me, because he wasn't the kind of person anyone threw out. Besides, he told me he was attempting to set up another Murder, Inc., and, for a guy like this, you go cautiously."

* * * *

WAGNER SAID in the last four years he worked with the Santa Ana police on cases involving illegal sale of machine guns, traffic in stolen property, a bookmaking organization, and even traveled to Pennsylvania on a counterfeiting case which the U.S. Treasury Department was probing.

Earlier this year, he said, he was again contacted by Linsius, who, he claimed, told him about killing a man in his pastry shop near Western and Melrose Streets in Los Angeles for $160, and dragging the body into an alley.

Wagner said he later took the information on the shooting to Santa Ana police, who passed it on to Los Angeles police. The latter, Wagner said, asked him to help obtain information to aid in the arrest of Lipsius.

"Then, on May 23," Wagner said, "Lipsius showed up at the car agency and told me he needed money. He seemed to need it badly. When I told him I had none I could spare, he got mad. I told him I would meet him at a bar, but first I had to go home to see my wife."

Wagner said, "I really went home to get a gun, and to call the police and tell them Lipsius was in town."

* * * *

HE RECOUNTED:

"I returned to the bar and was having a drink with Lipsius when MacMillan, whom I knew slightly, walked in and joined us. We were drinking, and MacMillan was talking as if he had a lot of money. When he suggested we go to his room in the motel next door, Lipsius reached inside my coat and grabbed my .25-caliber automatic. I felt that Lipsius was going to kill MacMillan for his money, and I tried to talk Lipsus into leaving with me."

Wagner added:

"When he insisted on staying with MacMillan, I really became worried. I said I had to go home again (to get my .45-caliber automatic) and agreed to meet them in MacMillan's room.

"I thought about telling MacMillan of my fears, but he was the kind of person who might make light of it all and tell Lipsius. We both might have been killed."

Wagner said he returned home for his gun, informed police of the situation, but told them "I thought I could handle it." However, Wagner said, a police officer was dispatched to the motel.

Upon rejoining the pair, Wagner said he found "McMillan sitting in a chair holding papers on his lap and discussing employment opportunities available to Lipsius, who had told McMillan he needed a job. Lipsius walked behind MacMillan and asked him if he could read the papers over his shoulder. Then he pulled out the automatic pistol and pointed it at MacMillan's head."

* * * *

WAGNER SAID:

"I got scared. I waited for the police to jump in and break it up. I thought they were watching through the window. I didn't know then that they hadn't arrived. Nothing happened, and I pulled my gun and fired. Lipsius was thrown back against the wall. He looked startled and said, 'I thought you were with me, Bill!' He pointed his weapon at me. I fired again and emptied my gun. I didn't even notice MacMillan. I walked over to Lipsius and he was on the floor trying to crawl. I hit him hard over the head with my gun. I didn't see his gun, but then I noticed MacMillan slumped in his chair. Blood was on his temple. I thought Lipsius had shot him."

Wagner said he walked to the bar and asked a waitress to call the police. Wagner said he was taken to the station where he "made out a report on yellow paper," and gave it to Sgt. Rusty Boyd.

Wagner said:

"We discussed the shooting, and then Boyd, Sgt. Ralph Curiale and Detective Dino Gaiazzi told me I had done a good job. We all shook hands, and I gave my gun to Curiale before going to breakfast with Caiazzi. From there, I went to work."

Two hours later, Wagner was arrested and charged with a double murder when an autopsy revealed both Lipsius and MacMillan had died from .45-caliber gunshot wounds. On June 8, Wagner was released from jail without bail. On June 28, the grand jury failed to indict him. The following day, the charges were formally dismissed.

* * * *

IN THE CONFUSION following the shooting, both Los Angeles and Santa Ana police denied that Wagner was working for them. Santa Ana police subsequently conceded Wagner did do some work for them in the capacity of a "volunteer secret associate."

Wagner, who now is unemployed, said:

"I believe Chief Edward J. Allen, Santa Ana, thought I was a secret agent with his department and wanted to keep it that way. But, I was the most unsecret agent in town. I blabbed all over what I was doing for the police."

He added:

"I wish the police would have revealed everything I had been doing for them, and not dismissed me as a mere informer. Now, I'm fair game for anyone who might want to show what happens to informers."

Wagner said, "Even so, if they asked me to help again, I would."

Bellflower Man Shot, Robbed

A Bellflower man who was shot twice and robbed Friday was in satisfactory condition at Bellwood General Hospital in Bellflower Saturday.

William Perry, 23, of 10029 Maple St., told Compton detectives two men forced their way into his car at a stop light in the Gardena area and forced him to drive them to Compton.

The bandits ordered him to stop in the 1200 block of South Cliveden Avenue, he told detectives. Then they jumped out of the car, and each turned to fire at the victime before fleeing.

STUDENTS LEARN FASTER

Music 'Camps' Pay Off

By DON KIRKLAND

In Bill Vitale's summer music class, there's no homework. There are no grades, either, and Vitale says the result is that the kids learn faster.

Vitale is one of nine directors assigned to junior music camps spread throughout the Southland in a program coordinated by Cerritos College. At casual daily sessions, the youngsters discuss the history of music, learn the fundamentals and then break out the instruments to put their newfound knowledge to work.

"Sure, there are certain fundamentals and disciplines that the kids must learn," says Vitale, "but they do it in a relaxed environment. That way they get a concentrated dose of learning—and it shows."

* * * *

A FULLTIME music instructor at four elementary schools and one junior high school during the rest of the year, Vitale and his teacher counterparts ply their trade under summer contract to Cerritos College. The college, in turn, contracts with school and city recreation departments to provide staff on facilities in Downey, Norwalk, Bellflower and a handful of other communities which have acknowledged that music fills an important niche in the leisure-time lives of today's younger generation.

Now in its second year, the program is available to boys and girls aged 9 through 15. It runs mornings throughout the summer, five days a week. And that's the key, says Vitale.

* * * *

"IN SCHOOL, you can only meet with these youngsters for a few minutes each week," he says. "But here, they study all morning. If they want, they practice at home at night. When the summer is over, and if they've stuck with the program, the results can be amazing."

Nearly all the children bring their own instruments —WHICH run the gamut from brass to percussion— from home. For those not so equipped, instruments are available.

"Our philosophy is music for recreation," says Vitale, "and this is that kind of an outlet in a leisurely atmosphere."

Girl, 17, Is Shot to Death

A 23-year-old Willowbrook laborer was jailed on suspicion of murder Saturday after his 17-year-old girlfriend was shot to death during an argument.

The suspect is James Truman Denson, of 11634½ Bandera St., where the shooting occurred. The victim was Evelyn Louise Allen, who resided with her mother, Mrs. Karen Lee Battle, at 400 E. 120th St.

Firestone sheriff's deputies said Miss Allen was shot once through the head with a sawed-off .22-caliber rifle, and that Denson admitted the shooting.

Denson was quoted as saying the shooting was accidental and that he did not know the weapon was loaded.

L.B. Share of Car Fund $2 Million

Long Beach was allocated nearly $2 million Saturday as its share of funds collected by the state Motor Vehicles Department in auto license fees.

The money, which takes the place of local property taxes on vehicles, will be used by the city for general public purposes. Long Beach received the fourth highest allotment in the state. Only Los Angeles, San Jose and Oakland were allocated more.

Long Beach's funds are part of the $176 million in license fees shared by California's 398 incorporated cities and 58 counties. The allocation amounts to more than five dollars per person in Long Beach.

The money is distributed by the state in three payments—one in December, a second (advance payment) in April and a third and final in June.

Car Bangs Sailor Wearing 2 Casts

An unemployed scriptwriter was arrested on suspicion of felony hit-run driving Saturday after a Long Beach-based sailor was struck by a car and injured in a crosswalk at Ocean Boulevard and Chestnut Avenue.

Harry A. Reilly, 29, of 1828 Appleton St., was seized about 15 minutes after the accident by Police Officers T. C. Booth and Frank Barcott at Obispo Avenue and Mariquita Street, following a radio broadcast describing the suspect's car.

The victim, Ronald G. Larson, 21, stationed aboard the USS Arnold, who already was wearing casts on his right foot and right arm from a previous accident, suffered abrasions.

Witnesses told police Larson was crossing Ocean Boulevard in a pedestrian zone at 2:40 a.m. when he was hit by a car and hurled 16 feet. Police said witnesses later identified Reilly as the hit-run car's driver.

The sailor was given emergency treatment at St. Mary's Hospital, then transferred to the Navy hospital ship USS Haven.

Store Health License Deadline Set at Aug. 1

From Our Los Angeles Bureau

All businesses which require a public health license have been advised that such licenses must be renewed by 5 p.m., Aug. 1, to avoid a 25% delinquent penalty.

Harold J. Ostly, county tax collector, said 91,449 renewal billings were mailed July 1 to businessmen throughout the county.

Any person owning or operating a boarding house or an apartment house of five or more units, or operating any food handling processing or preparation business such as a restaurant or market, should contact the tax collector's office if he has not received a renewal bill.

Ostly emphasized that there are other categories of business which require the public health licenses and advised businessmen who may be in doubt about their obligations to call his office.

Businessmen mailing in their remittances should do so sufficiently early to be sure the payment is postmarked prior to the Aug. 1 deadline.

Thieves Stage Block Party

Two homes in the 100 block of W. Plymouth Street were burgled Saturday, Long Beach police said.

Personal property valued at $164 was stolen from the Robert W. Johnson residence, 162 Plymouth, and household appliances valued at $88 were taken from the Autie Quinn residence, 162½ Plymouth St.

June 17 Crash Claims Man

A Redondo Beach accountant died Saturday morning at UCLA Medical Center as a result of injuries received in an auto accident June 17 in Dominguez, according to the county coroner.

John Gulik, 29, of 1718 Esplanade Ave., was injured when his car struck the rear end of a stopped car at 225th and Main streets, California Highway Patrol officers said.

Skunk Routs Crowd at Fire --Firemen, Too

In Cypress: "The Sweet Smell of Distress"

Firemen Battle to Keep Flames from Felling Utility Pole in Debris-Strewn Field

Staff Photos by BOB SHUMWAY

By DAVID SLAW

Most firemen will tell you they usually have more trouble with people than with flames.

They can turn their hoses on the flames. The people, taxpayers — pushing, pressing, yelling, interfering — require less direct, more time-consuming treatment.

Volunteer firefighters from Cypress and Los Alamitos found a new method of crowd dispersal Saturday when a small skunk strolled by a fire on the 40-acre site of the proposed Cypress Junior College, Lincoln Avenue and Valley View Street.

The skunk chased the spectators away quicker than you could say, "Phew!"

But he also chased the firemen away.

When they regrouped — holding hoses with one hand and noses with the other— it took only 45 minutes to extinguish the blaze. Several sheds, shacks and barns were damaged, and nearby utility poles were burned slightly.

No one was injured.

Even the skunk escaped unscathed.

Now if the fire department could recruit him to show up at fires in the future . . .

APCD Takes Aim on Solvent Smog

From Our Los Angeles Bureau

A proposed new antismog law to regulate the emission of solvents such as carbon tetrachloride, acetone and kerosene will be considered by county supervisors at a public hearing July 28.

Louis J. Fuller, county air pollution control officer, said solvents add about 600 tons of hydrocarbons to the air daily, and that many of them are "even more active than gasoline in causing eye-irritation and other symptoms of smog."

Fuller called the solvents the "last major source of smog-forming hydrocarbons, other than the automobile.

He emphasized the new regulation, Rule 66, is not aimed at, and would not apply, to small users of solvents.

It would affect a broad range of industry, however, as solvents are used in almost all types of painting and surface-coating, as well as in degreasing and dry cleaning and in the manufacture of paints, rubber, plastics, adhesives and pharmaceuticals.

Major contributors to the emission of solvents, Fuller said, are automobile manufacturing plants, aircraft manufacturers, furniture manufacturers, plants making beer cans, and printing industries, particularly lithography.

Processes involving baking of enamel or other finishes would be limited to 15 pounds per day without control methods.

The new rule also would apply to manufacturers of house paint, requiring all finishes sold in Loos Angeles County after July 1, 1967, to contain APCD-approved solvents.

Two LSTs Recommissioned Here for Return to Duty

Two tank landing ships were recommissioned Saturday at Long Beach Naval Shipyard.

They were the USS Hampshire County, commanded by Lt. E. E. White, and the USS Pitkin County, whose captain is Lt. C. E. Quarles.

Capt. J. J. Love Jr., commanding officer of the attack transport USS Navarro, was the speaker at the commissioning ceremony. He represented Vice Adm. Bernard Roeder, commander, Pacific Amphibious Forces.

The tank landing ship (LST) is one of the Navy's "work horses" in the Viet Nam war, constantly carrying troops and supplies.

"Despite advances in new assault concepts there is still need to land and support troops in over-the-beach operations, as has been proven in Viet Nam. This is where the LSTs are invaluable to the Navy," Capt. Love said.

The Pitkin County was commissioned originally in 1945 and participated in the closing months of World War II and also in Korea. She was decommissioned in 1955.

Hampshire County joined the fleet in November 1944, served through Korea and was decommissioned in 1955.

Both were assigned to the Pacific Reserve Fleet in San Diego after decommissioning.

Frank Noe, principal at the Brookhurst School, moves to Paine School to replace William Yoak, new director of the Neighborhood Youth Corps project. Laurence Vike, of the West Covina School district, will replace Noe.

Leroy Morton, principal of the Clinton School, will trade places with Mrs. Helen Kingsbury at Stanley School.

Mrs. Jessie Webster, district elementary coordinator, goes to Morningside School, replacing Glenn Davis who moves to the Paramount School District.

Holiday Toll Low in State

One less person died in California traffic accidents during the Fourth of July holidays than is normally killed in similar mishaps on nonholiday Saturdays, Sundays and Mondays, according to the State Department of Public Works.

The department attributed the low fatality rate largely to heavy use of freeways instead of byways during the critical period.

Figures compiled by the Division of Highways in cooperation with the Highway Patrol showed that only eight of 46 holiday traffic fatalities occurred on freeways.

Ailing Plane Sets Down on Beach

A single-engine airplane stalled over crowded Cabrillo Beach Saturday afternoon and made a forced landing on the strand, Harbor Division police reported.

The pilot, Earl Silvers, 31, of 4703 Pixie Ave., Lakewood, and his passenger, Ron Maurceri, 28, of Santa Monica, were unhurt and the plane was not damaged in the emergency landing.

Lifeguards at the beach said hundreds of bathers watched the small plane take off about four hours later after Silvers was able to restart his stalled engine.

Natural Gas Price Control Relief Sought

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Natural gas producers are gradually perfecting an organization to lead another campaign to ask Congress for relief from federal price controls.

Target dates and specific objectives of the campaign are closely guarded secrets.

The nationwide gas supply committee was organized last October. So far, its objectives have been spelled out only as "an effort to obtain congressional relief to the gas industry."

No further elaboration was made last week when William O. Senter, a retired Air Force general, became the group's executive vice president and chairman of the steering committee.

* * * *

THERE WAS early indication the group planned to place before Congress early next year some form of a bill clarifying the authority of the Federal Power Commission to regulate the wellhead prices of gas sold into interstate commerce.

Since then there has been some speculation the campaign may be delayed until a federal court rules on legality of the FPC's area formula for controlling prices. The case is now before the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals at Denver. The outcome is certain to be appealed and attorneys close to the situation do not believe the Supreme Court can make a final ruling before the spring of 1968.

A final ruling at that time could inject the matter into the 1698 presidential campaign.

* * * *

PRESIDENT JOHNSON, as a member of Congress, was a prime backer of decontrol bills that were vetoed in 1948 and 1956. He has taken no position on the matter since moving to the White House but the 1964 Democratic platform had words of praise for the FPC while detailing "effective government representation and protection for consumers."

The platform said an upward spiral in natural gas prices had been halted "by vigorous regulatory action of the Federal Power Commission and the nation's 36 million customers of natural gas have benefited from rate reductions and refunds in excess of $600 million.

The 1964 Republican platform called for "an end to power-grabbing regulatory actions" but included no direct reference to gas price controls.

* * * *

GAS PRODUCERS have spearheaded the organization of the nationwide committee but plans call for active participation by pipeliners, distributors and other segments of the energy industry. Spokesmen for the coal industry also have indicated they will lend support.

J. Avery Rush Jr., Amarillo, Tex., told the Independent Petroleum Association of America in May of plans for a 100-member advisory committee that would include coal as well as other segments of the gas industry.

"The main thing now is to get the industry together on the need for congressional relief," Rush said.

"We have available the organization, talent and money to do the job we think must be done."

AIDE SAYS

Dogs Share Blame for Car Accidents

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) While the auto industry and its critics argue whether cars or drivers are mostly responsible for traffic accidents, a state official says dogs must share some of the blame.

Commissioner Joseph N. Gill of agriculture and natural resources has written all dog wardens, prosecutors and police officials that roaming dogs have become a "serious problem" and are causing traffic accidents.

A dog owner who does allow his dog to run wildly may be fined $25, jailed for 30 days, or both.

DISTURBED SLEEP
The hum of activity is heard these days in Uncle Sam's mothball fleet, as ships which have been preserved in various parts of the country are reconditioned. Here sailor Rudy Longoria accents a sign which is going out of date at the Norfolk Navy Yard, Norfolk, Va. In the background is R12, a headquarters ship, with a cocooned gun on the turret still showing its mothball status.

RETIRED SHIPS RETURNING

Wake Up! Mothball Fleet Answers Call

Editor's note—Once again the mothball fleet is paying off, this time in Viet Nam. The Navy has called up 24 warships and the maritime Administration is sending 101 cargo ships. It costs $5.5 million a year to maintain the reserve fleets, but it's still a bargain.

By J. W. DAVIS

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—The big black and white sign at dockside admonishes: "Quiet please! Uncle Sam's ships are resting here."

But now, once again, some of these retired warships, after a Rip Van Winkle sleep in one corner of the big Norfolk Navy Yard, are going back to war — Viet Nam.

In more than a dozen anchorages across the country, other ships—both warships and merchant vessels —beginning a new life, with new journeys to war. These ships have been preserved for just such need by the Maritime Administration and the Navy.

These are the "mothball fleets," dating back to the end of World War II, serving even while they stand and wait. The call first came when the Korean War broke out. It came again at the time of the closing of the Suez Canal, and it is being sounded anew from Southeast Asia.

* * * *

THE GHOSTLIKE quiet of peaceful times is broken now by the purposeful noise that reverses the process which put the ships to sleep.

"All we need are men," says Cmdr. Frank Kalasinsky, proud of the condition of the laid-up warships under his command at Norfolk. Most of them are destroyers, but there are some rocket ships, various types of landing craft.

Kalasinksy, 51, is retiring after nearly 31 years in the Navy—"They're putting ME in mothballs." His successor, Cmdr. Cecil Wood, feels the same way he does about the reserve ships.

"They can do a job," says Wood.

There's the same sort of enthusiasm shown by Almon (Al) Briggs, 48, acting fleet superintendent for 300 merchant ships at the Maritime Administration berths in the James River of Virginia.

* * * *

"LOOK AT those ships," Briggs said on a boat ride around the James River reserve fleet. "Some of them have been there 20 years, but they are still good. Some weren't used more than two years, and their machinery is nearly new."

"No one can call them rust buckets," said Charles A. Hurst of the Maritime Administration, making the inspection tour.

Maritime Administration officials and the Navy have learned a lot about better ways to preserve ships since World War II. Now vessels can be kept in such good shape they can be made ready for sea in six to eight weeks.

A year ago the Maritime Administration got its first call for Viet Nam supply ships—a total of 101 ships, a $40 million job. The order is now being filled, in groups of 25.

* * * *

THESE CARGO ships are not fast, they can carry huge amounts of arms, ammunition, medical supplies, food, clothing and other equipment. And 98% of what goes to Viet Nam goes by ship, even in these days of air freight.

Costs have been going up. At the time of the Korean War, 150 merchant ships were taken out of the reserve, and it cost an average of $250,000 to put them into service. Today the figure is $400,000 per ship.

In addition to the 101 merchant ships for Viet Nam, the Navy has pulled 24 warships from its reserve, their guns ready to fire after removal of protective cocoons. Three are rocket ships, one a fire support ship, two are small aircraft carriers for transporting planes, one is a repair ship and 17 are landing ships.

The Navy's mothball fleet numbers approximately 600 ships, mostly destroyers, dispersed in six groups: at Bremerton, Wash., Mare Island and San Diego, Calif.; Norfolk; Orange, Tex.; and Philadelphia.

* * * *

THERE ARE four battleships in reserve — the New Jersey, Iowa and Wisconsin at Philadelphia, and the Missouri at Bremerton. For a time there was talk that one of the battleships might be reactivated for heavy shelling along the Viet Nam coast. However, Adm. David L. McDonald, cheif of naval operations, said in May that it had been decided the idea was "not worthwhile under present circumstances."

The Maritime Administration, a part of the Commerce Department, has charge of the National Defense Reserve Fleet, which keeps its mothballed merchant ships in eight berthing areas. There are a total of 1,365 ships, of which 841 are "preserved" as useful to national defense and 524 are destined for scrap. This is the distribution:

| | Preserved | Scrap |
|---|---|---|
| Hudson River, N.Y. | 99 | 65 |
| James River, Va. | 168 | 145 |
| Wilmington, N.C. | 0 | 69 |
| Mobile, Ala. | 114 | 87 |
| Beaumont, Tex. | 113 | 41 |
| Suisun Bay, Calif. | 185 | 65 |
| Astoria, Ore. | 34 | 52 |
| Olympia, Wash. | 128 | 0 |

* * * *

THE PRESERVED ships include: 366 naval auxiliaries, 341 dry cargo vessels, tankers, refrigerator ships and tugs, and 134 passenger-cargo ships.

The Maritime Administration figures it costs from $1,500 to $5,000 per year to preserve a ship. The hull, decks and superstructures are scaled and then coated with special preservatives once each two years. Cargo holds, living quarters and other inside spaces are cleaned and coated every four years.

Machinery and exposed external surfaces receive a coating of preservatives once each five years. At the same interval electric motors and generators are disassembled, cleaned, treated with coating and reassembled.

Ship bottoms are kept under cathodic protection, a development that borders on the sensational. In this method, electrical currents are used to divert corrosion away from useful metal surfaces and into throwaway blocks of graphite.

* * * *

ONE OF THE latest techniques is the preservation of machinery spaces by dehumidification. This has been applied to the more recent addition to the reserve fleet and probably will be used more and more. If the relative humidity is kept under control, there is little deterioration, rust or oxidation, the ship preservers have found.

The Maritime Administration figures that the cost of the reserve fleet program runs around $5.5 million a year, and points out that this is on an inventory that would cost billions to replace.

Facelifting Due on Papal Palace

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—The Papal Palace, plagued by cracks and old age, is getting a facelifting.

The work, which has been under way for some time, does not affect the wing where the papal apartment is located. Vatican officials and workmen have been unwilling to comment on the purpose and importance of the work, but at least part of it is obviously intended to fix cracks which developed in ceilings and vaults.

A steel tube scaffolding has sprung up on the north side of the Apostolic Palace—facing inside the Vatican and on the opposite side of the building from the papal apartments.

In the courtyard of the Holy Office, inside the palace and near the Pope's private elevator, a few ground floor windows have been bricked up and a door has been reinforced with bricks.

* * * *

WORKERS on another scaffolding are working on the wall overlooking the second flight of the stairs of St. Pius X, which leads from the Via Sant'Anna to the Holy Office courtyard. Cracks are visible in an arch over the stairs, which supports a wing of the Apostolic Palace.

Vatican experts have denied past reports that the Apostolic Palace—a maze of various buildings erected under successive popes between the 13th and 17th centuries—is in danger of coming down. But it has been obvious for some time that some repairs and consolidation work was needed.

The latest strain imposed on the building came from the construction last year of a rooftop garden where Pope Paul VI can spend some time in the rare intervals of his work. The roof garden, with a cement floor, covers most of the building's roof, but is not visible from the ground because the roof edge was left as it was to keep the silhouette of the palace unchanged.

THERE WERE reports a few months ago that the weight of the cement terrace had endangered the stability of the building and that Pope Paul might have to move to the Lateran Palace at the other end of Rome pending reinforcement of the palace in the Vatican. Officials discounted those reports and there has been no recent indication that a move was planned.

THE BUSINESS WEEK

Stock Market Begins to Show Recovery Signs

By JAMES T. McAUSLAND

NEW YORK (UPI)—The stock market began to show signs of recovery in last week and the diehard bulls attributed the comeback to the highly advertised, historical summer rally. Trading was moderately active.

The recovery, slow in starting, reached its peak on Wednesday when the Dow Jones Industrial Average, a closely watched market barometer, scored its second highest advance of the year but then petered out in the last two sessions as traders moved in to take profits.

Brokers have varied reasons for the market's strength but the consensus was that the market was correcting itself. With no real selling pressure behind the decline it stopped short of penetrating the 1966 lows. This in itself attracted support and, additionally the recovery was helped by reports that investment houses were purchasing large blocks of stock at higher prices.

NEWS FROM the Viet Nam front showed a mixed picture. Early in the week investors were cheered when a Washington official hinted that North Viet Nam might be getting "war weary."

These hopes were dimmed by later news that a Warsaw Pact conference would send volunteers to North Viet Nam if the government there requested them.

Great expectations for corporate results began to materialize when RCA announced record sales and ernings both for the second quarter and first half of the year.

Several other companies had improved reports but the bulk of the earnings news is still to come. If this early pace can be maintained brokers feel chances are good a real rise may get under way.

FUNDAMENTAL news, such as lagging car sales and the continued decline in steel production were discounted for the most part as seasonal.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average finished the week with a gain of 16.08 at 894.04. This is well above the low for the year, reached in May, but many analysts feel the market must decisively penetrate the 900 level, which has become a major upside resistance area, before a sustained advance can be accomplished.

Rails had a strong week, with their indicator jumping 6.05 to 233.30; the utility average gained 2.97 to 154.63 as that group finally moved out of the doldrums.

Standard & Poor's 500 stock index rose 2.00 to 87.61.

TRADING GOT off to a slow post-holiday start but picked up as the week wore on. For the four sessions, volume totaled 24,794,026 shares compared with 30,139,250 shares in the five sessions the week before. In the same week last year turnover totaled 15,622,930 shares.

Of the 1,536 issues to cross the tape, 984 worked higher, 406 declined and 146 remained unchanged, while 46 issues hit new 1966 highs and 146 hit new lows.

A number of large block transactions pushed Ampex into first place on the active list. The issue advanced 2½ to 24 on sales of 503,100 shares. Sperry Rand, the previous week's volume leader, dropped to second place and finished the week unchanged at 27½ on a turnover of 435,000 shares.

Addressograph-Multigraph, which some analysts feel has finally increased its earning potential, advanced 7 points to 69⅝ on 363,300 shares and was third most active.

United Aircraft plunged 6¼ to 78 on 331,000 shares following rumors that the company had been losing money in the second quarter but when officials stoutly denied these reports the stock pared its loss in the final session.

The high-flying glamor issues, once again, reaped the king-size portion of the gain.

* * * *

THE THREAT of the strike by the machinists union against five major domestic airlines gave the lines some trouble early in the week but when the strike was called on Friday, this group gave a good performance recalling the Wall Street adage, "Never sell on strike news."

KLM paced the gainers, jumping 8¾ and National advanced 4¼. Delta, Braniff, Northwest and TWA also made good progress. Several airlines announced record passenger and revenue milage for the month of June.

Fairchild Camera was the feature in the higher electronics, soaring 19¾. Motorola jumped 7¼ and Admiral was up 4⅛. IBM, Honeywell and Texas Instruments also made the plus column.

Steels had a dull week after showing promise on Wednesday. Sharon Steel continued its winning ways, however, climbing 2⅝.

* * * *

MOTORS MADE good progress. Ford and General Motors each rose 2¾ and Chrysler added 1⅞ in active trading. American Motors picked up ¼. DuPont led the way for the higher chemicals, leaping 13 points. Eastman Kodak jumped 3⅛.

American Telephone remained in the limelight, gaining 1¾ in active dealings. Kennecott stood out in a higher metals groups, jumping 3¾. The company announced it might purchase Peabody Coal. Peabody advanced 5½. Xerox climbed 6, Poloroid rose 7. Corning Glass gained 11½.

Griggs Awaits Term in Ex-Wife's Death; Body Found in L.B.

By FRED HAMLIN

Donald Lee Griggs, accused of slaying his ex-wife and hurling her nude bludgeoned body into the Los Angeles River shortly before last New Year's Eve, is in County Jail awaiting sentence for manslaughter.

The 35-year-old self-employed plasterer, confined without bail since his arrest after the body of Kitty Jo Griggs was found in the riverbed at Long Beach Jan. 16, was convicted by a Superior Court jury after a two-week trial.

DONALD LEE GRIGGS
Awaits Sentencing

Date for sentencing has not been set.

Postmortem examination disclosed the victim died of massive head wounds, presumably inflicted with a blunt instrument before her body, stripped of clothing, was thrown into the rain-swollen river.

Long Beach police identified the corpse through fingerprints as a 34-year-old Highland Park divorcee, mother of two young children, who was reported missing New Year's Day and who had last been seen the night of Dec. 29 outside a Highland Park bar with her former husband.

* * * *

HIGHLAND PARK authorities questioned and then arrested Griggs after, officers said, he admitted being with his ex-wife Dec. 29 but told what they called conflicting stories about his whereabouts that night. A complaint of first-degree murder later was filed against him.

Officers said Mrs. Griggs was slain during the night of Dec. 29-30 and her body hurled into the river at Arroyo Seco, about 25 miles upstream from where it was found two weeks later by three teen-age boys.

Court records show Griggs and his wife were divorced twice, the last time in September, 1962, and that he later remarried. The couple's son was living with Griggs at the time of the slaying, and their daughter had been staying with Mrs. Griggs, who shared an apartment in Highland Park with a woman friend.

San Joaquin Tops School District Valuation Gains

Assessment valuation increases in school districts in Orange County for the 1966-67 fiscal year range from a low of 1.5% at Magnolia in Anaheim, to a high of 94.1% at San Joaquin Elementary Distirct, it was disclosed last week.

Suspension on Bar Due to Embrace

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO—An onstage embrace between an exotic dancer and a sailor will cost a San Pedro beer bar a 30-day suspension.

That was the ruling of the state over a three-count complaint filed Nov. 12 against Li'l Farmer's Daughter, 135 W. Sixth St., San Pedro.

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Department charged that the embrace was "lewd entertainment."

ABC, accepting the recommendation of a hearing officer, ruled that 20 days of the suspension could be stayed provided there is no further penalty decision. Lesser 15-day suspensions, set to run concurrently, also were ordered on two other counts. One count was sales to minors, the other allowing minors to consume beer on the premises.

New Jersey to Test New 'Fog Broom'

NEW YORK (UPI) — New Jersey Highway Commissioner Russell H. Mullen said Saturday that a new device to wipe out fog—called a fog broom—is ready for full-scale outdoor testing.

Laboratory tests have been highly effective, said Mullen. He described the fog broom as a "wooden frame with thin strands of nylon on it, mounted on a road, and we rotate it."

The fog then condenses on the nylon string and the moisture drains to the ground, Mullen said. "Our next step now will be to find some foggy outdoors area and have a test to determine how we can install these on the highway system to help alleviate the fog problem."

Mullen said the highway department had received inquiries about the fog broom from other states, other countries and many commercial firms.

Foundation Aiding Press Scholarships

The James Irvine Foundation will again post $1,500 to help the Orange County Press Club underwrite scholarships it grants anually to student journalists in the county's high schools, junior colleges, colleges and universities.

The foundation granted $1,500 last year when it first joined the Press Club's effort to upgrade professional journalism and encourage promising young people to make journalism their careers.

The club has underwritten scholarships on its own for nine years, President Jerome Collins reminded. He announced the competitions will be in October, with selections to be announced in November, under chairmanship of Vi Ehinger.

Dial a Disc

LEEDS, England (UPI) — A new telephone service called "dial a disc" is being tried here. For the price of a local call, residents can hear the latest hit record.

R. L. Poper Joins Architect Group

Richard L. Poper has been named to the architectural board of the Los Altos Association, it was announced today by the board of directors.

Poper, of the Long Beach firm of Jones and Poper, was the architect for many residences in the association including several custom designs in Park Estates.

"We feel the addition of Dick Poper to our architectural board is another major step in our continuing effort to provide the best possible services to our Los Altos community," said association president Stephen J. Harney.

The architectural board of the Los Altos Association maintains the design standards for homes of the 5,300 members.

The award-winning architect is a graduate of the University of Southern California school of architecture. He grew up in Long Beach and attended both Wilson High and Long Beach City College.

Poper is active in professional and civic affairs including the American Institute of Architects, the Chamber of Commerce, the Century Club and the St. Mary's Hospital advisory board. He and his wife, Phyllis, were founding members of the Los Altos Methodist Church.

The Popers live at 2288 Albury Avenue with their children, Roy, Penny Lee and James.

Sub Duty to Torpedo Film Career

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Submarine duty will torpedo Anthony Teague's movie career just as he gets up a full head of steam.

Teague, 26, a tall, toothily handsome singer-dancer-actor, starts two years' active service in the Naval Reserve as soon as he finishes as the villain in "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying."

He chose submarines for "the adventure. They're something not too many people have experienced."

Juvenile Officer Gives Parents 'Tip'

Sgt. Andrew B. Pearson, who has retired after 23 years as a Long Beach Juvenile Officer, is returning to his old vocation, farming, but it will be a "leisurely avocation" this time.

In addition, Pearson will travel, fish and pursue his long time hobby of accordion playing with the farm at Wall Lake, Iowa, as his permanent residence.

Thinking back over the years and the number of children he has seen in trouble, Pearson has a few tips to offer parents.

1. Make it your business to know where your child is, who he is with and what they are doing.

2. Promote closer family relationships. Do things together. Don't let today's fast pace break down close family ties.

3. See to it that your child gets a good religious education. It will stand them in good stead all their lives.

4. Don't encourage your children to grow up too fast, or to become too sophisticated at an early age. They lack the necessary experience and are a cinch to get into trouble.

On the whole, Pearson said, he has found the great majority of parents are conscientious in trying to raise their children properly and that most children are good young citizens.

Pearson played with Violet Berggren's orchestra at the old Cinderella Ballroom on East Seaside Blvd. for 14 years and for many years with the police department's quartet, the Beat Men. He also appeared at many civic functions and on television.

Bradley, Merrins Ousted

By DOUG IVES

Steel-nerved Bob McCallister watched his opponent sink four consecutive birdie putts of over 22 feet and then fought back for an amazing 19th hole victory Saturday to become the sentimental as well as odds-on favorite today in the Southern California championship finals at Recreation Park.

His opposition in the 36-hole finale, to begin at 9:30 a.m., will be Bud Holscher, who has been in the title match four times in the last six years and who, like McCallister, did a lot of coming from behind to be in a position for the $3,000 top prize.

Scrambling all the way, Holscher outlasted sweet-swinging Eddie Merrins 1 up in the afternoon after rallying three times to beat Paul McGuire 2 up in the morning contest.

Still, it was the McCallister-Wally Bradley afternoon match that must rank with one of the greatest ever in this 42-year-old event. Certainly McCallister's comeback and Bradley's string of birdie putts left the large gallery oohing and aahing.

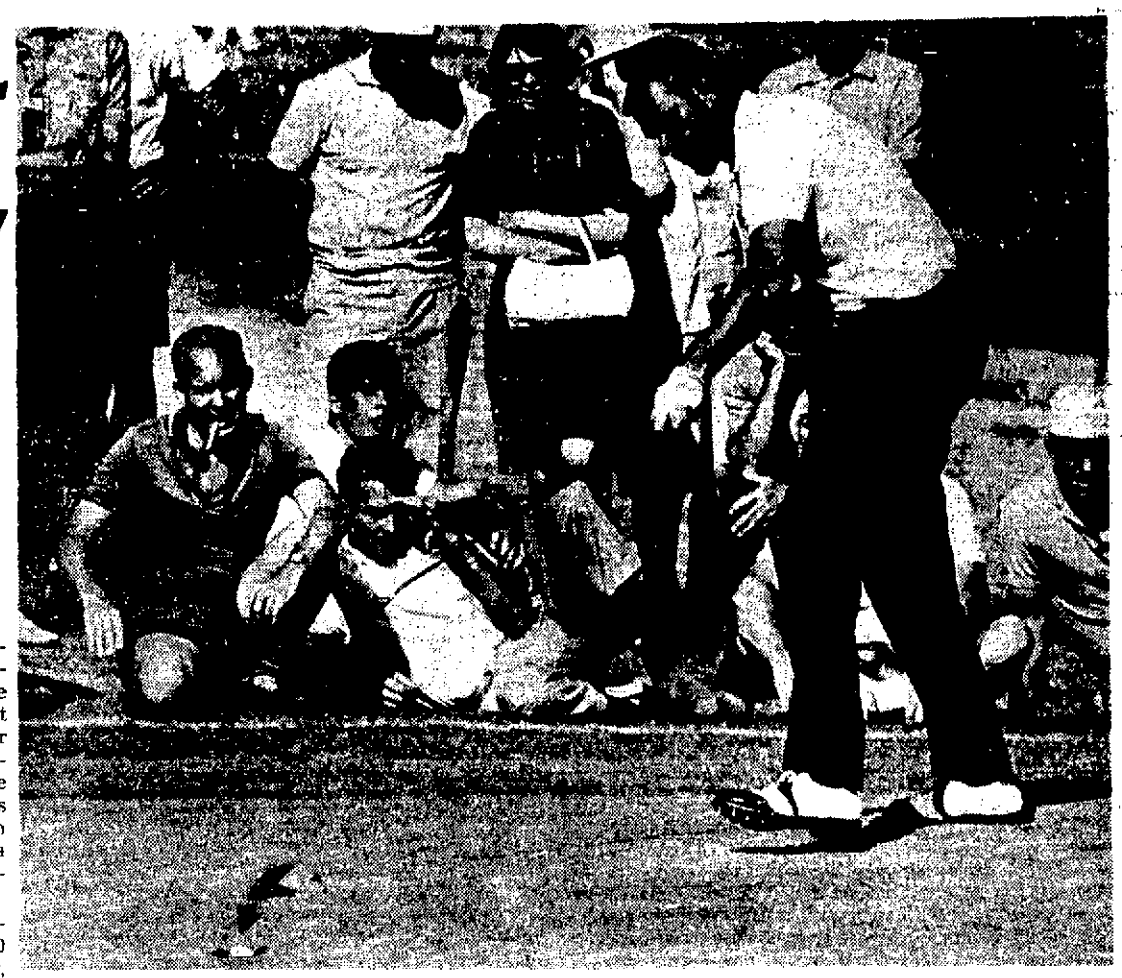

Both players shot 6-under par 66s for the 18 holes, with McCallister never leading and trailing from the 11th hole until he canned a 7-foot birdie putt on the 18th to even the match.

Then on the first extra hole it appeared all of the Corona strongboy's comeback efforts would go up in smoke as he left his second shot 25 feet short and Bradley chipped to within 4 feet.

Showing virtually no emotion prior to this time, even though he had plenty of reason to, McCallister danced a jig and flipped his putter two feet in the air when he rammed home his putt to switch the pressure onto Bradley.

BALTIMORE — Jackie Warner, who issued the Angels a play me or trade me prerogative earlier this week, delivered the Wright answer himself Saturday night.

Warner's two-run homer converted the resolute pitching of Clyde Wright and Minnie Rojas into a 2-1 nightcap victory over the awesome Birds.

Earlier, an Angel losing streak here reached 10 as the Big O's zeroed in on Dean Chance, Jack Sanford and Bob Lee for 15 hits and a 10-2 landslide.

Given a second chance, the Big A's held their ground, turned half of four hits into runs while Baltimore wasted 10 hits and assured themselves of a second consecutive successful safari.

While expanding their fourth place advantage over Minnesota to six games, the Angels lifted the record for this trip to 6-4 while achieving only their second win in 10 nightmares with the Orioles this season.

Through the opener, the Birds had feasted on 118 hits, including 16 homers, while scoring 63 runs in nine games with the Angels.

This was the magnitude of Wright's assignment.

And the 23-year-old lefty could do no wrong. He was racked for eight hits and a run through four rounds, but then regained the touch which produced an 8-1 decision in his major league debut and a heartbreaking 1-0 set-back in his ensuing start.

Inspired by the presence of his father, three brothers, one sister and "several kinfolk" who drove the 600 miles from his Jefferson City, Tenn., home, Wright did not allow a hit during the three crucial middle innings.

Then, "very tired," he retired and Rojas (1.22 ERA) preserved the thin margin with his fourth save. Ironically, manager Bill Rigney has special plans for Wright (3-2) following the All-Star break.

"We desperately need a lefthander in the bullpen and I think Wright would do a great job in relief," said Rigney. "From now on, Jack Sanford will be my spot starter."

Much to Warner's dissatisfaction, Rigney's platooning plans remain the same. Jackie will be in the lineup against lefty Steve Barber today, but righthanders will lodge Warner on the bench.

Warner splintered a Dave McNally (7-3) fast ball into the rightfield seats in the second after Bobby Knoop had singled up the middle.

Knoop had stranded seven runners in the opener, but Warner's seventh homer stranded the Orioles,

West Reigns --Fleet Host Derby Victor

By ERNIE MASON

While the three top choices staged a furious come-from-behind battle for runner-up honors, Fletcher Jones' lightly-regarded Fleet Host turned the 26th running of the $120,500 Hollywood Derby into a solo performance at Hollywood Park Saturday as he romped to a 2½ length win in the mile and one-quarter classic.

Perfectly rated by Jerry Lambert, who has had plenty of front-running experience on Native Diver, Fleet Host ran his early rivals into the ground with an opening mile in 1.35⅕ and then had enough speed in reserve to charge home with a final clocking of 2.00⅖.

It was the first stakes victory for Jones, a youthful Southern California electronics magnate who has invested heavily in yearling sales the past three years. But Fleet Host became a "bargain buy." The colt was purchased for $9,000 at the 1964 Del Mar sales and pumped $75,500 into the stable coffers with his win.

For his backers in the crowd of 48,084, it was a "bargain win," Fleet Host returning $39.20 for $2 on

Revival of Blades Puts Cooke on Spot

By RICH ROBERTS

We're being watched, quietly and from afar, as Jack Kent Cooke worries to resolve his hockey war with the Blades.

Officially, the National Hockey League takes no position in the dispute that could wreck its plans for expanding in 1967.

Without Los Angeles, expansion is doubtful. It's the keystone of national television plans already under way.

Statements emanating from Montreal merely back up the original grant of the franchise to Cooke, in that "there's no problem. He's our man until he fails to fulfill his commitments."

Ah, but there's the key to the Blades' case ". . . until he fails to fulfill his commitments."

The Independent, Press-Telegram is informed by a source close to NHL policy that the league's attitude is this:

"In the event that there shall be any valid claims by existing professional leagues or teams for territorial rights in the city of any new conditional franchise, such franchise shall not become final unless the new franchise holder has presented to the National Hockey League evidence satisfactory to the NHL of the satisfaction in full of such claims."

So, as far as the NHL is concerned, it's strictly between Cooke and the Blades.

Cooke, then, is on the spot to settle with the Blades, who have no intention of settling for anything short of the franchise itself.

"We made overtures to Dan Reeves some three weeks ago," Cooke says. "An intermediary informed our attorney, Deane Johnson, that the Blades were willing to talk. But when our attorney contacted their attorney, Mr. (Alfred) Marshall, he knew nothing about it. We haven't done anything since."

Obviously, Cooke would like to talk to the Blades about indemnities, the payoff customarily awarded to displaced teams.

But the Blades don't want Cooke's money. They want his franchise.

This opinion disputes the consensus view that Reeves is just looking for a fat payoff for not dragging expansion into the courts.

However, it's illogical that Reeves would have cut in Tony Owen, another unsuccessful bidder, for 50% of the action if he was just out for indemnities.

Reeves cut in Owen, who in turn cut in some associates of his own, as a fresh supply of capital to operate a successful minor league club — the Blades — this season.

In their first five years in Los Angeles, the Blades underestimated the importance of success in the minors, financially and artistically, and it cost them dearly in NHL prestige. They don't intend to repeat the error.

Executive director Jack Geyer says, "We'll spend

Home Runs of Braves Rip Dodgers

By GEORGE LEDERER

Sandy Koufax allowed three home runs for the first time in three years as the Dodgers' winning streak ended at five games Saturday night.

The Atlanta Braves handed Koufax his fourth defeat, 5-2, before a ladies night turnout of 55,170. Ken Johnson (8-6) was the winner.

The loss knocked the Dodgers five games behind the league-leading Giants.

Felipe Alou homered twice and Hank Aaron once for the four runs charged to Koufax.

Willie Davis' eight-inning homer, his third, produced the Dodger runs.

Johnson retired the side in order for the first time in the fifth inning and the Braves came out swinging in the sixth.

Alou hit his 19th home run and, one out later, Aaron belted No. 26 for a 2-0 lead.

There were two oddities on Alou's homer. The run was unearned because Roseboro dropped his four popup two pitches previously. Also, it was Alou's 18th homer with the bases empty.

Aaron's homer was his third at Dodger Stadium this year. He is the only opposing player with more than one here this season.

The last time Koufax allowed two homers in a game also was against the Braves. Bolling hit a grand slam and Jones a solo at Milwaukee last Sept. 22. The Dodgers came back to win 7-6 in 11 innings for the sixth win of their 13-game streak.

The two-homers-in-one-game statistic lasted only an inning. Alou homered again in the seventh, this time with a man on to make it 4-0. Woody Woodward had singled ahead of Alou's 20th.

Koufax also was taken off the hook the last time he allowed three homers in a game. Ernie Banks hit a pair and Ron Santo one against Koufax at Chicago, June 9, 1963, but the Dodgers won 11-8 and Koufax was not involved in the decision.

Koufax left for a hitter in the seventh, Dick Stuart grounding into an inning-ending force after Lefebvre

Those N.Y. Giants Have Kick Coming

New York Times Service

NEW YORK—"The entire strategic approach to a football game," said Allie Sherman, "can be seriously affected by the lack of a reliable field goal kicker. The addition of Pete Gogolak should make life a lot easier for us."

Allie should know. The boy optimist who coaches the New York football Giants will preside at the opening of pre-season training camp at Fairfield University Monday, buoyed up by the knowledge that he no longer will have to contend with one major problem which bedeviled him at this time a year ago.

Then he had no experienced placement booter, only a slew of distressingly inaccurate feet. So the Giants kicked only four field goals in 25 attempts, and that doesn't count the number of times when they might ordinarily have tried but didn't bother because it was hopeless.

When Gogolak played out his option with the Buffalo Bills of the Other League and thus became a free agent, the Yankee Stadium tenants welcomed him to their midst because this soccer-type booter is an expert at his trade.

IN LIGHT OF THE GRAVITY of the handicap imposed on them by the unproductivity of their placements kickers a year ago, it's remarkable that the Giants rebounded with such violence from their collapse to last place the previous season. They tied for second with Dallas at 7-7. Certainly it isn't gaudy, but it is unmistakable progress.

"There are two ways of looking at a 7-7 record," said the realistic Allie. "It can be dismissed as .500 ball, or it can be regarded as I regard our showing, a strong 7-7. We gambled with rookies and the kids improved so fast over the second half of the season that they were saying near the end, "Gee, if we only had a few more games, we would win the championship.' I couldn't go that far, but I had to admire their spirit.

"Because those kids matured so fast, we've rebuilt both our offensive and defensive backfields. This year we'll try to rebuild our lines with special emphasis on our pass rush. Last year it was nondescript to say the least. But we've made trades, have key men returning from the injured list, and should get help from a great crop of rookies, especially Francis Peay and Don Davis.

"FURTHERMORE, WE NOW HAVE Earl Morrall, fifth leading passer in the league, settled into our system instead of being tossed unprepared among us just before the next-to-last exhibition game. He did a fine job and should do better because Gogolak will make such a tremendous difference in all strategic concepts.

"No longer will the quarterback be under the pressure of having to mount long drives. He can play his control percentages better, and once he gets inside the 30 where the defenses mass against him, he won't be forced to the utter necessity of having to hammer away for a first down. He can settle for a field goal.

"This makes the entire ball club more relaxed because they show tension when they know they don't have a reliable field goal kicker. A field goal still isn't as good as a touchdown, but it's better than no points at all and the empty, despairing feeling a team gets when a scoring drive ends in total frustration.

"I'd guess that we could have won a couple or three more games last year with a solid field goal kicker. But it's the timing of those three points that's so important, and the values can't always be measured in the final score.

"SOMETIMES THE PRESSURES created on the other fellow are more important than the points. Maybe he can be pressured into going for seven instead of three. Maybe his game plan can be disrupted by a succession of threes and a close one blown wide open. A Lou Groza, for instance, gives the defense the jitters once Cleveland gets much past midfield. Perhaps Gogolak can do the same for us.

"Since I'm speaking of kicking, I'd advise you to keep an eye on Ernie Koy. That boy is about to bring back the lost art of coffin-corner punting. Those kicks that go out of bounds inside the five. He also can quick-kick, although the modern tendency is to get away from yielding the ball.

"The older I get the more I think back to Slingin' Sammy Baugh. As far as kicking is concerned, Sammy was a victim of his own great passing. What a kicker he was! But his passing obscured his real craftsmanship as a punter, especially as a quick-kicker from the old single wing formation.

"I've seen him on third down not only boot those line drives over the head of the safety man, but angle them so artfully the ball would go out of bounds on the six-yard line. Don't forget that he holds the playoff record fore the longest punt, 85 yards."

Allie now can discuss all phases of kicking with a bubbling confidence. He couldn't last year.

Phils Survive 3 Cub HRs for 11-6 Win

CHICAGO (UPI) — Pitcher Larry Jackson hit a two-run homer and the Philadelphia Phillies survived three Chicago home runs Saturday to gain their 10th victory in 11 games this season with the Cubs, 11-6.

Jackson's blast and a squeeze bunt by Dick Groat gave the Phillies three runs in the sixth inning and they added two more in the seventh

Reds' Loss Skein Soars to 11, 8-7

Combined News Services

SAN FRANCISCO — Tom Haller hit a two-out, two-run homer in the 12th inning, giving the San Francisco Giants an 8-7 victory over Cincinnati Saturday and extending the Reds' losing streak to 11.

The victory enabled the Giants to maintain their two-game National League lead over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Reds, who have the longest losing streak in the majors this season, went ahead 7-6 with an unearned run in the top of the 12th on Tito Fuentes' error.

But with two out in the Giants' half of the inning Fuentes hit a trickler toward the mound. Pitcher Joe Nuxhall picked up the ball and fired to first. The ball, however, sailed into right field, and Fuentes reached second on the hit and error.

Haller then came up and hit his 19th homer.

The runs were the first of the game for the Giants that Willie McCovey did not drive in.

McCovey, having one of his great afternoons, sent the game into overtime by belting his second two-run homer of the contest in the bottom of the ninth to tie the score at 6-6. Southpaw Bill McCool, who had taken over for the injured Jim Maloney in the seventh, served up the home run ball.

McCovey, who now has 17 homers this year, smashed a two-run shot in the first inning, drove across another tally in the fifth with a 400-foot double, then hit a single off Maloney's knee in the seventh to drive in his fourth run. The hit sent Maloney to the hospital for X-rays.

The Reds, with the aid of a bases-empty homer by Art Shamsky, held a 6-3 lead when the Giants came to bat in the seventh.

DODGERS--

and Kennedy had singled. Sandy allowed four runs on seven hits, walked one and struck out three.

Bob Miller became the Dodger pitcher in the eighth, making his first appearance since June 25.

The home stand ends today with Claude Osteen (11-6) opposing Denny Lemaster (6-5).

It was almost 9 when the last of the capacity crowd was seated, but the stragglers didn't miss much.

Koufax labored through the first inning, making 25 pitches, although only lead-off batter Felipe Alou hit the ball out of the infield. Alou doubled sharply down the left field line and remained at second while Mack Jones fanned, Hank Aaron fouled out, Rico Carty walked and Torre popped up.

The Braves managed only one more base runner through the fifth inning. Carty was safe on a rare John Kennedy error in the fourth and reached second on the same play when rookie left fielder Jim Barbieri's throw was wild.

Johnson had trouble in each of the first four innings, although only one Dodger reached third base.

Barbieri led off with a bunt single, but was out at third after Frank Bolling muffed Maury Wills' grounder. Johnson balked Wills to second, but got Willie Davis on strikes and Ron Fairly on a pop to end the inning.

A threat in the second inning ended as only the Dodgers can end one. Johnson walked John Roseboro to start it and gave up singles to Wes Parker and Jim Lefebvre, but there were two out when Lefebvre made his turn at first.

Lefebvre actually singled into a double play. Aaron threw out Roseboro at the plate and Torre nailed Parker, attempting to take third. Kennedy hit into a force to end it.

Wills bounced into a double play after Barbieri walked in the third and Lefebvre flied out after Roseboro singled and Parker walked in the fourth. Johnson caught W. Davis' liner in self-defense to start the inning.

Fryman's Scoreless String Broken, But Pirates Win

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Rookie Woody Fryman had his consecutive scoreless inning streak snapped at 31⅔ Saturday but pitched the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 6-3 victory over the New York Mets with the help of Willie Stargell's three runs-batted-in.

Fryman, who won his fourth straight game while raising his record to 8-3 scattered eight hits as he lost his bid for a fourth straight shutout in the fifth inning. Ron Hunt singled in Billly Murphy, who singled and went to second on a sacrifice, to snap Fryman's string.

The Mets added a run in the eighth when Cleon Jones tripled and scored on Roy McMillan's sacrifice fly and in the ninth when Chuck Hiller hit a pinch triple and scored on a passed ball.

Stargell singled in a first-inning run and hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning, his 22nd of the season, to lead the Pirate attack.

The Pirates also scored two in the fifth when Jose Pagan doubled in two runs after Manny Mota beat out a bunt and took third on Roberto Clemente's double.

McLain's 13th Tops Twins, 8-1

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (UPI)—Al Kaline drove in four runs with two homers and a sacrifice fly Saturday to combine with Denny McLain in leading the Detroit Tigers to a 8-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

McLain held the Tigers to two hits in registering his 13th victory. One of the hits was a home run by Tony Oliva, in the seventh, which not only broke up McLain's shutout bid but also snapped his string of scoreless innings against the Twins at 22.

Zoilo Versalles led off for the Twins in the first inning with a clean single and from that point until Oliva stroked his 17th homer, McLain had allowed only one man to reach first.

Holy Homer! Angels Stop Baltimore to Gain Split

whose record since June 1 is indeed something to crow about.

The first game was indicative of the destruction Baltimore is showing throughout the junior circuit, which is growing old in a hurry under the Orioles' runaway feet.

They were leading only 2-1 after six when the roof descended and Baltimore shingled seven runs to the scoreboard in the seventh and eighth.

Brooks (No. 17) and Frank (No. 21) Robinson each slugged two-run homers while Luis Aparicio collected three singles and equalled two Oriole records by scoring four times and stealing three bases.

Robinson thus regained his league RBI lead from Boog Powell, 70-67, while F. Robinson (56) ranks third.

This made it easy for Jim Palmer (9-4) and Eddie Fisher while Dean Chance (7-10) absorbed his eighth defeat in 14 career decisions with Baltimore.

The American League race reminds you of the television commercial in which the young boy runs through the woods crying, "Oriole, Oriole, Oriole."

It is doubtful this cookie will crumble.

ANGEL ANGLES: Victory in opener was 1,000th by Baltimore since re-joining the American League in 1954 . . . ## Largest Card Turnout Sees 7-1 Triumph

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ray Washburn pitched St. Louis to its first victory over Houston in five games this season as the Cardinals whipped the Astros 7-1 Saturday night before a capacity crowd of 47,650.

The crowd, attracted by a bat night promotion, was the largest ever to see a sports event in St. Louis.

Washburn, who had a six-hit shutout until the Astros pushed across their run in the eighth inning, was supported by a 13-hit attack that included a key double by Charley Smith in a three-run second inning and a two-run homer by Jerry Buchek in the fourth.

The Cardinals collected the five runs off 19-year-old Larry Dierker, who had a 3-0 record against St. Louis over two seasons.

In the second inning, Mike Shannon singled, Smith doubled and one run scored on a fielder's choice and Sonny Jackson's error.

Indians Win, Snap Streak

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Chico Salmon collected four hits and Rocky Colavito drove in two runs, leading Cleveland to a 6-3 victory over Kansas City Saturday night that ended the Indians' losing streak at six.

The triumph also slowed down the surging A's, who had won five of their previous six and had defeated Cleveland starter Gary Bell twice. Bell, however, went the distance despite allowing eight hits.

RICH ROBERTS

The Fervor of Lefebvre

"I think the hardest part is living the life of a ballplayer . . . being in public all the time. The easiest part is playing the game."—Jim Lefebvre of the Dodgers.

The National League's All-Star second baseman leaned into his lunchtime breakfast like a hanging curve ball and probed the ironies of baseball.

A week ago Jim Lefebvre and Bart Shirley were Dodger roommates at a downtown Los Angeles hotel. Tuesday Shirley will be in Spokane and Lefebvre will be in St. Louis, putting them at the opposite poles of baseball.

"I really did think a little bit about that, taking Bart to the airport," Lefebvre says, gulping down his orange juice and carving a clean slice in half a cantaloupe.

"You realize that this is a game where people forget real easy. You can be a star one day and the next day you're a bum. You see a guy like this, who came up but really didn't have much of a chance to play because . . . we had Maury Wills and John Kennedy, so he really didn't have a position to play.

"But he wasn't bitter at all. He could have been. He told me, 'You have to be lucky in this game. I sure hope I'm lucky now'."

LEFEBVRE IS PLAYING only his second season of major league ball himself, and in other circumstances it might have been Shirley driving him to the airport. However, Jim is intelligent enough to realize that even rookies of the year aren't that far from the farm.

"I always felt the sophomore jinx was more of a mental thing than anything else," he says, shoving aside the hollow cantaloupe skin. "A player goes out his first year and has a good year, makes the ball club and feels he's got it made and doesn't have to work hard anymore.

"Then he goes out and has a bad year and they call it the 'sophomore jinx.' I just watched other guys and could see their attitudes, and decided it wasn't going to happen to me."

For his budding 23 years, Jim is not embarrassed when asked for an estimate of his own abilities.

"I feel I'm the best second baseman in the league," he says without bravado. "Of course, (Houston's Joe) Morgan won the vote, and it's a shame he's hurt and can't play because I know what kind of ballplayer he is. He's a real hard worker and it probably means a lot to him. He's a great guy.

"I don't think it's positive thinking when you go around saying, 'I'm the best . . . I'm the best.' If you really don"t believe you're the best it's just false confidence.

"But if a guy really feels that he is the best player out there then I feel that he can play much better. It's a matter of relaxing. He knows he's a good ballplayer. He doesn't have to go out there and show everybody. He just goes out there and plays good baseball."

LEFEBVRE, IGNORING the poached eggs for the moment, slops catsup on his hashed browns and attacks the steak.

"Last year I lived down at the beach with my folks. It took me about 45 minutes to drive to the ballpark. I was fighting the traffic, and by the time I got to the park I was a nervous wreck.

"So now I'm in the hotel here where I can have my meals, have somebody make my bed, somebody else take care of my clothes . . . don't have to worry about driving here and driving back.

"My parents . . . well, when I'd come home from a game sometimes I'd just want to be left alone. But the main reason is that it's more convenient."

Lefebvre took a long swig of milk and pondered the price of fame.

"Signing autographs and talking to people . . . you're obligated to do this. I think it's great, but sometimes it gets a little too personal and takes a lot away from your private life.

"You repeat yourself all the time, because reporters have the same ideas in what they want to know. I just tell 'em exactly the way I feel. At first it put me on the spot. I didn't know exactly what to say. I was afraid I'd make a mistake or couldn't express myself. But I'm not nervous at all anymore."

With fame, of course, comes sophistication, which hasn't had time to creep up on Lefebvre.

"Gee, I hope not," he says, turning to the eggs at last. "I really hadn't thought about that too much . . . how to act. I've just lived my life. I just try to be nice to people."

WITH HIS GROWING affluence, Lefebvre has turned over all of his personal and financial affairs to a business advisor "so that I have only one job to do—play baseball."

He laughs when asked about his car washing business in Long Beach.

"That's not me at all. It's my cousin. His name's Lefebvre, too. He was opening up this car wash a couple of weeks ago, so he asked me to come down. So I said 'fine.' If people assume it's my car wash, let 'em assume. I hope he does well."

However, Jim does admit to another sideline—a boys summer baseball camp on Catalina.

"Before when the family was doing it, it was just called the Catalina Baseball Camp. Now we call it Jim Lefebvre's Catalina Baseball Camp, for publicity and stuff like that. We've gone a little more elaborate, too."

Jim's twin brother Tippy runs the camp, assisted by a staff of counselors, and Jim says, "I try to get over once every two weeks just to talk to the boys."

Swabbing up the last of the eggs with a slice of toast, he says he tells them things like this:

"Everyhody has certain limitations. I can't steal 104 bases or I can't hit 60 home runs. But there's one thing I can do just as well as those guys, and that's give 100%."

BASEBALL'S GUIDED TOUR

All-Star Game a 'Busch' Affair

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

ST. LOUIS — This is where they're interrupting the baseball season to put on the largest guided stadium tour in history.

It's called the 37th annual All-Star Game, but it's really an excuse to introduce the players of both leagues, and assorted fans, to the architectural joys of new Busch Stadium.

Next year, it's Anaheim, and then we can look forward to the Astrodome, Atlanta and Chavez Ravine, by which time they should also have a major league team in Oakland.

There's a game played, too, but it has become incidental to the pension plan and the real reason they have the All-Star break—so that 450 of the 500 players in the American and National Leagues can enjoy a brief, three-day, midsummer vacation.

The All-Star Game used to be a fiesta that grabbed the imagination because of the spectacle of the game's greatest stars joined in action on a single field. The cult of the hero was still in existence, and Babe Ruth hit a home run in the very first game in 1933 to win it for the American League.

Then in 1934 Carl Hubbell, the old Meal Ticket of the New York Giants, struck out Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx, Al Simmons and Joe Cronin in order.

But I had to stretch my memory even to remember that Johnny Callison won the 1964 game in Shea Stadium with a ninth-inning, three-run swat off Dick Radatz.

* * * *

THE GAME started to go downhill when the players, eager to fill their pension bags, prodded baseball into playing two All-Star Games in 1959. And soon they all became a mish-mash of tawdry, sloppy contests—e.g., seven errors in the 1961 butchery at Candlestick Park.

That's the year they start to cash in on the novelty of new stadia. So it was Washington in '62 and Shea in '64 and Bloomington, Minn., last summer.

"Anywhere," said the players, "we can pack 'em in."

A couple of weeks before the teams for this year's game were announced, an American League star—one who had played in nine previous All-Star spectacles—was asked if he thought he had a chance to make this year's team.

"I hope not," he said. "I'd rather have the three days off."

And that feeling is not unusual. Sometimes, they play like it too. The American League, which won eight of the first 11 games played, now has won only one of the last nine.

It's one symptom of the change in baseball. Another is the fact that Ebbets Field and the Polo Grounds are no longer eligible All-Star sites.

BUSCH MEMORIAL STADIUM, brand new this year, is site of the 37th All-Star game. It is expected to draw more than 50,000 fans, largest crowd ever to see a sport event in Missouri.

A.L., MELE DETERMINED TO WIN

Special From a Staff Writer

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL —American Leaguers are fed up with National League successes in All-Star games and World Series in recent years and are on the verge of turning the tide, Minnesota manager Sam Mele says.

"The players we've got on this team," said Mele, who will manage the American League against the National League All-Stars Tuesday in St. Louis, "realize they've been beaten pretty regularly by the National League.

"I think it's getting to be a little embarrassing, and they want to stop it."

For that reason, Mele said he plans to all-out in a bid to end NL domination of the All-Star game, including the playing of his eight regulars all the way if necessary.

"I'm going to win this one," said Mele resolutely. "If it means playing a lot of guys, fine. If it doesn't mean playing a lot, that's fine, too. We'll play to win."

A Latvian From Whitewater--Ram Scouting Triumph

By AL LARSON

If you were a football scout, would you sign a native Latvian boy who played for Whitewater State, Wisc.? The Rams did.

The name Vilnis Ezerins won't ring a bell with Southland grid connoisseurs, but to fans at such college outposts as Stout, Stevens Point, Platteville, Eau Claire and Oshkosh, they're only too happy the 217-pound fullback has departed the scene.

The 21-year-old war refugee from the small Baltic nation, now a Soviet satellite, is one of six rookie halfbacks bidding for a job at the Rams' summer camp in Orange.

Vilnis, who goes by the name "Ezz" because "it's short and easier to say," came to this country at age five.

"My parents escaped from Latvia in 1944 when the Communists took over. I was only three months at the time, and for the next five years we lived in Germany," Vilnis related.

"Then in 1949 our family was sponsored to come to this country. We settled in Albany, N.Y., for two years, then moved to Union Grove, Wisc., when I was about eight.

"After high school I received some financial aid and was able to attend Whitewater State, which is about 45 miles from Milwaukee.

"I'd always had an interest in animals and plants, so I majored in biology with a physical education minor.

"My brother had played end for the University of Wisconsin and he's the one that got me interested in football. I played defense part of my freshman year, then shifted to offense the middle of the season. I've played offense ever since."

The big 6-1½ blond runner, who hits with a wallop, had his finest season as a senior last year. He gained 1,073 yards on 171 carries for a 6.2 average.

The heart of the Warhearts' team was rewarded with small college all-America recognition as well as being plucked by the Rams on the eighth round of last year's draft.

What are Ezerins' chances of sticking with the Rams?

"He has fine natural running ability," backfield coach Ted Marchibroda said following a 20-minute scrimmage Saturday. "He has quickness. He can stop on a dime and pick up speed in a hurry."

"He's a quick learner, which is so important here since we throw a lot of new material at them right at the start. It's still too early to tell what kind of a receiver he is. We feel halfback is the best possible spot for him," Marchibroda added.

Vilnis, who speaks in a shy manner, said at home when he was away from the football field he found enjoyment in painting.

"I picked this up from my brother, Elmars, too. I like to do oils. I did one of Jackie Kennedy a couple of years ago which I think is the nicest painting I've done."

Asked to name Latvia's greatest sports hero, Vilnis admitted he couldn't think of any one individual. But he quickly added, "Actually, my brother was one of the better Latvian athletes. He played in the 1963 Rose Bowl game against USC. He also was Big Ten shotput and discus champ in '62."

If there are any native Latvians living in Long Beach, let's hear it for Vilnis Ezerins. And if you send telegrams, don't forget to sign it "Laba Laime —Good Luck."

Falcons Pick Sparks West

ATLANTA (UPI) — Unheralded Randy Johnson staged his third amazing all-star performance with a record passing show Saturday night to lead the West to a 24-7 victory over the East in the sixth annual Coaches All-America football game.

Johnson, the former Texas A. and I. quarterback who was a surprise high draft choice by the new Atlanta Falcons, passed for two touchdowns and ran for a third in the first college all-star game ever played in Atlanta.

Throwing short, dead-eye tosses, Johnson completed 24 of 38 passes for 237 yards. This was two more completions than the previous record for this game set by George Mira of Miami for the East in 1964.

Johnson was an overwhelming choice in balloting by newsmen as the most valuable player in the game.

The underdog East took a 7-0 lead early in the first period when a pass interference call gave it the ball at the West one yard line. Fullback Jim Grabowski of Illinois went across on the next play and Charles Gogolak of Princeton kicked the extra point.

But Johnson took control of the game in the second period.

Fullback Walt Garrison of Oklahoma State went over from 11 yards out after Johnson's passes got the West in scoring position and Johnson passed five yards to Jim Lindsey of Arkansas for another tally with a minute left in the first half.

In the fourth period, Johnson ran over from three yards out and five minutes later passed 15 yards to Donnie Anderson of Texas Tech for the West's final touchdown.

Steve Sloan of Alabama, the East quarterback who will be battling Johnson for the Falcons' post, was completely overshadowed by his future teammate as he was constantly harassed by the hard-rushing West defense.

The game, played the first five years in Buffalo, N.Y., was switched this year to Atlanta. The crowd of 38,236 although some 12,000 below capacity, was nearly 13,000 larger than the biggest crowd at Buffalo.

Easy Victory for Grelle in 'Tuneup'

Jim Grelle won the 3,000 meters in leisurely time of 8:03.8 Saturday as a group of top athletes turned up in the Santa Monica Invitational track meet for meets with Poland and Russia.

The 29-year-old Grelle put on his familiar burst of speed in the last 200 yards to beat out Pat Traynor of the 49er Track Club, who was timed in 8:04.4, and George Young of Casa Grande, Ariz., 8:05.0.

Oregon's Neil Steinhauser was the lone double winner. He won the shotputt at 63-4 and the discus at 170-11.

The No. 1 U.S. sprint team of Charlie Greene, George Anderson, Tom Jones and Jim Hines, won the 400-meter relay in 39.6.

The No. 2 sprint team was disqualified for dropping the baton on the handoff from John Moon to Adolph Plummer.

So they ran the relay again and the No. 2 team of Bill Gaines, Harold Busy, Muon and Plummer was the winner in 39.7 and the No. 1 team was disqualified for passing the baton out of the zone, Jones to Hines.

John Pennel won the pole vault at 17-½ with fewer misses at the height, with Paul Wilson second.

Both Pennel and Wilson tried for a world record at 17-6, but failed.

Whether it would have been a record was debated by officials. The standards had been illegally placed 15 feet apart instead of the regulation 13-1. After the two cleared 17-¼ the cross bar was sawed shorter and the standards moved in to the required width.

The Polish meet is next weekend at Berkeley and the Russians appear at the Coliseum July 23-24.

The squad will assemble in Berkeley Monday.

DOWNEY LOSES AGAIN

Nu-Pike Routs Commerce

LOS ALTOS HILLS (AP) — Three California teams — Foothill, El Segundo and Long Beach — each won a third straight game Saturday for a three-way tie in the Senior Men's National AAU outdoor water polo championships at Foothill College.

The competition continues today.

Foothill Aquatic Club's A team, the defending champion, beat San Francisco's Olympic Club, 10-2. Bill Birch, defending his title as the champion scorer, tossed in three goals.

The El Segundo Swim Club defeated the San Mateo Bulldogs, 11-4, with Bob Saari scoring three times.

The Inland Nu-Pike Club of Long Beach defeated City of Commerce, 12-6. Stanley Cole of the winners scored four times and raised his tourney-leading total to 14.

Foothill Aquatic Club's B team upset the Downey Aquatic Club, 7-5. It was Downey's second loss.

Color Doug Sanders a Dollar Bill Green

Newspaper Enterprise Association

NEW YORK (NEA)—The British gentleman—"a tweedy type" — kept ogling Doug Sanders' green shoes and insisting he must have them. They were just the right size —9½-C.

"I'm sorry, old chap," drawled Doug. "You can't have 'em."

"I'll give you 100 pounds for them." That's $240 American folding money.

"But my whole outfit would outfit would be ruined," Doug be ruined," Doug shook his head and went back to playing golf, with green turtleneck shirt, green sweater and green slacks to match. When the tournament, the British Open, was over, Sanders went looking for the tweedy chap.

"I was going to give him the shoes for nothing," mused Doug, "but I couldn't find him."

Sanders has left a trail of "old" golf shoes all around the world, in pastel shades ranging from pink to purple.

Every three months a manufacturer in Brockton, Mass., sends Sanders 20 pairs of golf shoes, with color swatches to match. Doug then sends the samples to his shirt manufacturer who passes them on to his sweater manufacturer who ships them on to his slacks manufacturer.

"Sometimes," said Doug, "the colors are hard to match. I'm lucky if I come out of it with 10 different outfits."

So one day he shows up on the course all in canary yellow, shoulders to shoes, and the next day in cerise, then maybe in mauve. And along the tour he discards his old outfits, giving them to the clubhouse boys or any golf nut who approximates his size.

I mean, where do you find shoe polish in such hues as ultramarine blue, viridian or fuchsia?

"I use the greasy kid stuff on them," grinned Doug. But when they get scuffed, he goes looking for another size 9½-C. That way he keeps his closets roomy. He goes through 50 outfits a year.

Doug's affinity for multicolored ensembles has become his identification tag. He has even tried to spread it to his buddies. He has an exhibition match scheduled for Pensacola, Fla., in which one of his playing partners will be Chuck Connors, the old first baseman turned movie star. Doug was going to surprise him with a pair of exotic shoes — in fact, leathers to match the rainbow for the whole foursome.

"Had a devil of a time, though, with Connors," he grimaced. "You know, all of these have to be made special. And he wears a 14-C."

Sanders would have color on a course even if he wore only Gary Players blacks. ("I told Gary the only reason he wears black," grinned Doug, "is because it saves him cleaning bills.")

With his inimical short backswing, his crackling personality and Georgia twang, Doug's a natural gallery draw. And this year he has complemented the picture by being one of the leading moneymakers on the PGA tour while winning three tournaments.

All that has kept him from creeping into the Arnie Palmer-Jack Nicklaus class is his failure to win the really big major tournament — like, for instance, the U. S. Open.

"I'm really trying very hard," he said. "In the past I've finished second in the Open, second in the PGA. And this year I was two shots behind in the Masters and had a good chance until I put the ball in the water at the 16th hole the third day and made a double bogey."

At that moment, Doug didn't especially want the crimson of his face to match his shoes.

Holscher, McAllister PGA Finalists

assistant, who spent long, agonizing seconds over all his putts, rimmed this one and his giant-killing antics were finally over. Only 24 hours earlier, he had ousted Charlie Sifford, 5-3.

Bradley had a phenomenal stroke on the ninth through the 12th holes, canning birdie putts from 25, 22, 35 and 25 feet.

Coming up the 13th fairway, McCallister said to himself, "Don't change; just keep doing the same things." Hardened by several years on the tour, he knew that hot putters eventually cool off . . . and so right he was.

Bradley canned another 12-footer to match McCallister's birdie on the 14th, but then the former Houston hotshot came back to reality and 3-putted the 16th to be only 1 up.

With a chance to win on 17, Bradley missed from 3½ feet, and McCallister made the most of his opportunity with his clutch putt on the 18th after a 7-iron shot left him 7 feet away.

In the six rounds McCallister has played, the 32-year-old shotmaker is 23 under par. His was 5-under in routing Bill Nary 5-4 in the morning round Saturday. Bradley, incidentally, was 11 under Saturday and 18 under in his last four rounds. He clobbered Babe Lazane in his Saturday opener 6-5.

The 35-year-old Lakeshore CC pro missed four greens and hit three drives in the wrong fairway, but the 1960 SoCal PGA champ made some great recovery shots to pull out the win. Holscher shot 70, Merrins 71 over the par-72 course.

Holscher went 1 up when Merrins three-putted No. 8 and 2 up when he got a birdie on No. 14. Then on the 16th, a bad drive and poor chip shot left Bud's lead at one again.

On the 17th, Holscher pushed his drive to the right. But he then followed with perhaps his finest shot of the day, a 4-iron that carried a tall tree and reached the green 180 yards away. Both players birdied the hole.

Merrins, who beat Dale Andreason 3-2 in the morning, had no chance to tie when he left his second shot 55 feet away on the 18th. He did get down in two, however, and Holscher had to sink a 3½-footer to clinch it.

An 18-hole medal play sweepstakes among non-money winners preceeds the title match at 9:37 a.m. Trophy presentation for the Holscher-McCallister marathon is slated for 3:30.

IN THE HOLE, SURE

Bud Holscher can't bear to watch, but his short putt dropped for par-3 on 12th hole during semi-final win over Ed Merrins, 1-up. Holscher plays Bob McCallister for PGA title today.

Narragansett Loses, Finals on Tap Today

By DAVE TAYLOR

The fourth California Cup sailing classic got all tied up Saturday as the 62-foot sloop Narragansett, winner of Friday's opening race of the series, was beaten by both her opponent Chubasco and dame fortune in gusty 10-16-knot winds off Marina del Rey.

Arnold D. Haskell's Chubasco, the 67-foot West Coast racing veteran out of Newport Harbor Yacht Club, was leading Narragansett by an 80-second margin on the seventh leg of a nine-leg course in Saturday's second heat of the three-race match racing series when Narragansett's Genoa jib rose and then failed.

"Chubby," skippered by Don Haskell, seemed to have a clear lead at the time, however, and was well on the way to avenging her Friday defeat by Narranganssett.

The Saturday win by Chubasco made it a wide open series for today's third and final race for the prestige California Cup.

Narragansett, making her second racing appearance in Western waters after losing to Chubasco in this year's Ensenada race, will be repaired and ready to give full battle in today's 1 p.m. final.

Stengel, Williams Honorary Coaches

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Casey Stengel and Ted Williams, soon to be formally inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame, will be the honorary coaches at Tuesday's All-Star game.

Stengel and Williams will be in uniform and will accompany managers Walter Alston of the National League and Sam Mele of the American League when they take the line-ups to the plate.

British Open to Nicklaus

Combined Wire Services

MUIRFIELD, Scotland—Jack Nicklaus won the British Open Saturday by one stroke from Doug Sanders and Dave Thomas of Britain with a four-round total of 70-67-75-70—282. He has now taken all the major titles in golf.

Nicklaus gained a bonus of almost $1,000 for this victory since the championship committee announced earlier in the day it was boosting first-place money from $4,900 to $5,880.

Nicklaus tamed Muirfield's narrow fairways, deep rough and hard, fast greens with deft irons and confident putting most of the way.

"It's impossible to overpower this course," said Nicklaus. "I used my driver only 17 times in the whole tournament."

Arnold Palmer of Latrobe, Pa., challenged for a while but faded.

Nicklaus had his rocky moments. After an outgoing nine of 33, he was four under par for the tourney, three under par for the day and two strokes ahead of Sanders and the third-round leader, Phil Rodgers.

Then he bogeyed the 11th, 13th and 14th holes and his lead had vanished. However, it was only a temporary lapse, for Nicklaus parred 15 and 16 and birdied the 528-yard 17th with a 3-iron, 5-iron and two putts to regain the lead.

A crowd of 12,000 was massed around the 18th fairway which ribbons between knee-high rough 429 yards to the green.

Nicklaus laced a 1-iron down the narrow patch and then held a 3-iron into the wind, 20 feet to the right of the pin as an enormous cheer rang out. He then rolled the putt 10 inches away and tapped it in for the title.

So Nicklaus has now won the four top professional tournaments — the U.S. Open, the PGA, the Masters and the British Open—to join Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan and Gary Player among the golfing immortals. Twice he was the U.S. Amateur champion.

"Now I can set about trying to win them all again," he said.

HAYNIE TIES GALS RECORD WITH 9 BIRDS

CINCINNATI (AP) — Sandra Haynie fired nine birdies Saturday as she moved up to lead the field with a score of 69-67—136 in the $20,000 Buckeye women's tournament.

Miss Haynie tied a Ladies Professional Golf Assn. record set in the 1964 Falls City Open by Mickey Wright, who also had nine birdies in one round.

Clifford Ann Creed held second place with a 68-69—137 over Clovernook Country Club's 36-36—72 course. Susie Maxwell moved to third with 71-67—138, and Carol Mann, the first-round leader, was fourth with 67-72—139.

'Logical' Leo Balks, Says Protest Ruling Illogical

CHICAGO (AP)—Manager Leo Durocher of the Chicago Cubs considers himself a logical man who doesn't like illogical rulings.

That's why he is protesting Friday's 5-4 loss to the Philadelphia Phillies. Deep in his heart, though, Leo knows the protest will not stand.

There are three reasons why the National League office is expected to reject it. First, rule 7:11 in the official baseball rules; second, a protest on a similar play several years ago did not stand, and the third reason is the umpires' instructional book.

In the third inning Friday the Cubs had runners on second and third with two out. Billy Williams hit a pop fly toward third base.

Philadelphia third baseman Richie Allen tried to shove Ron Campbell off third to get to the ball. Campbell refused to move, the ball dropped and the umpires ruled intereference on Campbell.

Leo protested on the ground, "There is no rule in the book which says my man has to leave his base to allow a fielder to make a play."

Right. But rule 7:11 states "The players or coaches of an offensive team shall vacate any space needed by a fielder who is attempting to field a batted or thrown ball."

"Then they don't say anything about the base," argued Durocher. "Let's say there are less than two outs: is a man supposed to get off the base, let a runner catch a pop fly then turn it into a double play by tagging the base or the runner.

"It's illogical to leave yourself open to be put out deliberately."

Augie Donatelli, who was in the crew with plate umpire Al Barlick, Stan Landes and Mel Steiner, cited a case at Pittsburgh several years ago when St. Louis' Bill White scrambled back to third base and prevented Don Hoak from fielding the ball.

"We called White out and the Cardinals protested, but the protest did not stand. We know the rule isn't explicit but it is in our instructional book," Donatelli said.

Merger May Not Halt Grid Raids

HITTIN' THE HIGH SPOTS: Now that the NFL and AFL have merged and will operate a common draft starting with this year's crop of college seniors, they can move the draft session back to late January.

"Secret drafts" by the AFL, in particular, have been held as early as the first of November.

An unexpected threat by Frank Leahy's proposed U.S. Football League will be reason enough for an early draft.

The way some professional football people talk, the merger will not stop "raiding."

The common talk is that certain clubs may adopt desperate sub-rosa shenanigans to obtain personnel.

Many speculate that the common draft will not allow teams to improve quickly because they simply won't have the chance to sign high-level men. The talent will be spread too thin, thus the clubs with fairly young players in key positions will remain at the top longer than what has been normal.

Only one major rules change is anticipated by the merger, and that will eliminate the AFL's two-point conversion option. It probably will be eliminated by next year. The two-pointer was tried 17 times last season and was successful on only eight occasions.

FRIENDS OF JOHNNY KEANE are pointing to the present standing of the Yankees in an attempt to prove their man wasn't such a bad manager after all. Following a brief spurt when Ralph Houk replaced Keane, the Yanks have been floundering around even though Mickey Mantle's bat has come alive.

Eddie Stanky, skipper of the Chicago White Sox, is said to be on extremely shaky ground due to his increasingly bitter feud with newspapermen . . . a situation he created himself.

Other managers reported to be "borderline cases" at present are Billy Herman of the Boston Red Sox, Sam Mele of Minnesota and Bobby Bragan of the Braves. There also is some grumbling over Gene Mauch at Philadelphia.

ONE OF THE STRANGE DEVELOPMENTS in the Lee Meyers-Mamie Van Doren marriage is the fact the Cubs had two deals on fire for the 19-year-old pitcher—one in each league—that would keep him in the majors . . . but when the wedding was announced, both clubs called off negotiations.

Formation of the North American Soccer League, with Jack Kent Cooke among the leading organizers, was spurred by the interest shown by one of the TV networks in airing the games nationally on Sundays.

Play is slated to start in May, 1968, with franchises in Los Angeles, San Francisco, New York, Boston, Chicago, Washington, D.C., and two Canadian cities—Toronto and Vancouver.

Doug Jones has finally admitted that Cassius Clay is a much better fighter than Ernie Terrell. Jones is disgusted with his fight against Terrell recently. "They talk about his great left jab, but he never hurt me with it," Doug says. "And what's more, he held me every time I moved in under the jab. Clay will beat him easy."

THE HOUSTON ASTRODOME'S outfield has become so dangerous that it will be covered with the plastic synthetic grass which has been used in the infield this season. Several players have suffered leg and ankle injuries in recent weeks.

The "Astroturf," which will be installed in time for the Astros' next home stand later this month, is now being zippered together. It will take 90,000 square feet. The infield required 30,000.

The latest pitch in baseball? The "Pine-tar ball." That's what the Phils' Jim Bunning is being accused of using . . . but frequent inspections thus far by the umpires have failed to produce any foreign substance.

National League leaders are alarmed over the attendance in Cincinnati. The Reds may not reach 600,000 this season.

As if they weren't having enough trouble winning, the Reds are plagued by lack of cooperation by city officials in planning a new park. Even though the city doesn't have a football franchise, the city planners voted for a circular stadium which suits football . . . over-ruling the club's suggestion of a horseshoe-shaped structure favoring baseball.

GEORGE SELKIRK, GENERAL MANAGER of the Washington Senators, says one of the cardinal sins in baseball is for a batter to take a called third strike. "And it seems to be becoming more and more common," he points out.

"I remember one incident vividly that occurred when I was with the Yankees under Joe McCarthy," George recalled recently. "I needed some new bats, but I approached Joe at the wrong time—the day after I took a third strike in a crucial situation.

" 'More bats?' he exploded. 'What for? I'm not getting you any new bats to park on your shoulder.'

"After that I never took a third strike unless I was absolutely fooled. I learned that when I had two strikes, I had to guard the plate, no matter what. Too few players do that today."

Incidentally, one of baseball's great records, which may never be broken, is the one the Yankees compiled from Aug. 3, 1931, to the same date in 1933. In that stretch, they played 308 consecutive games without being shut out. The remarkable streak finally ended when Lefty Grove blanked them on five hits.

CREME DELA CREME UPSET

Buckpasser Chicagoan Victor

Combined News Services

Odds-on favorite Buckpasser, so heavily bet he created a minus place pool, won his fifth stake victory in seven starts Saturday with a convincing ¾-length triumph over Whisper Jet in the $103,000 Chicagoan at Arlington Park.

Elsewhere on the Saturday racing scene, in the Lamplighter Handicap at Monmouth Park heavily favored Creme Dela Creme suffered the third loss of his career being upset by Jolly Jet, a 25-1 shot.

Despite the five pounds or more Buckpasser gave all of his rivals, he was bet down to the 3-10 favorite on the mutuel board by the crowd of 25,295.

Buckpasser never was far off the pace in the mile and one-eighth dash, and finished in 1:49 1/5, two seconds slower than the track record and almost three seconds slower than the world mark.

Buckpasser set a world record in his last start, 1:32-3/5 for the mile in winning the Arlington Classic June 26.

Buckpasser returned 2.60, and $2.20 with no show betting permitted because of only five entires.

Abe's Hope, who lost to Buckpasser in the Flamingo, never held the lead and took third place, a neck behind Whisper Jet, but seven lengths ahead of Better Sea. Crown Land was fifth.

The win paid Buckpasser $58,000 and increased his 3-year-old earnings to $262,868 with six victories and one second in seven starts. His lifetime earnings are $830,964.

Jolly Jet, paying $53.50, $9.60 and $4.80, took the lead from Creme Dela Creme shortly after the final turn and romped to victory.

Creme Dela Creme had won 7 of 9 previous starts.

At Delaware Park in the Diamond State Handicap, Tetanus, after four years of racing, finally won his first stakes race, romping over Knightly Manner.

The winner paid $10.20, $5.40 and $3.60. First Family, the favorite, finished out of the money.

Straight Deal, surviving a furious stretch battle, won the Sheepshead Bay Handicap by half a length at Aqueduct in New York.

The 4-year-old filly took the lead with an eighth of a mile left and then had to hold off the closing challenges of Mount Regina and running mate Treachery to gain her third stakes victory of the season.

Straight Deal paid $8.80, $4 and $4.40.

Fleet Host Wins Hollywood Derby

the front end with a $12.20 place payoff and $5.40 to show.

In the scramble for second Drin finished second, three lengths in front of two of the three Eastern invaders, Rehabilitate and Exhibitionist. The latter trailed Rehabilitate by a length and one-quarter in the battle for third.

Trailing in the eight-horse field were Hill Clown, Aqua Vite, Flame Tree and Tragniew.

Lambert sent Fleet Host to the front at the break, breaking out slightly as the eight 3-year-olds started the run from the end of the stretch in the mile and one-quarter chute. For a moment it appeared that none of the eight wanted the lead and that a leisurely pace was in the offering.

Lambert, however, let out on Fleet Host and the colt grabbed a clean-cut advantage from Aqua Vite with Hill Clown and Tragniew next.

It was all Fleet Host from there. Lambert allowed him to knock out quarters of .23, .23⅕, .24⅕ and .24⅘ to reach the mile marker and at that point Exhibitionist, Rehabiliate and Drin were churning from far back, attempting to close the gap on the winging leader.

Drin, the Cinema Handicap winner with Bill Shoemaker at the controls, made a move with a quarter of a mile to go and it appeared for a moment he was en route to emulating the 1959 Derby win of his sire, Bagdad.

As Shoemaker explained it—"in the middle of the turn I felt pretty good. But that other horse never stopped running."

Lambert, who missed a ride on Native Diver last Monday in the American Handicap because of a five-day suspension, was an excited winner. "Ray (Priddy) and I talked it over in the paddock and we decided if the pace was too fast I'd be on the lead, and that's the way it worked out.

"Through the lane the first time he wasn't running smoothly. I turned him loose to let him change leads into the turn and he leveled off. Around the turn I was looking for something from behind. My horse was getting tired but he was doing his best and I didn't hit him.

The United States beat Poland last year and is expected to do so again, but the meet will be closely watched to determine chances against the Russian squad which, last year, was an upset winner in Kiev.

Blades' Revival Has Cooke on Spot

the money necessary to get the best club we can get. If Chicago gives us guys with big contracts, okay."

The Blades will be in the third year of an agreement with the NHL's Black Hawks, whose Buffalo farm club has asked permission to fold from the American League.

"The agreement says they'll give us four or more players every year," Geyer says, "and they'll have to put those Buffalo players somewhere."

Also, the Blades will receive two outstanding rookies from Toronto, which backed out of an offer to sell the Blades their strong Victoria roster for $400,000 during the recent Western League meeting in San Diego.

Panged by conscience, Toronto general manager Punch Imlach told the Blades, "We owe you that much."

Every other WHL club also will give the Blades a player. They didn't want Reeves to fold, telling him at San Diego, "If you go, we'll help you."

Meanwhile, the Blades must hire a coach, since Lynn Patrick jumped at St. Louis' offer for general manager in the new NHL division when the Blades' demise seemed imminent.

A good bet would be Marc Boileau, veteran forward and last season's captain, a man respected by his teammates for his hard play and knowledge of the game.

And the Blades might have trouble finding anybody else for what could be a one-year job. Boileau, 34 in September, probably would not try to be a playing coach.

Cooke apparently has won one battle, cutting the Coliseum Commission off short by starting construction on his own arena, the Forum.

It's only incidental that he will have to use the Long Beach Arena temporarily, and according to an aide has received permission from the NHL to do so.

However, Southland sports fans with good memories wondered why the artist's conception of Cooke's arena published last February when he received the franchise looked like a fruit basket and the one they're building at Inglewood is to be flat on top surrounded by columns.

The truth is that the plans Cooke showed the NHL to strengthen his bid were the same plans rejected earlier by San Diego because they were too expensive.

But Cooke denies that he misrepresented his presentation to the NHL.

"It was rejected by San Diego because it was too expensive for them," Cooke explains. "It fit our pocketbook nicely. But when we decided to go for the floating roof it changed the exterior design. It's basically the same arena."

Architect Charles Luckman says that with the "floating roof" concept it is necessary to have pillars supporting it.

"Those pillars are functional," Cooke says. "They aren't there just to look pretty."

The Independent, Press-Telegram was told that Cooke will visit San Diego shortly to inspect the arena that city finally decided to build, which is nearing completion.

Back in Montreal, the NHL is taking in all of this, pondering the critical status of its expansion program, and possibly wondering:

Would it rather have the Blades than trouble?

Flyers Out to Break Open Legion Title Chase Today

The Flyers look for a Harbor League "lockup" today when they meet second-place Peterson Post in the second game of a doubleheader at Blair Field.

A victory for the Flyers, who have won their last seven, including an 8-4 victory over Samuel Thomas Saturday, would mean a two-game lead in the standings with but three games remaining.

Peterson, which also won Saturday, 6-4 over Lakewood, obviously needs the decision to move back into a tie for first place.

"In the last meeting, the Flyers prevailed, 3-2, on the three-hit pitching of Mike Coble. Coble will start today, seeking his seventh win in as many decisions, against the man he beat last time, Randy Moffitt.

Moffitt, All-City player of year, is the last pitcher to beat the Flyers, stopping them 3-2 the first time the two teams met.

The Peterson-Flyer contest begins at 2:30, following the 11:30 a.m. opener which pits Shua against Samuel Thomas.

Saturday, Shua shut out Alamitos Bay, 5-0, on the four-hit pitching of Ray McElhenney, who threw only 96 pitches while walking one and striking out five.

Todd Collins, who filled in for injured catcher Al Moore, smacked three singles, driving in two runs and scoring another. Dave Bisso added a single and double, also scoring once and driving in one.

Jim Sturgeon remained unbeaten in five starts by surviving a three-run rally by Lakewood in the ninth. The Peterson fireballer struck out 10, walked seven and allowed eight hits, two of those doubles by Carl Meeks.

Ray Colin, Ken Alverson and Ron Henkel all contributed a pair of hits to Peterson's total of 10 and each had an rbi.

Phil Keller was the Flyers' winning pitcher in its game with Samuel Thomas. Terry DeKraai led the victor's offense with two hits in four trips.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Family Fishing —Fun For All

By LEW ALLISON

Fishin' Araund for Donnell Culpepper, Who Is on Vacation

This season has been developing all kinds of excellent sport. But one of the highlights of the year has been the fishing to be had on the barges which lie in local waters. The best aspect of good barge fishing is that it invites the entire family—Mom, Dad and all the little kids can have fun and they can catch fish.

And when we talk about catching fish, that doesn't mean an occasional tom cod, bonito or mackerel, always in abundance. There are lots of other sports fish, too.

Ray Cheney, bargemaster of the Alaska, off Seal Beach, is piling up one of the best records of many years, particularly with bass and barracuda. The bass catch has run into the hundreds many days, and sometimes has topped 1,000. Barracuda, too—some of them real tackle busters—have been listed in the hundreds during the hot weeks. An occasional oddity turns up—a 6-pound baby black sea bass and a 5-pound white sea bass among last week's bags.

THE ISLANDER listed 100 barracuda a day often and post, too. Fred Austin, skipper, likes to tell of the complaint an Alhambra couple had after an all-night stay on the barge: We couldn't get any sleep—the barracuda kept boiling around the barge all night long."

The Islander listed 100 barracuda a day often and some days has gone over 200. Bonito catches run 300 a day and up.

Halibut this year have been running generally larger, and the count may go anywhere between 25 and 75 a day on the Alaska. Cheney says there have been at least 20 caught recently that would run in the 15-25-pound class.

The Alaska has been moved this year to a rocky bottom about 2¾ miles off the pier, or a 20-minute boat ride. Taxis run hourly on the half-hour, beginning at 6:30 a.m. The barge closes at 4:30.

Cleanliness has been made a hallmark of this barge. The all-electric galley is stocked with everything from steak and eggs to hot dogs, and everything's newly painted.

The Islander offers night-long fishing on Friday and Saturday nights, with handsome breakfasts in the galley after a night of high fun. On the other days, the taxis run on the hour, hourly from 6 a.m. until 5. There's an upper deck for sightseers, television for the kids, and the loudspeakers relay the baseball games to those on deck. The Islander is anchored near the breakwater, where perch fishing is an added attraction.

Both skippers of the two barges agree on one point: Here's a family recreation, and a social event as well as sport. You can stay all day for your taxi fare. People who go out to the barge find the same acquaintances are back from the last trip, and it's time to get acquainted all over again.

Barge fishing is an ideal opportunity for the youngster or beginning fisherman—he has lots of room to work, lots of time to try any experiments, and there are lots of deckhands around who are anxious to help him.

A WELCOME ADDITION to the port's facilities is the three-quarter-day boat at Belmont Pier. The Hurricane, with Don Jasiewicz as skipper, takes off daily at 5:30, returning at 2:30, and has been chalking up some admirable scores. Jasiewicz is a working skipper. His runs may extend to Rocky Point one day, Huntington Beach the next. He has taken yellowtail on the Horseshoe Kelp as well as big barracuda and bass catches. Neither Don nor his boat is new in these parts—both have operated out of Long Beach landings in seasons past, and both are popular.

The Hurricane operates a twilight special Friday and Saturday nights from Belmont between 5:30 and 10:30, and this run in the warm summer evening, when the late bite can be expected and the crowds are not heavy, is one of the most enjoyable fishing expeditions to be had.

Cordobes Out to Vindicate Self

TIJUANA, Mex. — Vowing to vindicate himself after last Monday's unfortunate showing, Spain's world famed matador Manuel (El Cordobes) Benitez makes his final appearance of the season at El Toreo de Tijauna today at 4.

"No, I am not bitter because they threw cushions and yelled all kinds of things at me," he said. "They paid to see me triumph. All I can do now is vindicate myself before the same fans who booed me."

DOKKA FACES NEW FIELD IN PUBLINKS

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Arne Dokka of Studio City, Calif., faces a virtually new field in defending his title in the U.S. Public Links Assn. Golf Championships.

The tournament opens with 18 holes of qualifying play Monday and Tuesday. Match play begins Wednesday after the 150 member field is trimmed to 64.

Dokka and Leo Zamperro of Warren, Ohio, last year's runner-up, are back. But only nine others in the 1965 match play field succeeded in qualifying. Dokka was an automatic entry as defending champion.

The tournament will be played at Brown Deer, a tough 6,727-yard layout with a par 71.

Dilday Family Buys Mortuary in Lakewood

Dilday Family Funeral Directors are the new owners of Lakewood Mortuary, 3936 Woodruff Ave.

Ownership of the new facility marks the 40th anniversary of the Dilday organization in the Long Beach area, according to N. Jack Dilday, vice-president of the firm.

5 Quit in Hospital Pay Dispute

By STEVE STOWE

A campaign for higher pay by nursing aides at the Bellflower rest home bogged down Saturday after some of the protesting aides quit their jobs.

Nursing aides at Bellflower Convalescent Hospital, 9710 Artesia Blvd., said their demands for a 5-cent-per-hour increase in their current pay schedule have not been met.

According to aide Dorothy Lamp, a few of the staff members picketed the hospital Saturday during their lunch hours. The two-day protest resulted in the resignation of five nursing aides and the hospital's registered nurse, Mrs. Thelma Ulrich.

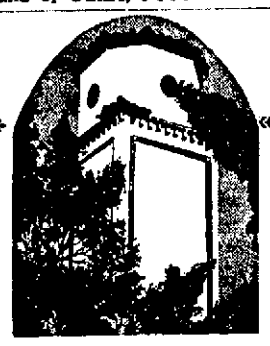

Mrs. Ulrich, who resigned Friday, said the $1.30-per-hour pay rate is too low for the work performed. "I tried my best to help the aides," Mrs. Ulrich said. "Maybe we got the ball rolling, even though we didn't get the raise." Many of the aides praised Mrs. Ulrich for her leadership.

The 15 to 20 employes at the hospital did not participate in group demonstrations, and the hospital's patients did not lack care during the protest, Mrs. Ulrich said.

Mrs. Caryl Atwood, nursing coordinator for the hospital, hired aides from other hospitals Friday in case the protest turned into a strike. However, she said the regular aides did not walk off their jobs and picketed only during their free hours.

However, Mrs. Atwood said there would be no pay raises for aides who participated in the protest. "Although I am dedicated to nursing, I cannot help the aides as long as they picket. There must be reasonable talk and not demands," she said.

The hospital is owned by Sunrise Hospitals Corp., of Norwalk, a firm that operates seven other convalescent facilities. A corporation spokesman declined to comment on whether a pay raise is planned for the remaining staff members.

Airline Strike Grounds 150,000 Daily

By DON HASTINGS

THE NATION

One hundred and fifty thousand air travelers failed to get off the ground Friday as the biggest strike in airline history got under way.

The walkout by 35,000 members of the International Association of Machinists in a contract dispute with five major airlines resulted in chaos at terminals from coast to coast. As machinists picketed, tourists, businessmen and conventioneers scrambled for other transportation—trains, buses, cars and planes operated by other carriers. Among the stranded were thousands of servicemen, on leave or on orders, and foreign visitors arriving by foreign airlines.

On President Lyndon B. Johnson's orders, the government took steps to make certain the mails go through and that the flow of military men and supplies to Viet Nam is uninterrupted.

Negotiations between the machinists and the airlines —United, Eastern, Trans World, Eastern and Northwest —resumed Saturday in Washington with Assistant Secretary of Labor James P. Reynolds mediating. At issue in the talks, which were broken off Thursday, are wages, vacations and other fringe benefits.

The deadlock appeared no nearer to solution Saturday than it had Thursday when the union's chief negotiator, Joseph W. Ramsey, said the two sides were "poles apart."

In terms of passengers affected — 150,000 a day — the strike is the biggest ever in the airline industry. The five carriers' flights in 231 cities are grounded and 68 smaller cities are without trunkline service. In addition, the flights of Eastern, Trans World and Northwest to 21 foreign cities are grounded.

HORNS BLEW AND FIRECRACKERS echoed through Municipal Auditorium in Miami Beach, Fla., as delegates to the Teamsters Union convention re-elected James R. Hoffa by acclamation to athird five-year term as president. Hoffa, facing a possible 13 years in prison on jury tampering and mail fraud convictions, was hailed as the union's "champion of champions."

Hoffa's re-election was only part of his victory. His hand-picked candidate, Frank Fitzsimmons of Detroit, also was elected by acclamation to a new union executive position that makes him heir apparent to the Teamsters presidency if Hoffa has to serve time. The convention delegates also raised their leader's annual salary $25,000 to $100,000 and agreed to pay the costs of legal defenses for him and other officials of the 1.7 million-member union.

TWO KU KLUX KLANSMEN conspired to violate the civil rights of Washington educator Lemuel Penn, when he was shot to death near Athens, Ga., in 1964, a federal jury decided. Four other Klansmen were acquitted.

The decision came in two verdicts — one of them sealed since it was returned the previous week in back-to-back trials.

Convicted were Joseph Howard Sims, 41, and Cecil Meyers, 26, identified by another Klansman as the men who fired shotguns into Penn's car.

Acquitted were Herbert Guest, 39; James Lackey, 30; Denver Willis Phillips, 26, and George Turner, 33.

A DESTRUCTIVE RIOT in the Maryland Penitentiary in Baltimore was with tear gas Friday, but not before 1,000 rampaging inmates set fire to four buildings, threw rocks, bricks and clubs and looted the commissary.

An assistant warden, three inmates and several firemen were overcome by smoke and 50 felons and officers suffered cuts and bruises.

A member of the Committee on Prisons of the Maryland House of Delegates, Joseph Bullock, said the riot had racial overtones. "It stems from people on the outside. If they don't stop telling these prisoners about their rights it is going to get worse," Bullock said.

About two-thirds of the 1,461 inmates at the penitentiary are Negroes.

THE BIGGEST PIECE of hardware ever orbited was lofted into space last week from Cape Kennedy. The United States launched a 29-ton Saturn upper stage rocket into orbit in a key test that proved the vehicle can restart in space to send Apollo spacecraft to the moon.

The Saturn was deliberately blown up in space the following day when National Aeronautics and Space Administration scientists permitted pressure to build up in a liquid hydrogen fuel tank to measure the rate of increase.

On the same day, the Soviet Union orbited a 27,000-pound Proton "scientific space station." The Russians said the object was to measure radiation belts in space. NASA officials believe the Proton to be the forerunner of a manned, orbiting space station.

AMERICA'S SURVEYOR spacecraft that soft-landed on the moon June 1 revived last week after hibernating through a two-week lunar night during which the temperature plunged to 260 degrees Fahrenheit below zero.

Scientists had feared that the extreme cold would damage Surveyor's batteries and instruments, but after a week of sending radio signals, the craft responded and began transmitting photographs equal to the quality of the 10,000 it had taken after it first landed.

Friday the scientists' fears were realized when Surveyor's batteries began overheating, probably due to a short circuit induced by the cold. Death of the spacecraft—actually its inability to communicate with earth—may come within hours, the experts said, but they added, "It's done its job so well that it almost doesn't matter."

THAT WAS THE WEEK THAT WAS in Argyle, Minn., population 800.

A crop-dusting plane crashed Monday. The pilot was uninjured.

Farm hands got into a shooting scrape Tuesday. Two were killed and another wounded.

Then came Wednesday. Gerald Clausen took off in his plane in the evening to spray the town against mosquitoes, which are pretty bad this time of year. The spray he used turned out to be a lethal chemical ordinarily used only on remote fields.

No one knows how the wrong chemical got into the plane's tanks, but when Clausen discovered the mistake and warned the townspeople, they first scrubbed, then evacuated children, old folks and pets.

Houses, walks, lawns and streets were washed down and by Friday almost everyone was home again, none the worse for the exposure to the spray, but hoping this week will be a little calmer.

THE WEST

The governors of the 50 states gathered in Los Angeles last week for their annual conference, but state business took a back seat to international affairs as they debated support of President Johnson's global policies, including Viet Nam.

WILLIAM L. GUY
Heads Governors

A so-called "Viet Nam resolution" was drafted, considered too weak, amended to include stronger pro-administration language, and passed, 49-1. The dissenter was Oregon's Republican Gov. Mark. O. Hatfield, a Senate candidate, who called the resolution clearly an endorsement of the President's escalation of the Viet Nam war.

Hatfield said he was concerned over America's foreign policy becoming a "one-man affair" and giving one man a blank check who could commit the nation to a potential third world war. He had tried to get the resolution reduced to a single paragraph supporting the nation's fighting men and was temporarily backed by Gov. George Romney, R-Mich., but Romney voted with the majority on the resolution.

Romney said he deplored the conference's preoccupation with the Viet Nam theme because it is an issue beyond the control of the governors.

The issue was hard to avoid, however, because the state leaders were briefed on the subject by White House advisers Walt Rostow, Averill Harriman and Lt. Gen. Andrew J. Goodpaster and they were addressed by Vice President Hubert Humphrey.

Before adjourning, the governors elected Gov. William L. Guy, D-N.D., chairman of the conference for the coming year.

BLACK POWER split the civil rights movement down the middle last week.

This development became apparent at the 53rd annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in Los Angeles. Roy Wilkins, executive director, denounced the leaders of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee an dthe Congress of Racial Equality for espousing the new militancy.

Wilkins repeatedly attacked the concept of black power during the convention and on Thursday he openly criticized the two groups by name. By implication he attacked the leading exponents of black power, Stokeley Carmichael, head of SNCC, and Floyd McKissick, national director of CORE.

The black power controversy flared early in the week when delegates to the CORE national convention in Baltimore adopted resolutions to make the concept a factor in their civil rights campaign. The CORE delegates also voted to oppose the war in Viet Nam and support those who resist military service.

Vice President Humphrey addressed the NAACP convention Wednesday and warned that Americans "must reject calls for racism, whether they come from a throat that is white or one that is black."

Throwing his support behind Wilkins, the vice president said, "We must strive to create a society in which the aims of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the civil rights movement can be achieved."

Dr. Martin Luther King, a leader in the nonviolent philosophy, said he opposes the black power term because "it connotates black supremacy and an antiwhite feeling that does not or should not prevail." King said black supremacy is "as evil as white supremacy."

McKissick and Carmichael contended the emphasis on black power has been grossly misinterpreted. Denying it is a racist philosophy, they maintained its main purpose is to instill in American Negroes a sense of racial pride and to provide leadership in their drive for greater influence in politics and economics. They said it expresses nothing more than an assertion that Negroes have a right to retaliate if attacked, a right to self defense.

Said Wilkins, "Black power can lead only to black death."

* * * *

CALIFORNIA'S LEGISLATORS ended a five-month session Thursday by voting themselves a pay increase and approving a bill outlawing action to incite a riot.

The Senate voted, 28-8, a compromise bill to boost legislative salaries from $6,000 to $16,000 annually while creating a conflict-of-interest code for the lawmakers.

The bill, approved, 66-1, in the Assembly earlier, will become effective only if voters approve a major revision of the state's constitution in November.

The pay-and-ethics bill would make California legislators the highest paid in the nation. It would also impose restrictions on outside conflicts of interest which backers said would be the toughest in the country.

Final action on the antiriot bill came in the Senate where members voted, 33-0, for legislation urged by Los Angeles Mayor Samuel W. Yorty and supported by Gov. Edmund G. Brown. Mayor Yorty said the measure was necessary to prevent "urban guerrilla warfare."

The bill would make it a misdemeanor to incite a riot in conditions where a clear, present and immediate danger exists.

Strong opposition to the legislation had been encountered in the Assembly, mostly from Negro members, but there was no debate in the Senate. The bill was authored by Assemblyman Robert Morettl, D-Pacoima.

The last-minute adjournment flurry also included Senate and assembly approval of a measure to aid low income school districts by $40.2 million annually.

* * * *

UNITY WAS THE THEME Friday as Gov. Brown and Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh appeared at a Los Angeles press conference with Senate President pro tempore Hugh M. Burns, D-Fresno.

The governor said the legislature had established "a record of progress'. . . a record of problems met and boldy solved."

Unruh, D-Inglewood, said he could not recall any "major piece of legislation" backed by Brown which had failed to win approval at the special session.

Brown said he planned to base his campaign for a third term on the accomplishments of the legislature and said he expects Unruh to play an active part in his race with Republican gubernatorial candidate Ronald Reagan.

"I've told the governor since the primary that I'd do anything he wanted me to," Unruh replied.

* * * *

SOME THOUGHT HE SPOKE with forked tongue, but others believed every word.

The speaker was Frank Standing Horse, of Perris, Calif., who addressed the Amalgamated Flying Saucer Clubs of America convention in Reno, Nev. Dressed in full Indian chief regalia, Frank told Friday how a space ship took him on a four-year flight to the edge of the galaxy.

He said he touched on the moon, Mars, Clarion and Venus, but spent most of his time on Oreon, which he described as a planet on the outer edge of our galaxy inhabited by a super-modernistic society.

The only place Frank saw another earth man was on Venus where he said the driver of a car powered by elecromagnetic force was driven by a man from North Platte, Neb. He didn't get his name.

About 1,000 persons are attending the three-day convention. They have been hearing talks by "space voyagers" and viewing pictures purporting to show flying saucers and even more sophisticated craft for getting way out.

* * * *

SALARY INCREASES for the presidents, faculty and staff of California State College at Long Beach and 17 other state colleges were approved by the State Board of Trustees. The pay boosts will come from a $6.9 million appropriation made by the legislature.

Professors' pay scales now will range from $7,140 to $16,212 a year, compared with the old scale of $6,700 to $15,192.

Salaries of college presidents were boosted to a new scale of $27,324 to $28,680 from the old scale of $25,020 to $26,268.

Clerical workers and other staff members received an across-the-board increase of 4%.

THE WORLD

PRESIDENT FOR LIFE SUKARNO of Indonesia appeared to be at the end of his political life last week as his nation's congress virtually deposed him by stripping him of the last of his power, reversing his policies and reducing his prestige.

Apparently heading the government now is Lt. Gen. Suharto, who has been quietly controlling the nation's affairs since Sukarno was gradually reduced to a figurehead in the wake of an abortive, pro-Communist coup in October.

Sukarno, "god-head" of Indonesia for more than 20 years, appeared before the congress to charge the constitution had been violated. No one paid much attention.

* * * *

THE SEVEN WARSAW PACT nations, the Communist bloc's counterpart to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, wound up its Bucharest conference Friday by inviting the nations of Western Europe to a meeting for the discussion of questions related to ensuring security in Europe. The invitation did not spell out what the meeting would seek to accomplish.

Earlier, the Communist conferees denounced U.S. "aggression" in Viet Nam and promised to send volunteers to fight if asked by Hanoi.

* * * *

PUSHED AND SHOVED by angry Filipinos at Manila's airport after allegedly snubbing President Ferdinand Marcos by failing to appear at a children's party at the presidential palace, the Beatles flew to India where they were mobbed by thousands of adoring fans.

When the musicians returned to their home town, London, Friday, they said they would never return to The Philippines—not even fly over it.

"We were terrified," said Beatle George Harrison.

"I didn't even know they had a president," said Beatle John Lennon.

"SOME PERCEPTIBLE PROGRESS" at the 17-nation Geneva disarmament conference is expected soon by United Nations Secretary General U Thant.

At a Geneva press conference Thant said he had no knowledge of any new development likely to lead to a Viet Nam peace conference.

Thant also said he may announce at the end of August whether he is prepared to remain as secretary general after the end of his present term in November. He has hinted he will not.

Also at Geneva, the United States announced it will sign the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, a United Nations General Assembly-measure adopted in December.

THE WAR

The United States was pouring it on.

Ground forces in Viet Nam were engaged in powerful offensive sweeps, pushing back the Viet Cong, capturing their rice and rifles, collapsing their tunnels, blasting their bunkers.

In the air, Navy, Air Force and South Vietnamese aircraft flew record numbers of sorties over South and North Viet Nam. The planes hit Hanoi and Haiphong several times, bombing the remaining oil storage facilities at those vital bases. Two pumping stations in Haiphong Harbor, used to unload tankers, also were blasted.

On the psychological front, Undersecretary of State George W. Ball told a news conference he detected a new note of gloom in Hanoi. He said he wasn't surprised.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk conferred with Japanese leaders in Kyoto and left with new assurances of friendship. Rusk then flew to South Korea where he found the Koreans eager for even stronger war measures and demanding complete victory before peace talks.

Diplomatically, India's Prime Minister Indira Gandhi called for Britain and Russia to convene a Geneva conference to end the war. Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain will fly to Moscow this week for a three-day meeting with Russian officials. Viet Nam is expected to be a top item on the agenda.

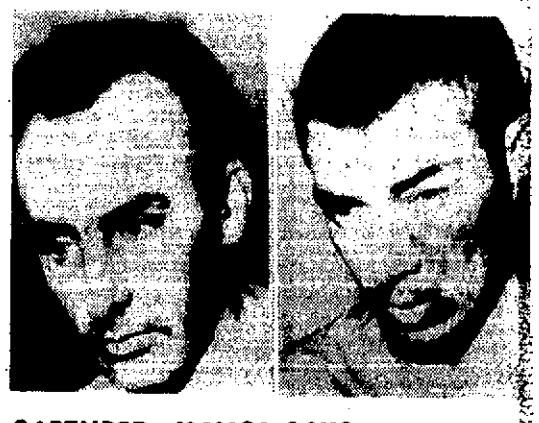

From Hong Kong came reports the United States might make a new peace overture when the furor over the Hanoi-Haiphong bombings subsides.

REUNION NEAR

Four-year-old Peggy Yue-se Yuan, in the arms of Dr. Philip Pyles, Boulder, Colo., dentist, arrived at Chicago's O'Hare Airport Friday after flight from Formosa. Peggy lacked immigration clearance when her parents left Formosa in 1962, when she was 20 days old. She has lived in an orphanage since. She will be reunited today with her mother, who is flying to Chicago from Tulsa, Okla. Dr. Pyles volunteered to take Peggy home when he heard of her plight while visiting the Orient.

CAPTURED, HANOI SAYS

This photograph was issued by the Viet Nam News Agency in Hanoi, North Viet Nam, and is purported to show U.S. Navy Cmdr. James Mulligan (left) and Air Force Capt. David Hatcher. Disfiguration on left side of Hatcher's face was not explained.

N. L. B. Banjo Maker Known Nationally

To a select group of musicians across the United States, a small store building in North Long Beach is all important.

The musicians? Banjo masters.

The store building? Gariepy Banjos, at 46 E. Market St., with its diminutive back room carefully converted into factory quarters.

The reason the masters speak so respectfully of this little Southland business is that Art Gariepy has built a name for himself that other banjo makers envy.

* * * *

THE INSTRUMENTS manufactured in this small shop have been ordered by top entertainers from Florida to New York and all major points westward.

Eleven years ago, the Long Beach area boasted a booming industrial picture—but no banjo maker.

A woodworking class in Jordan High School's adult evening division changed that.

By ROBERT BECKMAN
Progress Editor

Gariepy, interested only in acquiring a hobby, signed for the class and a latent interest and talent in woodworking became evident.

* * * *

SWIFTLY THE WORD went through the Southland as time and again Gariepy's beautiful workings in exotic woods and in tastefully laminated combinations were placed on display.

A member of the Van Eps Banjo Co. family, who had transferred the Van Eps manufacturing operation from New Jersey to Glendale, heard of Gariepy's artistry in wood and chose him to direct the continuation of the firm's label.

Working at first in his garage, Gariepy — closely following the Van Eps models — produced the first banjo in the Long Beach area; then another, and another.

* * * *

IT WAS ONLY a short time before the slightly-built man with twinkling blue eyes came up with his own model with "a different feel."

It, too, captured the interest of banjo masters nationwide and Gariepy Banjos was to quickly outgrow its garage quarters.

At the Market Street address, Gariepy has two part-time helpers and a niece "who helps me keep up with all the correspondence."

On a "rush" order, Gariepy can produce a finished banjo in 40 hours, but he likes to take longer.

"Every instrument," he says, "is a challenge. I like to think each one comes closer to perfection."

* * * *

GARIEPY laminates his own all-maple rings of seven pieces; makes necks with up to five pieces of maple and ebony or rosewood, sometimes employing pieces of walnut or mahogany, centered with steel cores for strength.

Fingerboards of rosewood and ebony are exotic Gariepy creations, as are the alluring designs of inlaid mother of pearl.

"On special orders," he laughed, "I even hand-carve the designs they want in the wood."

* * * *

IN STUDYING Gariepy's shop, only one piece of equipment indicates this instrument maker sometimes runs short of time. It is a machine which carves necks four-at-a-time, following a master pattern.

Photos by BOB SHUMWAY

But a closer look at the four laminations about to be speed-carved shows each has an individual pattern.

The delicate hand-rubbing and finishing that follows is a tedious job.

"Sure, it is tedious, but it is a rewarding thing," Gariepy says.

* * * *

HE STRETCHES calfskin or plastic, depending upon the customer's wishes, over the finished rings and, after installing the strings, the instrument is put to its first test.

Gariepy hops onto a stool and 46 E. Market St. reverberates with sweet medley of his favorite songs.

The test is an exacting one.

Gariepy, you see, has played a banjo for 41 years and studied under two such widely known masters as the late Fred Bacon and Joe Pizzitola.

West Coast aluminum production seems headed into one of the brightest spots for economic progress on view today.

Western consumption of alumninum has doubled since 1958, largely due to the increased use in aircraft construction. Now motor cars assembled in this area are using more aluminum and production of truck trailers and mobile homes both are using increased amounts.

Prospects for increased consumption of aluminum in electrical uses, including wire, cable, transmission towers and electronic devices are quite favorable, reports a report from the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco.

The container and packaging market in the West has been tapped only slightly and the Pacific Coast's massive food canning industry renders this an important potential outlet.

WHEN MISSILES are fired down the Western Test Range from Vandenberg Air Force Base in the future, pin-point accuracy on the impact area will be possible by an electronic system which will be completed in the fall in the 20-mile-wide lagoon of Eniwetok Atoll outpost of the Marshall Islands in the Pacific. This has been the favored target area, but it has been difficult to know the exact area hit by the missiles.

Pacific Division of Bendix Corp., North Hollywood, is designing and will install an advanced electronic system to provide needed information. Seven hydrophones, instruments to listen to sounds transmitted through the water, form the core of the system. Six will be placed in a wide ring on the bottom of the lagoon and the seventh, located in the center, will house a calibration projector.

When a missile nose cone splashes down the sound it generates hitting the water will be received by the hydrophones and transmitted to the main building on the Eniwetok shore.

The exact point of impact will be determined by plotting difference in the time the sound is received at each hydrophone which will be buoyed 10 feet above the ocean floor.

Called the BMILS (bottom-mounted impact location system) the project will include 49 miles of special cables. Each hydrophone will have its own cable leading to headquarters, insuring continued operation of the range even if one cable is damaged.

A RECORD in market value and share volume was established by the Pacific Coast Stock Exchange in the first half of 1966. June scored gains of 89% and 53% from last June.

Healthy Index Rise Since Jan. 1

Again this week, the Index touches a new high—the fourth in a row. The second quarter of 1966 had its share of business worries. But economic indicators tell a truer story of the nation's basic health. At the mid-point of 1966, the Index stood 4% above its level at the start of the year. Yet a year-ago comparison shows that the mid-1965 Index—after a period relatively untroubled by fears of inflation and a flagging auto market—had managed just about a 3.8% rise for the first half of the year.

Auto production is the only real soft spot among the components this week. It is down 6% from the previous week, and is 5% lower for the first half of the year. And it will drop severely during the rest of July, as production stops earlier this year to allow dealers to cope with swollen inventories of 1966 cars.

BUT OTHER COMPONENTS—even those affected by auto output levels—are still making progress. Steel production held its own this week on a seasonally-adjusted basis, as orders from other sectors in the economy made up for the drop in auto plant orders due to the early model changeover.

Carloadings also continued at a high level. And paperboard production, another sign of a high rate of goods shipped, rose 4% above a week ago and 21% above its year-ago level.

Trade Tips ON THE WORLD MARKET

Whether you sell acid-resisting cloth for refinery workers' pants or the scissors to cut them out, there are overseas customers waiting to hear from you.

A firm in Zambia wants to buy the cloth and a Japanese importer wants to buy scissors for tailors.

These are only two out of hundreds of sales opportunities for American businessmen in markets around the world. A Swedish manufacturer is seeking 4,000 lawn mower engines; a Chilean doctor wants machinery for a sterilized bandage factory; there is a demand for vitamins in Togo; and a market for playground equipment in Japan.

Businessmen everywhere are potential buyers of made-in-U.S.A. products. Because overseas sales mean added profits and employment in the United States, the Department of Commerce each week publishes a series of Trade Tips gathered by the government's worldwide commercial listening posts.

Mission Viejo: a brand new 200-year old idea

On this outpost of early Spain a way of life started with a dream...a dream of casual yet elegant living. This land which has retained all of its beauty and charm is Mission Viejo. Since Mission days this has remained virgin land. Now, with the initial development, the men of vision at Mission Viejo are planning another 200 years ahead.

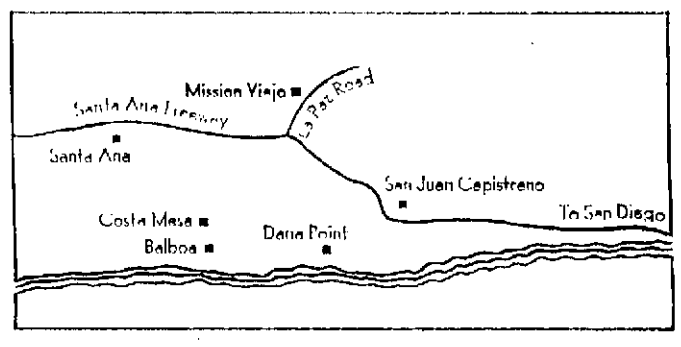

The gently rolling terrain which adds so much to the character of this land is being utilized to take full advantage of spectacular views. Here you'll find ideal homesites. Spanish red tile roofs grace all public buildings. There are parks and riding trails and wide tree-lined avenues. Even the "mission-bell" lamp posts reflect the El Camino Real. Under construction is the 2,000 student high school which will open this September. Also being built are a Lutheran Church, shopping plaza and the Mission Viejo Country Club with a challenging 18-hole course designed by Robert Trent Jones. A delightful blend of Spanish and contemporary architecture is carried out through each public building.

The first families of Mission Viejo have already arrived. Three of California's most experienced and respected builders have fifteen model homes on display. The prices range from $20,950 to $39,950. Every home meets our strict architectural standards: they compliment the beauty of the land.

Come to Mission Viejo today. Take the Santa Ana Freeway south to La Paz Road turnoff. Cross the bridge and enter Mission Viejo. You'll find yourself in a land of ageless and living beauty surrounded by homes of charm and character.

Sprow has received many similar honors during the weeks preceeding and following his retirement, but this one caught the admiral off guard and left him moved emotionally.

Five Appraisal Groups Hit Federal Licensing Plan

Unanimous opposition to current proposals for government licensing or certification of real estate appraisers was registered last week in a joint statement by representatives of the five principal United States and Canadian organizations associated with the appraisal profession.

The less than professional standards in draft legislation for licensing or certification now being proposed in several quarters would give unjustified or misleading implications of state sanction or state approval to the work of many appraisers who lack genuine professional qualifications, the joint statement declared.

The organizations represented at a meeting in Chicago at which the statement was drafted were: The American Society of Appraisers, which acted as host for this informal conference of national appraisal organization officers and administrators; the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers of the National Association of Real Estates Boards; the American Society of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers; the Society of Real Estate Appraisers, and the Appraisal Institute of Canada.

* * * *

PRESIDENTS OF three of these organizations who participated in the conference were David P. Bishop Jr., of Miami (ASA), who presided; Edward B. Horton Jr., of Denver (SREA); Harry R. Fenton, of Seattle (AIREA). First vice president Marvin B. Clark of Paola, Kan., represented (ASFMRA).

Former national President Roy Strobeck and Harry W. Gahagan, former Illinois chapter president, both of Chicago, attended the conference as observers for the American Right of Way Association.

Conscientious enforcement of their own organization's Codes of Ethics and standards of professional conduct already provide the public greater assurance of competent and ethical real estate appraisal service from their accredited members than any presently proposed licensing or certification laws would provide, according to the participants in this conference.

* * * *

EACH ORGANIZATION has formally registered its own opposition to licensing and certification proposals on previous occasions. In reaffirming their joint disapproval of such proposals at their Chicago meeting, however, those present agreed that their general position was probably expressed best in the following statement by conference participant Alexander P. Grice III, of Norfolk, Va., 1963 president of ASA and also an M.A.I. (Member of the Appraisal Institute):

"Unless the professional requirements for a licensed or certified appraiser are as high or higher than those now required by the various recognized appraisal societies, the profession will have received a severe setback in its efforts to see that only fully qualified appraisers are given the responsibility for properly representing the interest of the general public."

* * * *

CONFERENCE participants pointed out that their organizations already exchange information with each other about disciplinary measures each one may be required to take against any member, in the event he also may hold membership in one of the other groups.

In general, they observed, their separate Codes of Ethics are all very similar in their provisions requiring members to render their clients only objective and impartial service of a professional caliber and to refuse any assignments for which they are not fully qualified.

Sears-Roebuck Foundation Helps Scout Organizing

A scholarship program has been developed for students at Long Beach State College wishing to work part-time in helping in the organization of Boy Scout troops.

The Sears-Roebuck Foundation assists heavily with these scholarships and last week Charles W. Teed, manager of Long Beach Sears, presented on behalf of the Sears-Roebuck Foundation a $1,600 check to Harold W. Arnold, scout executive, Long Beach Area Council, Boy Scout of America.

* * * *

LATEST TO BE organized under the scholarship program was one at St. Vestal Church, with Henry G. Robinson as scoutmaster over 23 boys.

Arnold said there is good interest in organizing Cub Packs and Scout Troops for other sponsoring institutions.

"The organizing program," he said, "is off to a good start."

Orange Co. HBA Group in Meeting

"The Money Situation" will be the major topic discussed by a panel of nationally recognized authorities at the annual Orange County general membership meeting of the Home Builders Association of Los Angeles, Orange and Ventura Counties at 7 p.m. Monday at the Disneyland Hotel Anaheim.

William Lyon, HBA president, said panel members will be Saul B. Klaman, director of research, National Association of Mutual Savings Banks; Raymond J. Lapin, president of Bankers Mortgage Co., and Charles A. Wellman, consultant to the Federal Home Loan Bank board and new president of the Equitable Savings & Loan Association of Long Beach.

Soot Problems to Go Up in Smoke

Outdoor cooking brought indoors via kitchen barbecue equipment can result in tasty meals and sooty walls. Solve the problem by paneling the barbecue corner with plastic-coated, wood-grained hardboard. Any smoke smudges or grease will sponge off with a damp cloth.

CLUBHOUSE FOR HOMEOWNERS . . . At Cape Huntington

Cape Huntington's Clubhomes in Heart of Recreation Area

Cape Huntington, the newest condominium clubhome community in Huntington Beach, is located in the center of a booming recreation area, reports Swen Brockman and Mike Baltes, community managers for S. V. Hunsaker & Sons Inc.

"Within three miles of the project is Huntington Beach State Beach Park and Bolsa Chica State Beach, whose facilities include fire rings, food and rental concessions and sport fishing," said Brockman. "This is also the site of the U.S. Surfboard Championships."

The Huntington Beach Recreation Department offers a variety of sports activities at 20 playgrounds. The city has five developed and three partially developed parks. Four park sites have been leased and six sites acquired.

* * * *

FOR ADDITIONAL recreation facilities, the city encompasses three public golf courses: Huntington Beach Country Club, Meadowlark Country Club and Driftwood Beach Club.

Within easy commuting distance are California Angels Stadium, Capistrano Mission, Disneyland, Knott's Berry Farm, Melodyland Theater, Los Alamitos Race Track and Movieland Was Museum, noted Baltes.

At Cape Huntington, two-story Hunsaker-designed clubhomes are available in four floor plans and 12 elevations with up to four bedrooms.

* * * *

PRICED FROM $19,995, homes include built-in appliances, automatic dishwashers, pass-through service bars to patio area, front yard landscaping and underground sprinklers, and wall-to-wall nylon carpeting.

Some models include built-in wet bars, master suites with private sundecks, sliding glass walls to private patio terraces and Jack 'n Jill convertible bedroom/study.

Recreation facilities include a Mariner's clubhouse, a heated swimming pool, a putting green and barbecue pits.

Furnished models are open daily from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. They may be reached from the Santa Ana Freeway, Beach Boulevard (Hwy. 39) off-ramp south to Adams, east to Cannery Street, and south to the models.

You Sleep Less, You Rest More

We soon may be sleeping less and enjoying it more.

A mattress manufacturer is devising a "sleep capsule" bed which cuts down the effects of gravity during sleep and eliminates noise, light, cold or overheating. Modeled after the astronauts' capsule "beds," the mattress would permit greater rest and relaxation during shorter periods of sleep.

What's in a Name? Ask the Builder

Home builders often seek immortality by naming streets or entire communities after themselves. If the main street in Jones Village is called Jones Boulevard, Jones is likely to have directed construction, and the first streets in the development were probably named for his wife and children.

But a builder in Clinton, Conn., would rather be honest than immortal. He named a major street High Taxes Road after "a little trouble with local politicians."

Elegance Theme in Big Premier Homes

One of the most popular plans in the Premier Homes development in Stanton features the dramatic use of double iron gate with Atrium entry. Wide double-doors and covered porch with planter space offer a truly elegant entrance to a home that is designed for gracious living.

The master suite with tiled Roman bath is separated from the additional three bedrooms and sectional bath-powder room by the wide entry hall which leads back to the spacious living room. Sliding glass doors beside the hearth open into the patio area.

Family room and dining area adjoin the all-electric kitchen, designed for indoor and outdoor serving convenience.

* * * *

OF GREAT interest to buyers is the ample storage and closet space. The three-car garage offers 200 cubic feet for storage, as well as rough-in for washer and dryer.

Frank McFarland, sales manager, reminds prospective buyers that they may choose from several optional room arrangements as well as select their own colors for walls, counters and trim, if they purchase their new home before completion. Builder William Rousey guarantees quality of construction throughout.

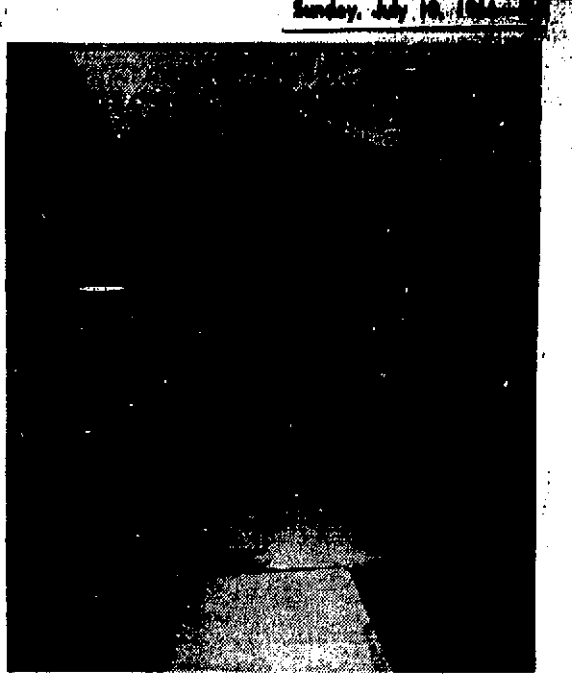

Premier Homes are located near Beach Boulevard on Chapman Avenue in Stanton. Prices range from $24,500 to $27,900. VA and FHA financing as well as conventional loan financing.

The homes may be reached by taking the Beach Boulevard (Hwy. 39) turn-off from the Santa Ana Freeway south to Chapman Avenue. Turn left on Chapman. From the Garden Grove or San Diego freeways take the Beach Boulevard turn-off north to Chapman and right to Premier.

Home's Good Looks

Roofs play an important role in architectural design.

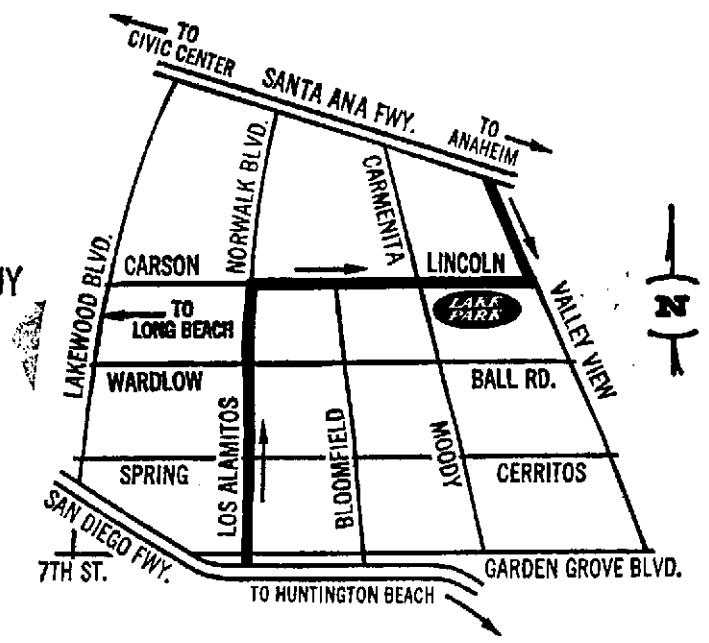

According to a national roofing magazine, architects consider a roof's shape, color and texture to be "critical" to the over-all design of residences and other buildings.

Newest Tourist Attraction: Anaheim's Unfinished Convention Center

Anaheim's $16 million convention center already is a traffic snarler as passersby—tourists and local folks alike—slow their pace to admire the massive skeleton of concrete and steel on the south side of Katella Avenue, between West Street and Harbor Boulevard.

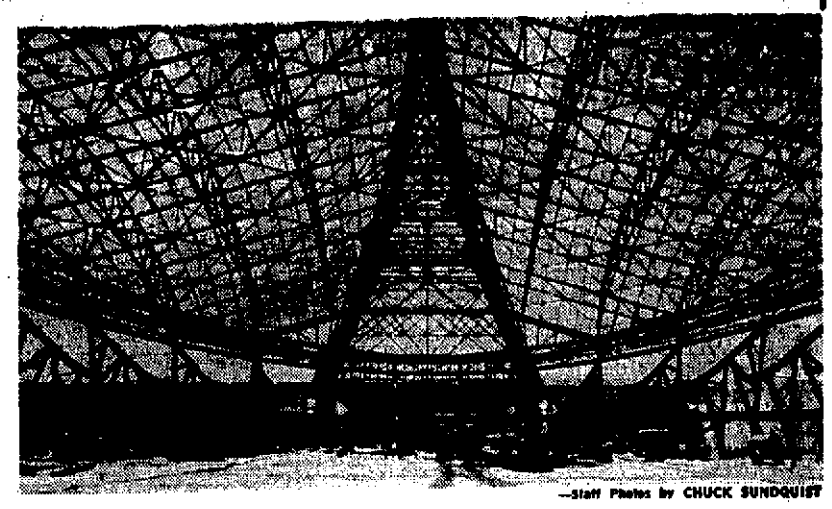

Not since the superstructure for Anaheim Stadium went up last year has there been such an impressive construction program in the area.

Currently, the skeletal mammoth resembles in shape (at left) a gigantic denuded flying saucer. Workmen (at right) are dwarfed as they labor about mid-floor beneath the open framework.

The building is due for completion late this year and will provide an arena seating 9,000 (5,500 permanent seats), 28 meeting rooms and banquet facilities for 3,000.

The ultramodern center is going up on a 55-acre parcel, chosen by the Anaheim City Council from six possible sites two years ago.

Builder is the Del Webb Corp., the company which also erected modernistic Anaheim Stadium, home of the California Angels.

Personality Trend Studied

MADISON (UPI)—"If a little girl is to become a feminie woman, it's more important that she has a warm and masculine father rather than a very feminine mother," says a University of Wisconsin psychologist.

Prof. E. Marvis Hetherington said it is also important that the little girl's father is affectionate with her mother. For little boys, she indicated it is best that the father be the dominant person in the family. The conclusions were based on studies into children's personality development and sex-role preference.

Big La Palma Homes Now Closing Sales

Casa La Palma Homes, located just east of Lakewood in the fast growing La Palma area, announced closing out sales are under way.

Offering 2,280 square feet for $29,850, the Casa La Palma development has seen a strong sales rush since opening. The homes are offered on FHA terms or VA terms of no down for veterans and 5¾% loans for 30 years.

The four-bedroom, three-bath homes include formal dining room and family room. The master bedroom is large enough for king-size Hollywood beds. Each bedroom has huge walk-in closets. There is a fireplace in the family room.

* * * *

KITCHENS contain built-in range and oven, dishwasher, disposal and ceramic tile kitchen counters. Other features include cast iron tubs, custom light fixtures, generous use of mirrors, fenced yards and shake roofs. The homes are within walking distance of schools and shopping.

To see the homes, drive east on Del Amo Boulevard to Casa La Palma, just east of Carmenita Road.

Los Angeles Realtor to Be REC Speaker

"A New Challenge" will be the topic discussed by Tommy Francis, Los Angeles Realtor, before members of the North Long Beach Real Estate Club at their 8 a.m. meeting Thursday at the Park Pantry, 17511 S. Susana Road.

Publicity chairman Lela F. Starr said Francis, owner of a firm by the same name, will explain how the present-loan market can be considered a challenge.

Window Location Aids Ventilation

Window location has a lot to do with the comfortable ventilation of your house.

Windows placed toward the center of the room afford a freer circulation of air than those placed in the corner. And windows placed in the lower part of the wall direct air through the room level at which occupants sit and stand.

OLA SUITT'S RAGS-TO-RICHES STORY

10-Year-Old Trade School Spreads Across Four Counties

By EARL GRISWOLD

Ola Suitt, 54-year-old Lynwood businesswoman, believes there is a lot of sense in the old-fashioned Horatio Alger stories of rags-to-riches success through individualism and faith.

She is the founder of West Coast Trade and Business Schools, a $6 million-a-year business.

Ten years ago, Mrs. Suitt wasn't so sure about the Horatio Alger-type of thinking.

Indeed, her record wasn't impressive. She was a high school dropout, had failed in a restaurant business, was about to become a divorcee and was on the relief rolls.

* * * *

SHE ENROLLED in a trade school to learn grocery checking. But her counselor frankly told her she was "too old, too fat, and the union didn't recognize private trade school graduates," she recalls.

The negative advice sparked her into a positive program of action. She got jobs at two grocery stores—both union stores—before her graduation from the trade school—because she needed the money and to prove she could do it.

Upon graduation she was hired by the school as an instructor in grocery checking. But after six months, she found she had no voice in the policy of the school.

* * * *

SHE QUIT and opened her own grocery-checking school in Compton on Oct. 15, 1956, with a $1,000 personal loan from a friend. The $1,000 was quickly diluted with a down payment on a cash register, purchase of a scale, and rental and refurbishing of office-school quarters.

She recruited a class of 10 students. Upon graduation, eight found jobs. Today, one is manager of a Compton supermarket. Another is manager of a Los Angeles drug store and owns his own neighborhood market.

More students enrolled, and industry showed interest in her graduates. West Coast Trade and Business began to grow.

* * * *

NOW WEST COAST has schools in Long Beach, Anaheim and 16 other cities of Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside and San Bernardino Counties. It is the largest private school in the state, Mrs. Suitt proudly notes.

By 1959 expansion pains were creating an executive work load too burdensome for the founder to carry alone. She persuaded her son, Tom, of Santa Ana, to give up his job as an auto parts manager for a Huntington Park car dealer and join West Coast as a partner. Tom, now 29, is president of West Coast, and Mrs. Suitt is chairman of the board of the family-owned corporation.

* * * *

ADMINISTRATIVE offices of West Coast occupy the entire second floor of the Security First National Bank building at 11301 S. Long Beach Blvd., Lynwood.

Both Mrs. Suitt and Tom maintain close personal touch with their schools which offer a curriculum of 37 courses, ranging from a four-week PBX class to an 18-month class in electronics and color television maintenance. The school, with a staff of 275 employes, operates on a year-round basis.

Tom, who has statistics of the school at his fingertips, says average daily attendance is 1,800 students, with a seasonal fluctuation in enrollment. Last year, 7,500 students completed training courses at West Coast schools.

* * * *

ABOUT 40% of the students are women.

Today's students range in age from 17 to 80. The typical student is 33 years old.

"You've got to realize the average person will change jobs — to jobs requiring training—at least four times in his lifetime," he said. "There is a real need for more training programs as technology advances."

Tom was appointed last year by Dr. Max Rafferty to the statewide Advisory Committee on Private Education. He is also vice president of the California Association of Private Schools and Colleges.

* * * *

UNDER HIS direction, West Coast operates a two-week program for the National Aeronautical and Space Administration, training about 600 supervisory persons of NASA-connected firms each year.

The school also has a contract with the Bureau of Indian Affairs, training about 100 students a year who emigrate from the reservations.

This spring, West Coast opened the Watts Community Skill Center with 360 students enrolling the first day under a contract with the State Department of Vocational Education.

The Watts project, financed by funds from the Manpower Development Training Act, "is the most exciting and challenging undertaking of West Coast since I joined the firm," Tom said.

Retail Clerks' Local Observes 30th Year

Thirty years of progress were celebrated last week by Retail Clerks Union Local 324 in Buena Park as the union observed the anniversary of issuance of its charter to eight members on July 3, 1936.

Arthur Z. Berland, secretary-treasurer of the 12,000-member organization, said "Local 324 is proud to be recognized as an integral part of the many communities where our members live and work.

"Our continuing growth is a reflection not only of our own members' determination to stand together for the common good of all, but also of acceptance by the business community of the union as a vital part of the employer-employe relationship."

THE ORGANIZATION occupied a one-room rental office in its earlier years. Then, in September, 1950, with 2,300 members, it moved to an old two-room house in Long Beach. By January, 1953, there were more than 3,600 members, necessitating construction of the union's own office building in Long Beach.

However, Local 324 continued its dramatic development and in November, 1957, the organization occupied its present building on a four-acre site in Buena Park. At that time, the union had 7,000 members, and it has added over 5,000 more since.

WITH MORE THAN 14,800 square feet of modern office space and a beautiful auditorium that has become an outstanding community center, Local 324 today has the reputation of having pioneered more innovations in membership and community services than any other local union in the United States.

Among these innovations are a $10,000 annual college scholarship program for members and their families; a $10,000 annual fellowship-in-perpetuity for heart disease research at the City of Hope; extensive newspaper and billboard advertising campaigns to acquaint the public with Local 324's aims and purposes; annual social events for members and their families to enjoy; continuing participation in many types of community activities, and active support of charitable organizations.

Groundbreaking ceremonies were held last week for T. G. & Y. Variety Store Company's new Western Division warehouse and offices to be constructed on a nine-acre site at the southeast corner of Alondra Boulevard and Valley View Avenue, La Mirada.

The parcel was purchased by T. G. & Y. from Santa Fe Railroad. Real estate negotiations were handled by R. O. Ralston of T. G. & Y.'s Real Estate Department and by William D. Beaver of Santa Fe Railroad's Industrial Development Department.

* * * *

Harvey Aluminum in St. Croix Expansion

On the island of St. Croix, a swamp and dump have been converted into a tremendous engineering accomplishment.

The company that is creating this industrial miracle is Harvey Aluminum of Torrance, a primary aluminum producer invited by the Government of the Virgin Islands to provide the people of the Virgin Islands with a larger source of employment and to help the Virgin Islands become self-sustaining.

Harvey operates aluminum reduction facilities in Oregon and fabrication plants in California, Michigan, Tennessee and Kentucky.

On a world basis, the company is partners with Norsk Hydro in the building and operation of facilities in the island of Karmoy in the southwest region of Norway and his developed bauxite deposits in West Africa.

* * * *

THE ST. CROIX aluminum plant will refine bauxite into alumina, which is then shipped to the reduction facilities to be reduced to metalic aluminum.

A 750,000-gallon-per-day water desalting installation will provide the water required for the huge new plant, one of the few industrial plants in the Western Hemisphere to depend entirely on converted sea water as its only source of fresh water.

* * * *

TO SERVE THE new alumina plant as well as the island of St. Croix, Harvey recently opened a new deep-water port in the Virgin Islands called Port Harvey. The reclamation of a swamp area and its conversion into a modern sheltered port is an impressive engineering accomplishment, according to shipping authorities.

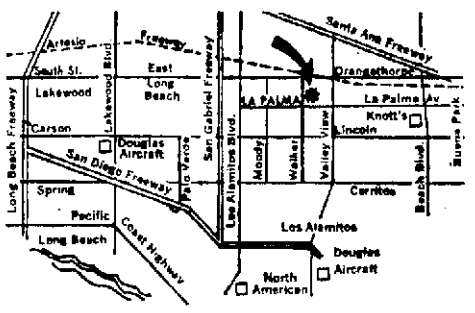

The channel leading to the port is 2½ miles long and 300 feet wide, with a depth of 35 feet. The turning basin is 1,100 feet wide and 1,600 feet long.

Orangewood Sales Continue Climbing

Continuing Don Wilson Builders' long standing policy of quality construction with total community planning in every development, Orangewood, in the East Long Beach area, is approaching completion, and Don Wilson, president of the company, announced that 50% of the homes have been sold.

Many buyers have chosen the completely finished models and have already moved into their Orangewood homes, while others have taken advantage of Wilson's offer to customize homes bought while still in the construction process.

* * * *

TOTAL COMMUNITY planning gives the new development an air of neighborhood serenity, with wide paved streets, accented by decorative street lights, and front-landscaping with lawns and shrubbery flourishing. All utilities are underground and sewers and sidewalks have been paid for and installed. The neighborhood park, dedicated by Wilson, and walled from street traffic, offers complete family picnic facilities, as well as paved courts and a fully equipped playground for the youngsters.

The Orangewood homes offer features that set a quality standard in the East Long Beach area, in their price range. The spacious step-down rumpus/game room has proven an outstanding family success.

Housewives applaud the economical balanced power kitchens with famous name built-in appliances.

Models now ready for immediate occupancy include a selection of floor plans in tri-level or one story homes, with three, four and five bedrooms, and two baths. Flexible financing plans are another advantage, with prices starting at $24,950, and as little as $995 down. Orangewood may be seen by taking any freeway to Knott Ave., south of Katella, and then driving on Knott to Orangewood.

Building Products Are All at Sea

The boating boom won't leave building products dealers all at sea.

Many dealers now stock oars, cleats, bilge pumps and compasses for their marine-minded customers. Some offer building plans and technical help for do-it-yourself boat-builders.

TANKER TAKES A BOW

Odd-looking, perhaps, but this appendage on Mobil Oil Corp. tanker serves useful purpose. Bulbous bow, which smoothes out waves created by ship's movement through the water, provides greater tanker capacity and higher speed, thus reducing cost of transporting oil. The 27,800-ton Socony-Vacum had her nose bobbed at Newport News, Va. Bulb replaced section of original bow.

Throngs View New Green Acres Homes

Vance Johnson, representative for Ellis Schrader Realty, said that over 100 persons visited Green Acres; there were two sales and two reservations at the 130 home Gardena development during the Fourth of July weekend.

"Traffic and sales were far better than we expected," Johnson said, "with a three day holiday and so many folks out of town."

Johnson said most people were attracted to Green Acres by the slogan, "Homes with 7 Servants."

* * * *

BUILT-IN features and quality materials and construction; such as shake roofs, redwood, used brick and stone veneers, and wood floors on a raised foundation were noted as some of the upkeep-savings "servants."

There is an unusually wide choice of three and four-bedroom plans in a variety of exteriors, both single and two story, the spokesman said.

Buyers may choose either shag or sculptured nylon pile carpeting, the theme or family room mural, and appliances in decorator colors.

* * * *

CONCRETE driveways and sidewalks are in. Front lawns are landscaped with sprinklers; side and rear yards fenced.

Kitchens are equipped for efficiency with built-in range, oven, rotisserie, sink disposer, dishwasher and raised panel ash cabinets. Floors in kitchen and baths are vinyl asbestos linoleum.

Flexible Law for Zoning Is Wise for City

Communities should have a reasonable degree of flexibility in zoning so that areas that may be desirable to industry can be rezoned for that purpose without a battle, states John R. Weaver, sales manager of the Du Pont Company's real estate division in the current issue of the Society of Industrial Realtors' Newsletter.

"Planners, in setting aside industrial tracts, should take into account the needs of industry and not willy-nilly assign an industrial classification arbitrarily to a tract of land, desirable or not," he asserts.

* * * *

"A WELL LAID-OUT and regulated industrial park can be just as attractive, if not more so, than a residential subdivision and certainly produces more benefits to the community in the way of tax revenue, employment, and growth."

The Society, a professional affiliate of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, is composed of more than 1,000 members who specialize in marketing industrial properties and meeting the real estate needs of industry.

In discussing what communities can do in land development practices to make the area more attractive to industry, Weaver writes:

* * * *

"ONE OF THE MOST obvious, yet frequently overlooked, factors in this respect is the availability of land within a community for industrial development.

"Unfortunately, there is a general tendency throughout the country for community planners and zoners to lay out the community and, after looking out for the needs of residential, commercial and civic nature, to designate whatever is left over—usually the swamp land and other least desirable portions of the community — for industrial use.

DEVELOPER COMMENDED AT TUSTIN
Tustin city councilmen have officially commended a local developer firm, Argyros & Frank, for "enhancing the beauty of the city" with their development of Newport Plaza, the community's newest shopping center, of Spanish architecture and costing $400,000. Financing was arranged through Santa Ana branch, United California Bank.

HEAVY VEHICULAR TRAFFIC
Truck and trailer rigs await turn to be loaded at Del Amo Financial Center, Torrance, where more than 400,000 cubic yards of dirt are being moved to make way for huge office building complex. Foundation grade is 27 feet below Hawthorne Boulevard (background).

Floating Aluminum Airfield Will Convert Marsh to Landing Area

Special to the Progress Section

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—A rugged, portable, floating aluminum airfield that will convert marshes and rice paddies into "hardened" operating areas has been developed for the U.S. Navy by Aluminum Company of America.

Extensive tests conducted at the U.S. Army Engineer Waterways Experiment Station, Vicksburg, Miss., dramatically demonstrated the capabilities of Alcoa Floating Landing Mats.

A 13,000-pound UH-34D helicopter executed a series of landing and taxi tests on aluminum helipads installed on both water and marshy surfaces.

* * * *

THE ALUMINUM panels performed to expectations, withstanding 13-ton landing impacts, and resisting bending and shearing forces set up as the helicopter taxied to within two feet of the airfield edge.

Additional tests under actual operating conditions now are scheduled in Viet Nam.

The new landing mat — designated AM-3 by the Bureau of Naval Weapons—was designed by Aluminum Company of America under direction of the U.S. Navy, and produced under a Naval Air Engineering Laboratory contract.

* * * *

THE PROGRAM was sponsored by the Advanced Research Project Agency. The mat is an assembly of aluminum panels bolted together to form a high-strength, rigid structure.

Operational requirements included lightweight construction, use of a polyurethane core, ability to replace damaged panels easily, and a two-year life expectancy in marshes and rice paddies.

Personality Traits Reflected in Types of Driver Accidents

Is it possible to eliminate almost 95% of all traffic accidents?

According to the Liberty Mutual Insurance Companies the answer is yes—through a program of driver selection, training and testing.

The Boston-based insurance firm has devised a method by which most of the drivers who will cause future accidents can be spotted today—an amazing degree of accuracy. The companies have also developed a method of training "potential-accident" drivers so they will not have accidents.

"We can even tell you what type of accident a driver will probably have," says James J. McCormick, assistant vice president for Liberty Mutual.

* * * *

McCORMICK'S method of spotting drivers likely to have accidents is based on a five-year study of Liberty Mutual's records which proved that poor drivers almost always have some outstanding undesirable personality traits.

"Such characteristics in an individual as over-agressiveness, resentment of authority, impulsiveness, low stress tolerance, lack of social responsibility or a poor attitude toward safe driving each indicate a different way a man will drive," McCormick relates.

"Personality traits, coupled with such other information as physical deficiencies, knowledge of driving skills and the degree to which a driver may be anti-social will tell you if the driver is going to have an accident," he says.

A further study of a driver's background will indicate—in most cases—whether he will get into a rear-end collison, an intersection accident, or some other type of accident, says McCormick.

MOST DRIVERS who are spotted as likely to have accidents are trainable—to a degree that they will not have accidents, Liberty Mutual believes.

Several years ago, Liberty Mutual established a "Driver-Trainer Consultant Service" for its policyholders that to date has shown "real progress" in preventing accidents, McCormick said. Some of the fleets Liberty Mutual has worked with have reduced accidents by 50%.

With results like that, demand for Liberty Mutual's consultant service has increased. In fact, demand is so great, that the insurance firm is going to increase the number of its consultants from 8 in 1965 to 20 by the end of this year.

* * * *

IN WORKING with policyholders who have large automobile or truck fleets," McCormick states, "we find that after careful selection of drivers, training them is the most important consideration."

The insurance companies unique method of training drivers—called "Decision Driving"—following the five-year study of accidents caused by driver errors.

"Decision Driving is based on the principle that since most situations involving accidents are reptitious, accidents can be avoided if drivers are trained to automatically make the right decision under the prevailing conditions," McCormick says. Stressed, however, is the word automatically.

* * * *

"ABOUT 95% of all automobile accidents are caused by so-called driver error," he said. "In other words, making the wrong decision, usually due to not knowing what decision to make."

McCormick states today most drivers know the "how to" skills, such as mechanical operations and coordination of hands and feet in steering and braking, and the "what to" skills like knowledge of the rules of the road.

"What we recommend is teaching the "when to" skills—knowing when to make a certain driving decision," he said. "This can only come from proper experience and training."

State-Wide Developers in Uniqu Design Concept

State-Wide Developers, Inc., builder of numerous residential projects in the Long Beach-Lakewood area, incorporates a unique concept in designing.

When viewed from street level, State-Wide's 2,300 square-foot apartments, one and four to a complex, give the pleasing appearance of a single large home.

This aspect, according to H. Fred Mickelson, residential sales representative, is largely responsible for the fact all of State-Wide's projects to date have been sold prior to completion.

NEW YORK — Except for heels and flappery waistlines, everything's going up, up, up in New York these days.

Take the skyline. All the way from Central Park to the Battery, spectacular monolithic columns of glass and steel are on the rise, poking more and more towers into the sky.

In the streets below, increasing numbers of cabs, trucks, buses and chauffeur-piloted limousines choke their way through Manhattan's concrete caverns . . .

And underground, New Yorkers are stamping their fashionable low heels, protesting the new 5-cent jump (from 15 to 20 cents) in subway fares, imposed Tuesday by the Transit Authority.

Also included in the fare raise are most bus runs in the city's complicated mass transit network. And there's the announced threat that it may be upped 5 cents more.

The increase is a result of wage boosts following the almost fatal (to the city) transit strike in January.

Stranded here in January without bicycle, roller skates or earmuffs, I've experienced some of the hardships that result from a stoppage in the flow of this great city's arterial life blood.

New Yorkers simply can't circulate from home to job to store without the whirr of wheels in mass transit.

So . . . gothamites will just put another tourniquet around their pocketbooks . . . and career gals will buy even lower heels for short hikes to and from the office.

BUT THEY'LL BE right in step with dame fashion.

In fall-winter fashion collections, previewed the past week for the nation's press by the New York Couture group, many of the going shoes looked like spats without heels.

Newest looks afoot: fur shoes . . . clear plastic tops for boots . . . Persian lamb mules for town . . . also the unexpected combination of clear plastic with Persian lamb.

But this season plastics, vinyls, fun furs and short hemlines aren't the kooky, camp look of last season.

Femininity is staging a comeback.

As Larry Aldrich put it: "This season marks the turn of fashion's tide. Clothes are contemporary, but not knacky . . . They're pretty, but not 'darling.'

"I think we can write finis to the kooky era which has been confusing retailers and fashion followers alike."

He suggested the kooky trend may have been a

WILD WAVES SAY

Now hear this, y'all!

By Iola Masterson

DESPITE A HECTIC schedule, Dr. Vernon Brickey, new president of Downtown Lions, and wife, Eldred, were all smiles when they flew away from here with daughter, Sharon; son, Vernon Jr. That was June 27. Hopefully they'll still be all smiles on return Monday after two weeks' worth of vacationing in Washington, D. C., and Williamsburg, Va., then on to New York to become part of a crowd of some 40,000 delegates at Lions International convention. Which is a heap of activity.

Before they left they attended Vernon's own installation plus FIVE other Lion Club installations. All the while Eldred was working like a beaver on preparations for forthcoming Assistance League Ball, planned and gave a delightful shower for her neice, Sally, and arranged for relatives to live in their home, tend the orchids and dog, during their absence.

THEY SAY you can't win 'em all. As long as you win a big one now and then, that old saw is OK with Gilbert and Margaret Nee because they DID win a big one—an original Rembrandt etching titled, "The Lion Hunt." It all happened when the Nees attended a premiere showing of the Vincent Price art collection at Century Plaza Hotel, a benefit sponsored by L. A.'s Women Against Cancer organization. The etching, as you would no doubt guess, is worth quite a hunk of change.

VICTIMS OF a freak accident while vacationing in Yellowstone, Jessica and Dean Francis (Frenchy) Flynn of Cal State at Long Beach were both due to be released from the hospital and allowed to be home by this weekend. What happened, in case you didn't read about it earlier, is that a tree top fell on their car as they were motoring in the park. Jessica received severe back injuries and "Frenchy's" right hand was seriously hurt.

Jessica flew home Wednesday, accompanied by son and daughter-in-law, Gary and Jo Flynn, and immediately entered Memorial for more X-rays and further check-ups. She had been hospitalized in Montana. However, he was flown here shortly after the accident for hospitalization. He underwent surgery on his hand week ago Saturday. Every bone had been broken "like an eggshell," I was told.

It's a miracle they weren't both killed instantly because that tree top, close to 24 inches in diameter, hurtled down on them as they were doing about 35 miles an hour, smashing through the windshield and into the steering wheel. If it hadn't been for that wheel (and his hand) taking the brunt of the blow they think they would have been.

DUBIOUS distinction of acquiring one of the "better" sunburns over the long holiday weekend goes to Elaine Winston. She and Bill had an open poolside party all day the Fourth; day before they'd been working on their boat so she wound up with a real scorcher.

Among guests at informal affair plus children, for all who have same, were Mott and Shirley Peek, Bud and Norma Hutchinson, Dave and Bev Carmichael, Jan Rinella, Terry Bradley, Carl and Nancy Smedley and George and Maxine Roberts.

SPEAKING of Winston, Bill's mother, Gertrude, who was present at aforementioned party, and good friend, Ella Johnson, flew off Thursday for a month's tour of the Scandinavian countries.

They flew first to Copenhagen to tour Denmark, then will be in Sweden, Norway and Finland. Gertrude's family came from Norway and Ella's from Sweden and they're looking forward to going on a search for relatives. If they can't find any, they can at least do some ancestral record checking of their forebears.

A "WETTING-DOWN" party in the good, old tradition of the U. S. Navy was given by Ralph and Sally Garrison to put the final touches on making his new rank as Rear Admiral, USNA, absolutely official. Ralph was one of only two naval aviators and one in a total of eight in all reserve classifications throughout the country to receive this rank.

The wetting-down party was a cocktail buffet dinner at Los Alamitos Naval Air Station where he started out 31 years ago as an aviation cadet. Among the 100 guests present were the admiral's first commanding officer, Cmdr. Walt Williams, now of Ventura, and his last CO, Capt. Ken McLaren of Los Alamitos.

Ralph's new two-star flag was presented to him at party and was then proudly flown in his honor by Capt. J. G. Hedrick during affair.

Also present were the Garrisons' sons, Ens. Tom, 23, now stationed in San Diego, and Peter, 15, a Navy League sea cadet.

All this excitement following on the heels of a marvelous six-week vacation Ralph and Sally had to Borneo, Singapore, Thailand, Cambodia, Jahore, Malaysia, Hong Kong, Taiwan, Japan and return, via Alaska.

In Borneo, where they were in 120-degree heat, they secured a motorboat to travel up one of those exotic rivers to a camp of headhunters where they stayed all night. Fortunately, these are reformed natives and have been non-headhunters since World War II. Otherwise one would have to conclude the Garrisons were out of their heads to risk such an adventure.

THE WEATHER sent thermometers soaring anywhere from 110 to 115 degrees each of the five days Howard and Shirley Jones spent in those Springs known as Palm. No problem. They stayed at Dave and Cecelia Tallichet's air-conditioned hacienda and between being inside or in the cool pool, they were comfortable as sea breezes.

Don and Jimmie Nutter spent a couple of days with them but had to hurry home Monday to host their traditional Fourth guests to watch fireworks from their beachfront home in Seal Beach.

Fascination for the pool isn't because these Oregonians are any stranger to water but because they're not used to enjoying swimming under warm and sunny skies. But they've certainly all had plenty of action wading along sidewalks under the gray, damp skies of up thataway.

Monthly shipments to go to Viet Nam

Sending a shipment once a month to the men of the 12th Tactical Fighter Wing, 391st Tactical Squadron in Viet Nam is the goal of the Cypress Junior Women's Club.

Freshly baked cookies packed in tin boxes, Kool-Aid, processed cheeses, crackers and Vienna sausage are a few of the items the women feel will be welcomed by the fighting men.

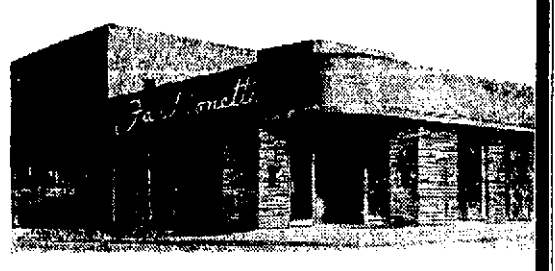

Mrs. Frank Fedowitz, Americanism chairman, received a recent letter from Major Dean C. Hofstad, chaplain of 12th wing, who wrote, "As you might suspect, we were swamped with goodies during the Christmas season. Since then, however, nothing much has come." He went on to say that sending homemade cookies "would be the nicest thing you could do."

The next shipment will be sent July 15 and anyone interested in contributing to this project should contact Mrs. Fedowitz, 5066 Brunswick Dr., Cypress.

Actor has trunk, will travel

By ELLEN KREC

A trunk plays a serious role in the life of an actor, and it plays a dual role in the life and travels of Robert Miller Driscoll.

He is a character actor with 14 years of experience in his profession as well as an expert in the art of living well, comfortably and occasionally, on a minimum of money. His parents are Rear Adm. and Mrs. Roland D. Driscoll, USN (Ret.) of 4021 Cedar Ave.

Bob's major always has been acting, along with singing and dancing. His minor role is cooking, with an eye to the good life, and he really looks the part of a dedicated actor and epicure. His height is 6 feet and he "keeps" his weight at 300 pounds.

Oddly enough, his success depends on his appearance, and all of his roles have been geared to his size.

He says he could gain to 600 pounds without half trying, but manages to keep his weight down to 300 pounds by eating only twice a day!

He learned to cook while playing in stock. Since he couldn't get home and obviously couldn't afford to eat out, the results were a fine actor and a good cook. He says he never makes desserts because his favorite is his mother's coconut cake made with whipped cream — and he welcomes that at the end of each show's run.

ROBERT DRISCOLL prefers travel by train or automobile. The reason he probably doesn't like to fly is because he can't take the wonderful trunk which holds his clothing as well as his kitchen. He says he very often carries his own trunk—it is so heavy it is hard to find anyone to help.

When you stop to realize "The Trunk" holds all of his spices (if you traveled and had to purchase spices in each town you could understand why), two place settings of china, crystal, tablecloth and napkins, a very heavy skillet, an electric frying pan and coffee maker, and naturally, his candelabra.

Bob played dual roles in "My Fair Lady." He opened in Rochester, N. Y., and played for four and a half years.

He wanted to show his appreciation to the cast as they all traveled West, so he gave a cocktail party. This was no ordinary cocktail party since he started by having a lounge car added to the train. At this time the bank balance was synonymous with his recent success.

The party started at 10 a.m. in Kansas City and lasted until 10 P.M. heaven knows where! In typical Hollywood fashion, everyone dressed for the affair and Bob served French 75's and nine dozen deviled eggs he had brought with him.

HIS DESCRIPTIONS are marvelously colorful, slightly sardonic but never vicious. He was sent to Russia by the State Department to play "My Fair Lady" for three months. From the time the plane developed trouble on the takeoff and had to return to New York, through three months of vodka and caviar, he could write a great deal about "Robert In Vodkaland."

He hates lunch but loves brunch and does a very good Eggs Benedict. First he toasts English muffins and butters them, then he puts thin slices of ham, cheese and tomato, then covers all with heated, canned, Hollandaise sauce to which he had added another egg yolk and 2 tbsps. lemon juice.

The State Department once again is sending a goodwill troupe to South America to do "Carousel" for about 10 weeks this fall, so Bob has been setting the mood with a skillet rice dish that's good enough to eat by itself.

So whether it's Russia, South America, Canada or home, when Robert Miller Driscoll is "between shows," he's COOKING!

Mass honors Fillions on 50th anniversary

A Mass will be solemnized at 10 a.m. Saturday in St. Barnabas Church honoring Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Fillion, 4415 Linden Ave., on their golden wedding anniversary.

A buffet reception for family and friends will follow in the home of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene J. Fillion, 4528 Linden Ave. The couple also has a daughter, Mrs. Roland A. Savard of Lakewood, and four grandchildren.

MARRIED July 4, 1916, at St. Julien of Wolfestown, Quebec, Canada, the Fillions lived in Lewiston, Maine, before coming to Long Beach in 1951. Mr. Fillion was employed at Long Beach Naval Shipyard before retiring in 1954.

DEAR ABBY

He likes to rent, not buy

DEAR ABBY: My mother is a very attractive widow, 62 years old but she looks much younger. She met a 60-year-old bachelor, and they hit it off like a couple of teen-agers. He's a real sport and a big spender. He has told all their mutual friends she's the best thing that's happened to him in years, he adores her, blah, blah, blah.

ABBY

They have vacationed together, he took her to the Derby, and now he's talking about a trip to Europe. Abby, Mom is going out of her mind waiting for this man to ask her to marry him. They seem so perfect for each other. She doesn't even look at anyone else, and as far as she knows, he doesn't either. What on earth is he waiting for? It's been nearly two years now. How can Mom build a fire under this man? She'll do anything.

HER DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Tell your mom not to build any fires under her reluctant Lothario or she's likely to see the romance go up in smoke. He sounds like the kind of sport who would rather rent than buy.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a 22-year-old college girl who has to be continually coaxed and begged to help her mother now and then with an evening meal, to clear off the table, help with the dishes, make her own bed, hang up her clothes, or do her own ironing? When she was away at college, she lived at the dorm and shipped her laundry home for her mother to do and ship back.

HER MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Because somewhere along the line she was given the impression that she could get away with it. And apparently she was right.

Problems? Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply, inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Outdoor Beauty

That lovely fair complexion of yours was never meant to stand up to the harsh summer weather. Be kind to it, see that it is well protected when you're golfing, lazing on the beach, or anywhere in the great outdoors. Wear a wide, shady hat and sunglasses — this will keep you from squinting your eyes. Before you venture out smooth on your oil of Olay before making-up, and don't forget your neck. Your skin will maintain a milky look despite the drying effect of the summer.

CHEF OF WEEK

Outdoor living his cup of tea (with scones, that is)

KENNETH G. WALKER

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
Food Editor

"Don't Fence Me In" is his philosophy, NOT particularly his favorite song. To him, the wide open spaces hold very special meaning.

Today's Chef of the Week, Kenneth G. Walker, possesses the same penchant for banking as his grandfather, the late C. J. Walker, and his dad, Gus Walker. Kenneth is executive vice president of Farmers & Merchants Bank which was started by his grandfather 58 years ago.

A native of Seaside Hospital, Ken claims as his alma maters, Poly High and USC, where he majored in business administration and economics. His career in banking started at the age of 14, when he manned the elevator.

As for wide open spaces, Ken and his wife, Nancy, and their five youngsters have, for 15 years, been "avocation" farmers on their 1,500-acre ranch to the north. Cotton, barley and sugar beet crops vie for attention with horses, cattle and a few chickens. Since Ken's first pet was a pig—then a donkey which followed him to school, there just might be a few of those around, too. Forty polo ponies are also residents of the ranch.

RIDING, DISCING, picking cotton and driving a D-8 caterpillar come second nature to John, 16, Howard, 15, Daniel, 13, and are not exactly foreign to Anne Cornelia, 7, and Henry, 1.

A 4-hole polo player, Walker is a member of a polo team, composed of members from Oregon to San Diego, which rides in the Santa Barbara match each year. He's equally adept with fire and branding irons.

Walker has served as president of the Independent Bankers' Association, and as a director of Group 5, California Bankers' Association, both high spots in an independent banker's career.

He also has served as a director of Memorial Hospital, YMCA, Armed Services YMCA, and American Gold Star Homes.

SO WRAPPED up in his work is he, it isn't unusual for him to call home and suggest the family go to dinner, long after hungrier members of the family have eaten.

If our "Chef" does undertake to cook, he can do it well. But generally speaking, his reputation as a cook matches his Dad's—it leaves a bit to be desired. His recipe for F & M Scones, however, is guaranteed.

F & M SCONES

2 cups self-rising flour
½ cup sugar (a bit more, if desired)
1 stick margarine or butter
½ cup currants
1 egg
Approx. ⅓ cup buttermilk or milk

Rub margarine into flour with finger tips till mixture resembles fine bread crumbs. Add sugar and currants and mix well. Add beaten egg and enough milk or buttermilk until mixture leaves sides of bowl. Roll mixture out and cut into triangles or rounds. Brush top with beaten egg and bake in 425-degree oven for 10 to 12 minutes. Split open and spread with butter—eat hot or cold.

Hawaii calls newlyweds

Mary Catherine Montgomery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dion M. Montgomery, 218 Euclid Ave., exchanged wedding vows with William W. Stanton Jr. in an afternoon ceremony Saturday in First Congregational Church.

She wore a wedding gown of imported French pique.

Mrs. Marshall Kremers was matron of honor for her sister. Bridesmaids were another sister, Kathleen Montgomery, and Mrs. Stephan Meek.

THE BRIDEGROOM, son of Dr. and Mrs. William W. Stanton, 909 Claiborne Drive, was attended by Richard von KleinSmid as best man. Ushering the 350 guests were Michael McConnell, Robert Montgomery, John Avery, Robert Avery Jr. and Tim Cockcroft.

A church reception preceded the newlyweds' departure on a trip to Hawaii. They will be at home in San Francisco after Aug. 1. He is a student at the University of California Medical School; his bride will teach school in Daly City.

Costume look is 'in' for fall-winter '66

INSIDE STORY for fall is fur . . . Chinchilla-dyed French rabbit makes lining for jacket of Jack Sarnoff costume in gray worsted. Sliver of dress underneath is cut on bias to move in close on body. (Shoes by Caressa, hat by Mr. John Jr.)

"blessing in disguise."

"Perhaps because of these far out clothes, the couture has swung to a young but elegant opposite—to trends that are beautiful, gay and in good taste."

THE NEW GIRL IN Townley's collection, designed by Chuck Howard, is a graceful sophisticate.

She's the kind of fashion know-it-all who'll be at home in jet or limousine—or at the "right" restaurant. Her hat's an exaggerated cap, built high with the visor tilted slightly to the side like a grenadier's.

In his collection, like most, necklines are swatched high for daytime dresses and costumes. Often they're definite turtle necks . . . sometimes three-cornered scarves that ride free and easy.

Designers have assumed all of women's what-to-wear-with-what problems. Dresses and suits just don't go solo anymore.

If you wear either without its companion cover-up, you'll be (pardon the expression) only half-dressed.

Says Branell: "The costume effect, whether in dress and jacket or three-piece ensemble, has left the suit, as it was once known, far behind."

Monte-Sano & Pruzan's talented and volatile designer, Jacques Tiffeau, does go-with coats that are shorter-than-long, showing the world that dress and coat are twin-types.

Often the dresses are half-and-half, the bottom half the same tweedy or covert material as the coat.

Hacking suits, such as featured by Larry Aldrich, look prophetic with longer jackets, double-vent backs and weskits. Fencer jackets (very newsy), buttoned far to the side, are worn over "sandwich board" skirts with sassy side pleats.

What else is new in New York?

Now . . . for one paper dollar . . . you can go gift-wrapped in a disposable dress (93% paper, 7% nylon) put out by Mars Manufacturing Co. All earthlings can love it and leave it.

Sleeveless, A-line, fire and water resistant . . . after just a few wearings, just throw it into space.

Newest "in" place for New York discotheque writhers is The Cheetah, 53rd and Broadway (that's the old Palladium). It adds a fashion note, too, with its Cheetabooteek, an all-night vendor of far-out garb (more about that in a later story) . . .

Reflecting today's fashion look, Klein's Department Store features a window of short-short miniskirts, each mannequin has a big daisy painted on her knee.

The title "up go the skirts, down go the eyes."

More on-the-scene fashion news tomorrow.

Baton champ warns hopefuls to watch out for trombones

By ELISE EMERY

Beverly Miller Johnson just can't stop twirling.

She started by chance when she was 9, went on to win herself right out of competition.

One day little Beverly went with a friend to a baton twirling lesson and before long was a member of Ted Otis's Twirlerettes. Her first trophy was for attendance. Then the pretty brunette began sweeping the field.

Some high spots:

The first time the Lakewood High School Lancer Marching Band competed in the All Western Band Review, in 1958, Beverly won the title of top girl baton twirler. The band, only two years old, stepped out smartly before 100,000 spectators, proud in bright red uniforms, white shoes and gloves, and glittering shakos. Beverly, 15, led the band, one of 60 units in competition, and repeated her sweepstakes honors the next year.

SHE WENT right on winning dozens and dozens of trophies.

She became state champion in January 1960, taking highest honors in the National Majorette contest in the Winter Carnival at St. Paul, Minn.

And that did it.

With that trophy, when she was 17, Beverly became ineligible to compete again. However, in March 1961, within one week, she was named Miss Teen Age Miss by Lakewood Junior Women's Club and was selected Lakewood's Good Citizen of the Year by the DAR.

Her advice then to ambitious twirlers was, "Just stay out in front and watch out for the trombones."

Beverly attended California State College at Long Beach for three years. In 1963 she married Roger R. Johnson, who teaches band and orchestra at DeMille Junior High School.

BEFORE her marriage she had garnered 252 trophies.

"It's a puzzle to know where to put them," admitted her mother, Mrs. D. G. Miller, 3760 Greenbrier Road. Both Mr. and Mrs. Miller are active in the Baton Boosters Association and their son, Darryl, 18, took 187 trophies before he won the senior boys national championship in 1964, thus also becoming ineligible for further competition.

"There are trophies on bookshelves and tables, in boxes, in the attic. I rotate them from time to time. It's a problem to keep them dusted.

"But there are two we'll never put away—the two sportsmanship trophies the children won."

BEVERLY, whose home now is at 5359 Anaheim Road, still teaches at her parents' home.

She began teaching when she was 13—two neighborhood youngsters.

"But baton twirlers will go a long way for lessons," she said.

Once a month she conducts classes in San Diego and one of her pupils, Carol Moss, 15, meets her there for lessons. Carol is last year's national junior champion. She lives in El Centro.

"I'm much more nervous when one of my students is competing than when I myself used to compete," Beverly smiled.

"She's beginning to see how parents feel when their youngsters are in contests," her mother added.

BATON TWIRLING, said Beverly, is a combination of art and sport, calling for dancing, an exacting sense of rhythm, and coordination of all the muscles of the body.

Beverly first teaches her students the eight basic twirls.

"Then you can get creative and combine them. Wherever we've traveled, I've taken lessons—even if just one—from the top twirler in the area to get new ideas."

Once, there was a great difference of style between East Coast and West Coast twirling. With the rise of music camps, bringing together young people from all over the United States, the styles are becoming more alike.

Beverly and her husband are enroute to the America's Youth on Parade exposition which will feature activities of the National Baton Twirling Association on the campus of the University of Mississippi today through next Saturday. As chief judge and assistant director of the exposition she will evaluate important contests and serve as director of the first annual national majorette parade contest.

SEVERAL thousand participants, representing outstanding twirlers, drum majors and majorettes, color guards and drummers from all over the nation have registered for the event. The spectacular is a joint effort of the university and the National Twirling Association.

"The association is the second largest organization for young people in the country—second only to Girl Scouts," Beverly pointed out proudly. "You learn a lot of twirling, but the most important lesson is sportsmanship."

THE PUBLIC is invited to a reception to mark officially the opening of the "Long Beach Art Association Exhibition" and the "Edge of Pop" today at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. Time is 2 to 4 p.m. Refreshments will be served by Friends of the Museum.

Concurrently, today a reception will be given in Long Beach Art Association Gallery, 800 E. Ocean Blvd., where the other half of the LBAA show hangs. The public is invited to this, also.

"AFRICAN SCULPTURES" opens Monday at Cerritos College Art Gallery 11110 E. Alondra Blvd., Norwalk. The authentic African pieces are on loan from the Segy Gallery in New York and includes more than 30 works from the Belgian Congo, Liberia, Sierra Leone and South Rhodesia.

Says Walter Jones, gallery director, "among the sculptures is a mask used by the ancestor cult of the Baule tribe along the Ivory Coast. The cult is based on the concept that the mask became the abode of the spirit of the ancestor, who might have been the ancestor of the tribe or the deceased father or mother."

The gallery is open during the summed Mondays through Fridays from 2 to 9 p.m. There is no admission charge.

ARTIST of the month at Lakewood Artists Guild Gallery, 5942 South St., Lakewood, is Al Kramsky. His exhibit includes portraits, landscapes, seascapes and a panel of unusual bottles. Gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays with Friday hours extended to 9 p.m., closed Sundays.

Lakewood Artists Guild formerly was named Lakewood Art Association.

THE 14TH ANNUAL All City Outdoor Art Festival in Los Angeles will take place Saturday through July 24 in Barnsdall Park, on Hollywood Boulevard, one block west of Vermont.

The public may see, at no charge, nearly a mile of oils, water colors, acrylic, tempera, pastel, crayon, chalk, ink, pencil, charcoal, intaglios, woodcut, collage, metal, wood, plastic, stone, aggregate materials and assemblages.

Saturday, Gabriel Bartold will conduct a concert band from 1 to 3 p.m., Los Angeles Shakespeare Repertory Company will present excerpts from 3:15 to 4:15 p.m. and "Spontaneous Sound" by Christopher Tree will feature gongs, tympani, cymbals, bells, chimes and a Tibetan temple horn from 5 to 5:30 p.m. Varied entertainment will be offered throughout the festival.

There will be free shuttle bus service from the Hollywood Boulevard entrance to the festival grounds.

FESTIVAL air will prevail also next Saturday and Sunday at the San Clemente Fiesta, 2475 S. El Camino Real, San Clemente. One high light will be a huge open air art sale. Other events will be a ranch style breakfast in the open, a 10:30 a.m. parade and amusements in Plaza Park. There will be free gifts and refreshments and a lucky guest will receive an oil painting.

LBAA 42nd annual shown in two galleries

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

The "42nd Annual Exhibition" of the Long Beach Art Association is on display this month. The works selected by Dr. Charles M. Thompson are at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., and the rest are in the association's gallery, 800 E. Ocean Blvd.

The museum show is attractive, much is good work, but, with notable exceptions, this could have been an exhibit in 1965 or 1960, or . . . Artists whose work looked good and promising then still are doing the same thing now. It is hard to account for this. Long Beach is not located in some remote hamlet, but is surrounded by exhibits of the most exciting art of our time.

Among artists that are "with it" is Robert Oxenfeld whose steel sculpture is a monumental concept and could be executed in any size. It reaches and grows in two long tendrils which terminate in interlocked rings. A cluster of disks carry the motif from the base which is, itself, a ring.

BYRON RODARMEL'S "New Day" in black and white has much going: It's in the powerful figure tradition of Rico Le Brun, it occupies the field in an excellent composition, it expands joyously into our space.

Best of show went to Don Hadley for his oil, "Wilted Wildflowers." Dr. Eugene Wallin, who took second best of show, uses a luxuriously large brush in his wet on wet watercolor, "Pacific Outpost," to gain a turbulency and expression in limited color in this medium. Edna Padrick won first honorable mention with an oil, "Weed Pots."

ALSO TO BE mentioned in a positive vein are Grace Dimmick's thoughtful "5 Faces in a Mirror—August '65," Florence Arnold's immaculate optical "Red Figure," Loyce Carhart's witty "Condominium," and Jov Elliott's college, "Shibui 4" (though Shibui it is not).

It would have been easy to say something nice about every work in the show, but these are serious artists who have mastered technique. Thus, the show does not warrant an indulgent review so much as a prodding to get out, look, understand, feel, and "get with it."

'Bus to Bowl' has Hollywood goal

"Bus to Bowl" is a project of the Long Beach Committees of Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, offering anyone interested transportation, box supper and a choice seat at the Rumanian Folk Ballet's performance at Hollywood Bowl Saturday, Aug. 6.

This is the ballet company which brought audiences to their feet cheering the artistry, exuberance and flashing patterns for seven performances at the Music Center in March.

The indefatigable Rumanians will appear in the Bowl Aug. 1, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10. The Long Beach bus—or buses—will leave for the Aug. 6 performance promptly at 6:15 p.m., from Petroleum Club, 3636 Linden Ave. The price is $6.50. Checks must be received by July 27, made payable to Long Beach Auxiliary, Southern California Symphony. Mail them to Mrs. Leroy Carlisle, 2015 Pine Ave.

THIS WEEK, Thomas Schippers, young American conductor, will lead the Los Angeles Philharmonic in two concerts, both beginning at 8:30 p.m. Leonard Pennario will be soloist on the all-Beethoven program Tuesday and Itzhak Perlman, Israeli violinist; Gwendolyn Killebrew, American mezzo-soprano; and the Roger Wagner Chorale will join the conductor and orchestra for the Thursday performance.

Friday will be jazz night featuring the Stan Getz Quartet, Jimmy Smith Trio, the John Handy Quintet and vocalist Sarah Vaughan.

Saturday, composer-conductor Percy Faith will direct the Hollywood Bowl Pops Orchestra with the George Shearing Quintet as special guests.

Grove concert

Pianist Marilyn Neeley and cellist Joanna de Keyser will be featured in the second "Concerts in the Grove" concert Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Soroptimist House patio at California State College, Long Beach. Miss Neeley has appeared with more than 50 orchestras in this country and Mexico. Miss de Keyser is an acknowledged master of the cello. Tickets are $1.50.

Brown in 'Oliver'

Georgia Brown, British singing star who created the lead of Nancy in "Oliver!" in London and New York, will again play the role at Carousel Theater, West Covina. The musical adaptation of Dickens' "Oliver Twist" will run two weeks, beginning Tuesday.

Kay Starr to replace Merman

Kay Starr whose latest engagement was at the New Century Plaza Hotel, Los Angeles, will replace Ethel Merman in "Call Me Madam" Aug. 16 through 28 at Melodyland Theater, Anaheim.

The musical is one of the theater-in-the-round's summer programs. "How to Succeed in Show Business Without Really Trying" will play July 19 through 31, following the current "Little Me" with Jack Carter and Sheila Doyle. Other musicals will be "The Sound of Music," Aug. 2 through 14, and Kiss Me Kate," Sept. 6 through 18.

iDscounts will be given on purchase of tickets for all four coming shows and patrons may use their BankAmericards when buying by mail order.

Laguna tells dates for opera

The 1966 Festival of Opera, which will follow the Festival of Arts in Irvine Bowl, Laguna Beach, will include three different programs given in six performances.

Productions are "Madam Butterfly" Aug. 19 and 20 (with a special hospital benefit Aug. 21); "Spanish Hour" and "Carmina Burana" Aug. 26 and 27; and "Tales of Hoffmann" Sept. 2 and 3.

Opera-goers who want to enjoy a picnic under the stars may order, at $2 each, box suppers including fried chicken, cole slaw, cranberry jelly, roll and fruit tart. Orders may be placed with the Festival of Opera.

Mathis to sing at Greek

How does an entertainer become a star? Sometimes it takes years of study and preparation and hard work before a performer is recognized. In the case of Johnny Mathis, who will be at the Greek Theater for one week beginning Monday, it took natural talent and being seen at the right place at the right time by the right person.

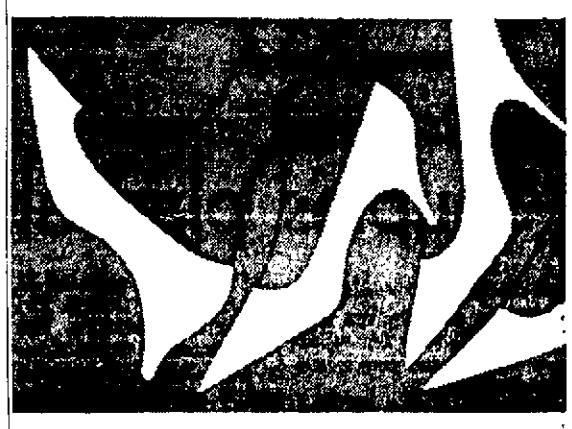

Johnny at 19 was just ready to begin his second year at San Francisco State College. Although he had studied for seven years with a well-known vocal coach, he decided to continue as an undergrad and not to make singing his career.

Then one Sunday afternoon he attended an informal jazz session staged by friends. Johnny sang a song to the audience which happened to include a talent scout for Columbia Records in New York, who was vacationing in San Francisco.

After the show, the scout sent a telegram to New York, "Have found phenomenal 19-year-old boy! Send blank contracts!" Johnny signed with Columbia.

Mathis will be accompanied by his own orchestra under the direction of Jack Feierman and a new exciting group formed here in California "Our Young Generation" consisting of 14 talented boys and girls.

She carried a Bible with hand-carved mother of pearl cover, brought to her as a gift from Jerusalem. It was topped with an arrangement of white orchids and stephanotis.

MRS. RICHARD F. HUGHES

Mrs. James R. Carlson of Boulder, Colo., sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Other attendants were Mrs. Allen Roth and Miss Luanne Stroppe. Wendy Sukman was flower girl.

A NATIVE of Long Beach, the new Mrs. Hughes will transfer her credits from California State College at Long Beach to Fresno State where she will resume her schooling in the fall.

The bridegroom received early schooling in Wales, where he was born. He attended the Royal Army Apprentice School at Chepstow, Mon., South Wales, a school for army officers serving the United Kingdom. He spent three years in Germany in the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers attached to the Royal Dragoon Guards.

The bride was active in Girl Scouting for 11 years, is a charter member of Memorial Hospital's Volunteens, Voluntones and the hospital's adult Volunteers.

South ran the rest of his diamonds while West followed. South checked off four diamonds.

Then South took his ace and king of clubs and checked off two clubs when West discarded on the last club lead.

This meant that West had started with five spades and was still holding four of them. East therefore held only one spade.

South played his king of spades. West took his ace and led the suit back. He couldn't do anything else because he was down to spades. South ducked the dummy and let the trick ride around to his ten spot.

There was no danger in the play. South knew that East had no more spades just as surely as if East had exposed his hand.

THE expression "counting the hand" represents bridge thought at its best. It also is fairly easy if you get in the habit of starting your count early and bear in mind that when you know how many cards a player holds in three suits then by simple substraction from 13 you know the total in the fourth.

Everyone at the table except South scraped the bottom of the barrel in order to find bids.

With 19 high card points, South was well within bounds when he jumped to three no-trump.

South won the second heart and went to dummy with the queen of clubs in order to lead the ten of diamonds for a finesse. West won with the king and, for want of anything better to do, returned the suit.

USUALLY, when both sides play the same suit one is wrong but this time both sides were playing correctly.

South checked off two hearts for West. Had West held another heart, West would have led that suit.

Traveling with Stan Delaplane

SAN FRANCISCO—Here's something worthwhile on any trip. IAMAT (International Association for Medical Assistance to Travelers) has 140 offices in 50 countries. Phone open 24 hours a day.

You call. They send you an English-speaking doctor — he's backgrounded on North Americans, common allergies, what medicines they can tolerate and so on. You need a membership card. It's free. From a travel agent or write the office of the Association at 745 Fifth Ave., New York City.

A good booklet is "Health Guide for Travelers," 50 cents, from Consumers Union, Mount Vernon, N.Y. 10550. Gives list of shots you need for all parts of the world; medical supplies to take along; common sense ideas on how to stay well.

Have your teeth checked before you take off. Take along the prescription for your glasses. Most common overseas problems are hangover, sunburn, insect bites, dysentery.

* * * *

"Do we need vaccinations for a trip to Mexico?"

MEXICO always checks my yellow health card when I go in at Mexico City airport but not when I drive in. However, the United States won't let you back into America from anywhere without it — certified that you've had a smallpox vaccination within the last three years. Get U.S. Health or your local Board of Health to certify it.

U.S. Public Health will send you recommended immunizations. Jet travel has brought some rapid epidemics to Europe—smallpox and typhoid. It's comforting to know you've had shots when you read that in the morning paper.

* * * *

"We will take a leisurely driving trip around England in September. Some of it in the Lake country (where my family originated). Do you know of a way we can trace their history?"

BRITISH Travel (the Government tourist office) should have some information on this. At 64 St. James's St., London, or 680 Fifth Ave., New York City. There are a lot of records that can be searched—taxes, land holdings, births, deaths.

If the original immigrants to America go many generations back, you ought to research as much as you can here. It can be done by mail. Gives you a better idea what you're looking for. There are people who do this for you and tell you where to look overseas. I had this done once. Not inexpensive, but it shortcuts the work and is reliable.

"We would like to bring back some unusual mementoes of England, too."

BRASS RUBBING is becoming very popular with tourists to England. These are flat brass tomb markers in English churches — usually a knight in armor three to four feet long. You put architect's paper over it and rub it with a black wax crayon. (You get an impression just like the ones you made as a child by putting paper over a penny and rubbing it with a pencil.) Spray it with fixative. Take it home and frame it.

The how-to-do-it book is Macklin's "Monumental Brasses"—Foyle's enormous book store in London or the bookshop at the London Times. You can rub at Westminster Abbey—you have to reserve and pay for a length of time.

WHY SO MANY VOLKSWAGENS LIVE TO BE 100,000

The Volkswagen isn't the kind of a car you trade in after a year or two.

It's designed and built for keeps.

The pistons in a VW travel a shorter distance per mile than almost any other car in the world. That means less wear. Engine friction and stress are so low that cruising speed is the same as top speed! Continuity in making the same basic model year after year has led to Volkswagen's quality of assembly—the kind that a $5,000 car would be proud of; to say nothing of a car that sells for $1663.

Just to give you an idea: A Volkswagen is so airtight, it's a good practice to open the window before you slam the door. Even after you've had it for several years.

So. If you own a '61 or '62 VW that you've taken good care of, why would you want to trade it in for a '66 — which looks just like it? You wouldn't. You'd keep it, and have the pleasure of seeing 99,999 on your VW's odometer turn to 00,000.

AT CAPISTRANO'S NEW WAX MUSEUM

Rubbing elbows with history

By Fred Taylor Kraft
Travel Editor

You may now brush elbows with men and women whose names are emblazoned on the pages of history.

Well, you almost can.

There, before you, stands George Washington, the "Father of His Country," and beside him is John Adams, our second President, and Thomas Jefferson who, more than any other man, molded America's mind and spirit. Seated in front of them is Benjamin Franklin, inventor and statesman extraordinary.

They seem to be immersed in deep thought. Somehow, you expect one of them to turn and speak.

Then your mind brings you back through time to the present: the figures, though startling real, are not. You are visiting the new Mission Wax Museum in Orange County's historic San Juan Capistrano.

* * * *

LOCATED directly across the street from the old mission, in this last of the old Spanish pueblo towns in Southern California, the $1 million museum was opened in January by George Druck-er, Newport yachtsman, after three years of painstaking research.

"This is no ordinary wax museum," manager Donald Cline declares. "No horror chamber is seen here, as has been traditional with wax museums of the past. Neither do you see contemporary entertainment personalities as in other wax museums."

You look about you. The 31 scenes assembled, well worth driving many miles to see, are mostly significant to the area and to the mission itself.

Lane explains: "Early in its development, it was decided that this wax museum should offer the visitor the same feeling of history and pageantry he seeks when he visits the old mission, to capitalize on the 'built-in' theme already prevalent in the local area, a virtual gold mine of history."

* * * *

AND SO BEGAN the task of assembling the scenes.

The London firm of Josephine Tussaud, great-great-granddaughter of Madam Tussaud, was commissioned to produce the figures needed. K. L. Gems, grandson of the originator of the secret method of wax sculpture, and the firm's craftsmen, went to work.

Human hair from Italy, optical glass eyes used in medical work in Germany, and care in creating life-size likenesses have resulted in this most spectacular return to historic moments, to be viewed by most of the 750,000 visitors who make the trip to San Juan Capistrano mission each year.

* * * *

FATHER Junipero Serra, founder of the mission in 1776, is seen first as you approach the entrance to the museum, dominating an attractive window display.

Inside, you pass displays of early New World conquest. "The God From the East" is the first scene. Resplendent of the era of the Spanish Conquistadores, it shows Cortez and Dona Marina in the Court of Montezuma.

Next is the finely chiseled figure of King Philip II, Spain's ruling monarch during the conquest of the New World. Following are scenes of the early mission Fathers followed by the "Doomed Emperor" scene featuring the tragic figures of Maximilian and Carlotta. Other historic personalities include Pancho Villa and Zapata, Kit Carson and John C. Fremont.

* * * *

A WIDE RANGE of United States and world history also is displayed. There are Grant and Lee, Napoleon Bonaparte, Caesar and Cleopatra, Churchill and Roosevelt, Lincoln, Charles de Gaulle and Pope Paul VI, Prince Rainier and Princess Grace, all so lifelike that visitors whisper when they stand before them in the darkened corridors.

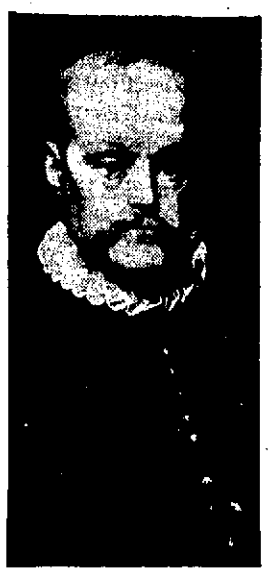

The museum is open seven days a week, from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Lane pointed out that the management recently instituted a package tour — "Capistrano Adventure"—to group of 10 or more. It includes a tour of the Mission and the Wax Museum, a visit to the large El Toro Fine Arts Gallery, a meal at the Mexico Lindo Restaurant, a free gift from the El Patio Gift Shop, and a lithograph of the mission, all for $2.89; or, without the meal, $1.40 per person.

At the end of your tour, you may sigh and say to yourself: "If they could only speak!"

KING PHILLIP II, Spain's ruling monarch during conquest of New World, as he appears in wax.

3-hour guided cruise best way to see New York

One of the best ways to see the famous New York skyline, its great bridges and other sights known round the world is to take a three-hour guided sightseeing cruise around Manhattan Island.

More than a million persons, residents and visitors alike, take the 35-mile trip every year and get a new perspective on the nation's largest city which reveals facets that cannot be seen from land or even from the air.

The breeze-cooled cruises leave at frequent intervals from the Circle Line's new pier, No. 83, at W. 43rd St. and the Hudson River, and sail counter - clockwise around the island — down the Hudson to the Upper New York Bay, round the Battery, up the East River, through the Harlem and back into the Hudson.

* * * *

TRAINED guides point out the sights over a sound system as the boats get underway, with New Jersey on the right and Manhattan on the left. The announcer calls attention to the place, high on the Palisades in Jersey, where Alexander Hamilton fought his fatal duel with Aaron Burr. Then he points out the Empire State Building, the world's tallest building, which dominates the midtown area.

As the cruise progresses, it is more than likely it will pass one of the great ocean liners like the Queen Elizabeth or the United States as she enters or leaves the port. Soon the Wall Street financial district comes into view with its jagged skyline soaring into the blue—the same sight that first greets tourists arriving from Europe.

The cruise boat continues down the bay, past the Battery on the tip of Manhattan, for a close view of the Statue of Liberty, with ample time for camera fans to get their shots of the monument which is 80 years old this year.

Christendom's holiest shrine being restored

The Church of the Holy Sepulchre in Old Jerusalem, Jordan, holiest shrine in Christendom for the world's one billion Christians, is now undergoing a complete renovation which will cost more than $2 million and take several years to complete.

Beneath the rotunda of the church's great dome lies the traditional Tomb of Christ, and the church also shelters the site of Calvary and the last five Stations of the Cross. As it stands today, the Church of the Holy Sepulchre dates to the 12th century, the Crusader period in Old Jerusalem. But down the centuries war, fire, earthquake and inadequate repairs have caused general deterioration of the church, a huge complex of rambling passageways, chapels, cloisters, crypts and candlelit shrines.

Stone block by block, frieze by frieze, workmen are now restoring the present structure, which has for years been supported by a maze of steel braces, to its former architectural beauty. A Tripartite Commission, consisting of members appointed by Armenian Orthodox, Greek Orthodox, Roman Catholic sects, who share rights in the church, are supervising the work.

Shows opening in this area this week include "And Now Miguel" and "Nevada Smith." At the left is a scene from "And Now Miguel," based on the book awarded the John Newberry Medal by the American Library Association as an outstanding children's book and starring Guy Stockwell, Clu Gulager, Michael Ansara and Pat Cardi. At the right star Steve McQueen is shown in a scene from the hard-hitting western, "Nevada Smith."

PHIL SPECTOR, TEEN TYCOON

From 'Da Doo Ron Ron' to Art Movies

By PETER BART
Copyright 1964, New York Times News Service

HOLLYWOOD — The news item, at first glance, seemed utterly implausible. "Phil Spector," it said, "is making an art movie." Phil Spector? An art movie? We reached for the phone.

The voice on the other end of the line belonged to Danny Davis, Spector's promotion man. "Listen, baby, not only is Philly working on a picture but he says it will win the Cannes Film Festival. And you know Philly, I mean, he's a groovy kind of genius. If he says it will win, baby, it will win."

"But Phil Spector? You're putting me on."

"Like, you want to go see him and ask him yourself? You should ask Philly in person, is he going to win the Cannes Festival or not."

* * * *

PHIL SPECTOR, the first "teen tycoon" of the rock 'n' roll era, is a sort of American Beatle who has pulled down $5 million or so turning out such epics as "Da Doo Ron Ron" and, "Oh Yeah, Maybe Baby."

Later, outside Spector's Hollywood-Edwardian mansion, once the manor house of one of Los Angele's most imposing estates, Davis said:

"Philly has produced 26 records in the last four years and 18 of those sold a million or more. There's never been anyone like him. A groovy kind of genius."

Spector's long black limousine stood in the spacious driveway, a "Send Batman to Viet Nam" sticker on its bumper. Two lissome teen-age girls were frolicking in the swimming pool. "Teenyboppers," Davis explained softly. "They wander in here somehow."

* * * *

SPECTOR, lean, pale and looking older than his 25 years, greeted his visitors in his baronial, elegantly paneled living room. Handsome oil paintings of British landscapes adorned the walls.

Spector was attired in a blue velour sports shirt with a large wraparound collar and skin tight brown slacks. His neatly coiffed hair was shoulder length, his sideburns plummeted below his jawbone.

Would a man who could make millions of dollars driving out "Da Doo Ron Ron" and "Oh Yeah, Maybe Baby" really want to turn his back on all that and switch to, like, art movies?

"Art is a game," Spector explained in a soft, reedy voice. "If you win that game too regularly it tends to lessen your motivation. That's why I've lost interest in the record business. If I stayed at it I would just be playing for public approval, not for what suits me.

"The sad thing is that most great artists start playing to the public rather than for their own satisfaction. That's why I must move on." There was a reverent silence. Spector stared into space and Davis stared at the floor.

"My first movie will be called 'The Last Movie.' It will be an art movie. I am an admirer of Truffaut, Stanley Kubrick, Fellini. It'll be in that tradition. Hollywood needs that kind of movie."

* * * *

THE FILM, he explained, will be a contemporary western on the theme of guilt and will be set in a Latin-American town. It will go before the cameras in Mexico Sept. 15. Stewart Stern has written the script and the director will be Dennis Hopper, a young actor who Spector believes can be an American Truffaut.

Spector says he has been talking to Jason Robards, Jane Fonda, Jennifer Jones, Joseph Cotten and Roddy McDowell, among others. And if the studios don't finance it? "In that case, I will," he said.

The butler padded softly into the living room bringing some apple pie and root beer. "You might check out the teeny boppers and see if they want anything," Spector told him.

EARL WILSON

Dean's Secret Vice

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK—Comedian Dom DeLuise, who's taken over as one of Dean Martin's summer replacements, took me into his confidence and revealed to me the true nature of Dean's secret vice.

"I thought I was going to see a totally bombed guy," Dom said.

"Instead, Dom is in his room eating peanut butter. That's correct, peanut butter sandwiches. His room is full of cold cuts till it looks like an Italian wedding. And Dean is eating peanut butter, all day long he's eating peanut butter."

Dom, a Brooklyn boy who looks a little like Jonathan Winters, has made Dean his particular private hero. He most admired Dean's refusal to be restricted to the usual ways of taping TV. Dean does one dress rehearsal and then one take of the scene —and that's it.

"Dean, can you do it over?" a director may ask Dino.

"I just did it, Pal, didn't you see it?" he answers. If the director looks sad, Dean says:

"Once, Pal, once. I only do it once."

* * * *

"I HEARD DEAN say such a wonderful thing on the set of one show. There was a mixup and there were no cue cards!" Dom said.

"The director said 'It's not your fault, Dean, and it's not my fault.'

"Dean said, 'It's not your fault, and it's not my fault, and it's not Gregg's fault. It's nobody's fault — like Hitler.'"

Dom is almost equally in awe of Doris Day with whom he appears in the movie, "The Glass Bottom Boat."

"She invited me into her dressing room and her first words to me were 'Do you like brownies?'

"I took one and chopped it up and sent it to my relatives as relics," Dom said. "She calmed my worries by telling me that Alfred Hitchcock once said to her, "What's so important about it? It's only a picture.'

* * * *

"DORIS," Dom said, "is concerned about her image. There was a line in a script, where she was supposed to say 'Shut up.'

"She said 'I don't think that will sound right,' and it was changed. She goes toward flowers and prettiness and it works for her. She gets up early and walks four miles to keep her legs supple. At her summer place there were no maids. She did the serving.

Dom from Brooklyn has found Hollywood quite a wonderful world.

"I feel under an obligation," he said, "to mention on behalf of my wife, Carol Arthur, and I, that we're pregnant. My wife played Bea Lillie's maid in 'High Spirits' and now has a role in 'The Boys From Syracuse.' Fortunately, it's a fat part."

THE WEEKEND WINDUP..

Sandy Dennis got into her apt. house elevator wearing a long gown, and an old woman said, "Oh, darling — are you graduating tonight?" . . . Samantha Eggar's role in "Dr. Dolittle," with Rex Harrison, was offered first to Barbra Streisand . . . There'd be some real killing on the act of the "Vampire Killers" if one of the studio execs sees another: Budget trouble, etc . . . Stars working in a certain L.A. TV studio sometimes use a VIP washroom that has pornographic drawings hidden in the decor.

Ginger Rogers, now in "Hello, Dolly," says she likes to see her old films on TV: "It's so nice to watch yourself growing young gracefully" . . . The first act booked into the Living Room by Sammy Davis is singer Ronnie Dove . . . Kathryn Crosby'll end her summer stock tour in August to accompany Bing to Dublin (where he'll make "Rocket to the Moon") . . . Stripper Lili St. Cyr'll be back on B'way Aug. 8, getting $3,500 a week at the Hudson Burlesque . . . Singer Jill Sinclair gets to her jobs at swank clubs via motorcyle.

* * * *

THE N.Y. METS, who need everything else, now have a singalong book, compiled by Shea organist Jane Jarvis . . . Lesile Uggams'll make her first summer stock appearance Tuesday in "The Boy Friend." . . . Copa Comic Hank Bradford celebrated his Copa appearance with a fancy gift to himself — a 1916 Stutz Bearcat auto . . . The 30-minute love scene in "Mademoiselle" (between Jeanne Moreau and Ettore Manni) took 10 weeks to shoot.

Dick Shawn, who masquerades as a Spanish senorita in "What Did You Do in the War, Daddy?", will keep the comedy bit in his cafe act . . Natalie Wood's "Penelope" film will be in color—except for her bank robberies, which'll be in black and white . . . When "Beau Geste" plays in Santiago, Chile, top billing will go to the bellydancer in the film, Ava Zamora—'cause that's her home town.

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: At Arthur Cameron's H'wood party for Joe Pasternak, an inebriated woman shouted at an inebriated man, "Stop saying I remind you of your first wife—I was your first wife!"

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Middle age is when you discover an eight-hour day is ten hours long. — Walt Streightiff, Quote.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "There is no limit to what can be accomplished if it doesn't matter who gets the credit."

WHY NUDE?

"It's perfectly natural for a girl to answer the telephone in the nude if that's the way she is when it rings," said Susannah York in explaining why she agreed to play the nude scene in Warner Bros. "Kaleidoscope." Increasingly popular since her appearance in "Tom Jones," Susannah was recently named by Life Magazine as one of Europe's young stars-to-be.

'How to Succeed' to Bring Nelson, Vallee to Anaheim

The ancient saying that "too many cooks spoil the broth," doesn't apply to "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying."

This is the musical hit, starring Rick Nelson and Rudy Vallee which follows the current attraction, "Little Me," at Melodyland Theatre, opening July 19.

Seven talented people of varied backgrounds got together to produce "How To Succeed . . . " It started with author Shepard Mead, who wrote a popular book spoofing the stuffed shirts of big business. Then Jack Weinstock, a new graduate from the Bellevue Hospital Medical School and Willie Gilbert, fresh out of Ohio State University, got together and adapted the book for the stage.

Rudy Vallee was in the original production, as was Robert Morse, who is now a star. In the Melodyland version, Rick Nelson of the well-known Ozzie and Harriet Nelson family does the Morse role.

LONG BEACH ARENA

Ringling Circus Coming to Town

Ringling Bros., Barnum and Bailey Circus, featuring its newest attraction of a-go-go dancers performing atop lumbering pachyderms, is scheduled for separate engagements in Los Angeles and Long Beach within the next month.

Presenting two shows daily—at 2:30 and 8 p.m. —and three on Saturday, the circus will be held at the Los Angeles Sports Arena from July 20 through Aug. 2. The added Saturday performance will be at 10:30 a.m.

Opening in the Long Beach Arena on August 4, the Greatest Show on Earth will be presented on the same schedule through Aug. 7.

Admission for adults ranges from $2 to $4, and children under 12 years old are admitted free. All seats are reserved.

'Treasure Island' Glitters in Anaheim

By BILL DUNCAN

Damon Douglas, the tow-headed member of the "Treasure Island" cast at Melodyland Theater in Anaheim, proved his mettle as an actor Saturday when he portrayed a believable role of "Jim Hawkins" in the stage production of Robert Louis Stevenson's classic.

It was the opening of a two-month run of children's productions at the theater in the round. If the first production is any indication, the season should be a sellout.

Young Douglas, a member of the Melodyland Theater training school, bounced on and off stage like a professional. He carried off his lines like a trouper and proved the star of the show—especially in the eyes of the junior audience.

Jack Ritschel, portraying "Long John Silver," was excellent. The best casting was for "Dr. Livesy," played by Cosmo B. Inserra — he not only acted well but looked exactly like the character Stevenson wrote about.

The staging was superior, but for this type of show middle or rear seating is best if the illusion of an island adventure is to be sustained.

Costuming, lighting and sound gave realism to the production.

"Treasure Island" will run again on July 15 and 16. Next Melodyland children's presentation's are "Alice In Wonderland" July 22, 23, and July 29, 30; "Tom Sawyer," Aug. 5-6; Aug. 12-13 and "Junior Hi Jinks," Aug. 19-20 and Aug. 26-27.

FAMILY FUN

Hansel and Gretel Parody in Town

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Staff Writer

One of the theatrical phenomena of our time is the college-dormitory-produced musical which may eventually hit big-time show biz. Witness "The Fantasticks" out of the University of Texas.

Another eccentricity of the day is the growing number of shows titled "How to Succeed at Something Without Half Trying."

A combination of these — substitute Stanford for TU, "Witchery" for "Something" — opened an indefinite run Friday night as the first production in Community Playhouse's new upstairs Studio Theatre.

And while triple threat man King Hall's show may not crack the big league it is good family fun and not particularly mentally wearying on a hot summer's night.

Hall wrote, produce and directed this modern parody of the old Hansel and Gretel fairy story — then stars in what might be called the title role.

His "Mrs. Witch" is a victim of circumstances. With a name like that she must bake little children into gingerbread —or does she? The question remains unsolved.

* * * *

A TWIST on the old story has Hansel and Gretel eating nothing but cookies and cake provided by their father, the village baker. It is a craving for spinach and broccoli that sends Saundra Mathews and Mike Sterling off to the witch's wooded home and its surrounding vegetable garden.

A second variant on the old German folk legend is a "love interest" Hall introduces. Both a music and a dance teacher — Mary Frances Boddy and June Salow — are trying to hook the youngsters' father, Paul de Lucca.

As the kids progress into the forest they meet such characters as a Sandman who can't put anyone to sleep, a talking moon, a rat and lizard who offer good advise and, finally, Mrs. Witch's stove.

Ric Larson as the Sandman turns in a fine performance, and his production number, "Wrong Approach," was one of the show stoppers. He also handled choreography for a show marked with high quality precision dancing.

Following the show Mrs. Elias Day, veteran Long Beach drama-music teacher, was honored by Community Playhouse's board of directors.

She was given a gold plaque commemorating her "many years" of guidance to local hopefuls — including actress Laraine Day, who was present.

TRADES GUITAR FOR GUN

Singer Trini Lopez, who's usually at home captivating audiences at the Copa or the Sands, is playing a new tune these days as one of the 12 wartime criminals in MGM's "The Dirty Dozen," now shooting in England. The Dirty Dozen is based on the best-selling novel by E. M. Nathanson.

BERT'S EYE VIEW

'Big Valley' Star Protests Bedroom Scenes

By BERT RESNIK
TV and Radio Editor

PETER BRECK, one of the regular stars of ABC-TV's "The Big Valley," was angry. "We are heading," he roared "in the direction of 'Peyton Place Goes West' and I don't like that.

"We've got to start cutting them off at the pass instead of running them into the bedroom.

"If you're going to be a western, be a western."

In "The Big Valley," a western, Breck has the role of Nick Barkley, who runs the ranch. As Breck sees it, Nick is a hot-head who many times is put in a spot where he has to rebel.

And Breck, off-screen, was rebelling.

The series, he felt, had been fine in the beginning. It was an hour of the great outdoors in color. The viewer could escape out into the open.

Then came sex.

"WE HAD TWO RAPE SHOWS," said Breck. "Rape stories belong in the 'Defenders' or 'East Side, West Side,' not a western.

"There's enough in the history of California that we could use rather than exploit the bedroom."

And it's a bedroom that has been exploited too many thimes on "The Big Valley," in Breck's opinion.

There was one drama about a drought which also had another story element about the Barkley girl being in a compromising position in a man's hotel room.

"How," wondered Breck, "can a love scene be bigger than a drought?"

But that's the way they wanted it."

There was a script scene in which three rancehrs bust in the front door of the Barkley ranch house.

"The kind of a guy Nick is, he wouldn't just stand there and take that," said Breck.

The script had him doing just that.

"THEN ONE of the men started making slanderous remarks about Nick's sister and a man in a hotel room. The kind of a guy Nick is, he couldn't take that either."

But the script had him doing just that. Breck told them to write it right or write him out. He was excused from the scene.

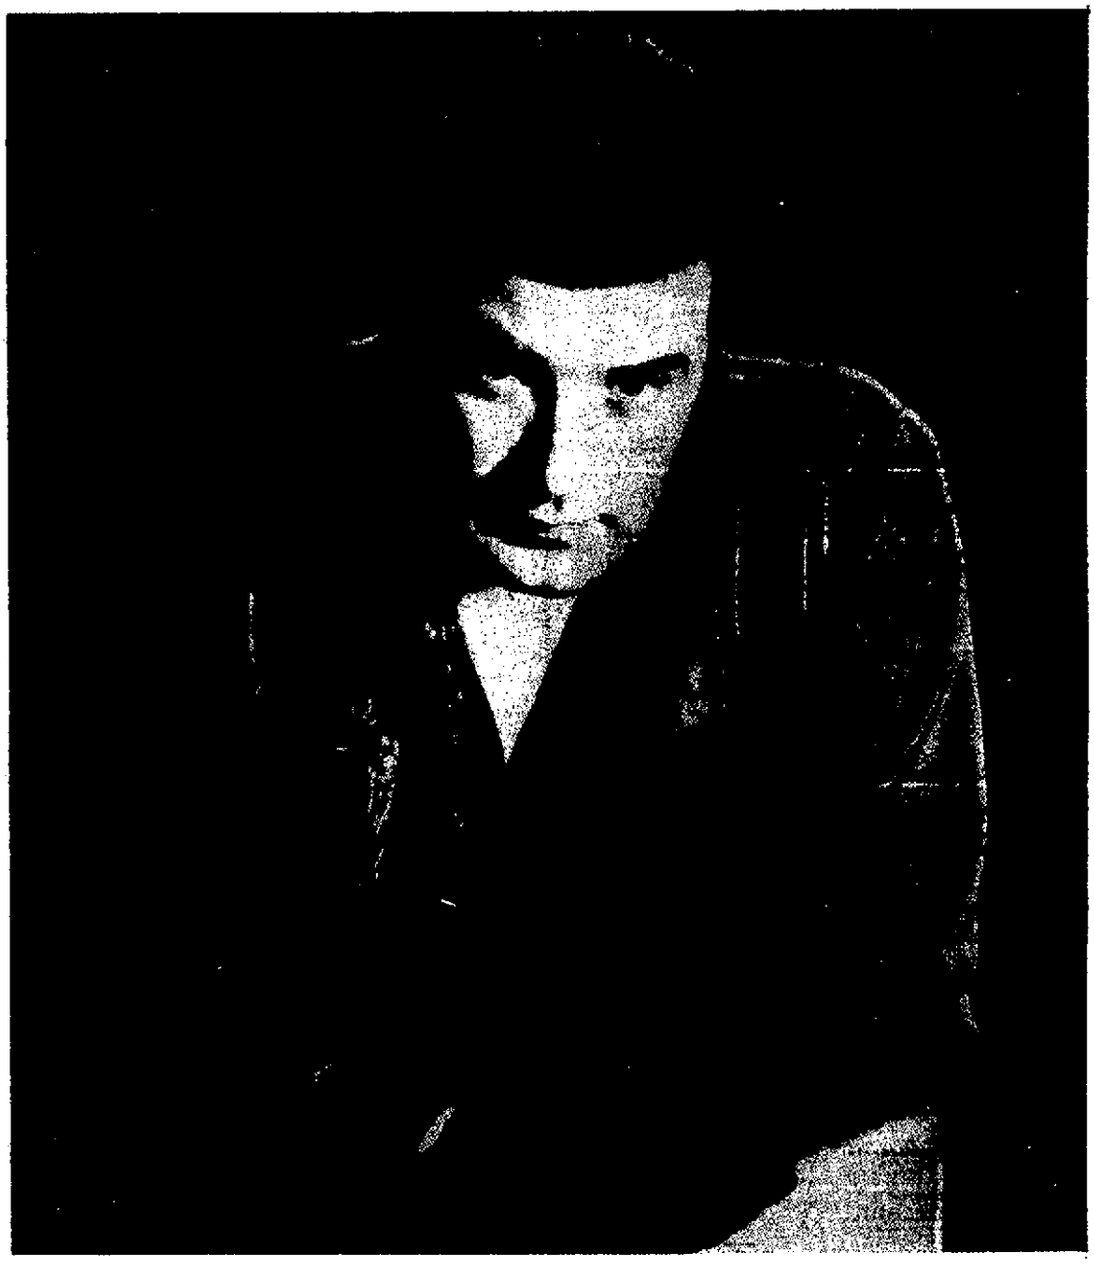

"I'm not going to prostitute Nick," said Breck. "People believe in him. They believe in him as much as I do. He's truth and life, not just a super-hero like 'Batman.'

"I believe in him and I'm not going to just read a script and pick up my check."

Breck knows what he wants. It's not more lead roles for Nick. It's not Nick carrying more shows.

When time came for negotiating the second season—"The Big Valley" will be back in the fall—Breck made his points.

Not more money. Not more publicity. Not more this and that.

PETER BRECK OF "THE BIG VALLEY"

(Also See "Most Valuable Advice" on Page 15.)

"I just want scripts to be definite like Nick. If the situation is wrong, write him out."

Breck hadn't yet seen any scripts for the second season. He was hopeful, though, that there would be fewer bedroom scenes.

And livingroom, too.

"There's not a bloody thing to do in the livingroom except stoke the fire and drink," he said.

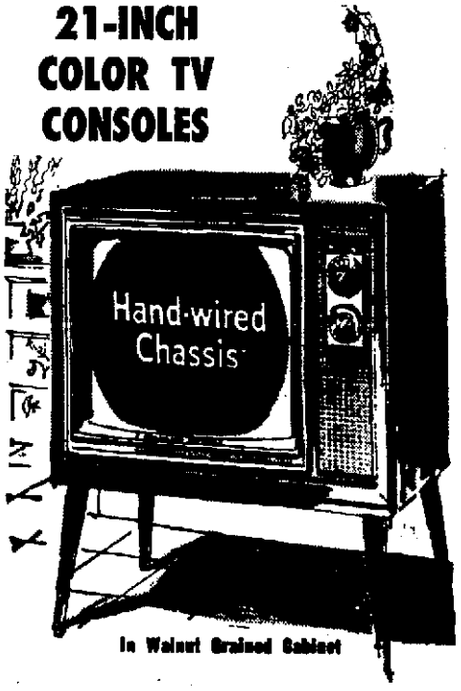

If the second-season scripts don't return to the great outdors and don't have Nick really running the ranch like he's supposed to, Peter Breck doesn't plan to head for the bedroom.

"If it continues like 'Peyton Place Goes West,'" he said, "I'm going East."

'Father Knows Best' Daughter Mother of Three--and Hardly Seems Day Older

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—A nice thing happened at a party recently and since it involves a longtime friend of yours, maybe you'd like to hear about it.

The nice thing occurred in a modest little millionaires' hangout called the Bel Air Country Club, in a room about the size of the Rose Bowl. And the occasion was a get-together for the latest group of ABC-TV executives to be promoted to their inevitably short, happy reigns at the top. It is a little like fattening the bulls before letting them out into the ring. More than 200 of Hollywood's finest partygoers turned out to praise the brave bulls and get their ears, and hardly anybody could remember the names of their predecessors.

The scene was sheer democracy in action, for there are certain other country clubs that do not cotton to actors and their compatriots, Madison Avenue haircuts or no. Legend, in fact, has it that Victor Mature once tried to join one of these other clubs with the explanation: "I'm no actor, and I have 35 pictures to prove it."

WELL, IF YOU WANT to know the truth, Mature was a pretty darned good actor, as you'll notice by watching his old murder mysteries on television. But that's not the nice thing I started to tell you about.

The nice thing took place near the end of the party, when I was just about worn down by the mental indigestion and sheer social discomfort of all such occasions, and I was angry at myself for breaking my vow to avoid them.

I flopped into a chair to recuperate, and as I looked around the room I noticed our longtime friend, Elinor Donahue, who portrayed the teen-age daughter of Robert Young and Jane Wyatt in one of television's most successful series, "Father Knows Best." Miss Donahue was standing in a little group that included her distinguished-looking husband, Harry Ackerman, a top Hollywood television production executive.

I marvel at how Miss Donahue hardly seemed a day older and how natural, wholesome and friendly she appeared at this function so well populated by sharks.

I HAD SEEN HER in person only once before, and a long time ago. It was so long ago, in fact, that I didn't even own a television set at the time and had no idea who she was. I was bumming through Los Angeles on my way to South America, and some movie-connected relatives in Beverly Hills suggested that I sponge off them for a few days and taste the good life before heading back to thumbing and bus fares.

One beautiful afternoon, they took me to one of those beautiful daytime Beverly Hills parties, at a beautiful home with loads of beautiful people who wandered around a beautiful pool and a beautiful living room, almost as big as the Bel Air Country Club's.

A young lady and I struck up a conversation, and of course she was Miss Donahue. We had a pleasant talk, and later her agent asked me if I would please drive her home. I did, we said goodbye, and not until the party of the brave bulls did I see her again.

Anyway, I noticed her, and she happened to turn around, and smiled a smile of recognition. I wondered whether she was merely being polite, or whether she really could do such a nice thing as to remember somebody from so long ago. I went over, and was astounded as she remembered the details of that nice afternoon.

She told me she now had three children, and I told her I had a daughter, and I asked her how come she wasn't acting any more, and she said she no longer was interested in it, and we exchanged pleasantries and said goodbye. So that is the latest of your longtime friend. She has a fine memory. It was a nice thing.

There's New 'Shane' on Show Biz Horizon

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—They've dusted off George Stevens' classic movie western, "Shane," for next year's television season.

The wide screen 1953 epic starred the late Alan Ladd in the title role, Jean Arthur, Van Heflin and Brandon DeWilde as the boy.

At the time of its release one 13-year-old sat goggle-eyed in a theater enraptured by the heroics of the gunfighter Shane.

He was David Carradine, son of character actor John Carradine.

Now, 13 years later, Carradine finds himself in Shane's boots as the star of the television series for ABC.

At first glance, David is an unlikely Shane. Where Ladd was diminutive and silent, young Carradine is 6-foot, 2-inches tall and garrulous. He's fuzzy-cheeked in comparison with hard-bitten Shane as played by Ladd.

* * * *

BUT CARRADINE is nothing if not confident.

"I don't think I'm following a difficult act," he said a few days before reporting to work. "If the picture was a classic, I think the series will be more so.

"The show has a modern attitude despite being set in the 1870s. We'll have up-to-date situations in the old setting."

In the movie Shane was a loner, a gun-fighting saddle tramp who moved from town to town wherever someone was willing to pay for his talent with a six gun.

A hired killer isn't exactly the stuff of which television heroes are made, but Carradine thinks otherwise.

"Five years ago it might have been impossible for us to do the series because we couldn't have sustained a heavy-hero," he explained. "But in this day of the anti-hero, Shane is essentially a villain acting like a hero.

* * * *

"IN THE SHOW he'll be sort of a professional gunman between engagements, if you know what I mean. He won't actually be seen as a hired gun, but you'll know that it's his profession."

Carradine's profession has been acting since he was 18. Four years ago he appeared with his father in "Hamlet," an experience that heightened his self-confidence.

David's biography, written by his former press agent, describes the lad as having "the virtue of patience, a heart of gold, filled with love, strong as an ox and as loyal as St. Peter."

Confronted with this printed praise, David blushed and said, "He's not my press agent any more."

Carradine only faintly resembles his famous father. He's bigger, stronger and more a western type than a Shakespearean. But you can see for yourself next October.

DAVID CARRADINE

What do you want on a musical program?

Please leave your pow, wham and zap out of the John Gary program. We haven't had such a treat in a long time.

I was fast turning off TV and listening to good records until I heard the Gary program. TV can surely use his beautiful voice and personality as they are, nothing added, please.

I really enjoy the commercials, also.

Mrs. L. M. Arnold, L. B.

I agree that Gary is good, but I had no idea his beautiful personality could brain-wash viewers into enjoying commercials.

* * * *

One of the best new TV shows is "Swingin' Country," featuring Rusty Draper with Molly Bee and Roy Clark. Draper looks a great deal like a young version of Will Rogers.

Unlike many "country music" shows, this one has no corn, but is breezy and entertaining. The music is good.

J. Paul Gleason, L. B.

A country music show without corn is like a Benny Goodman program without a clarinet.

Congratulations to the writers of "Never Too Young."

* * * *

I have watched "Never Too Young" and enjoyed it very much this past school year. It was the first serial for we teenagers. "Never Too Young" was about us and I'm sure all those who watched it are grateful to the writers for this.

At 4 o'clock we could take a break from our homework and watch it.

Dona Susterman, L. B.

Dona, if you look hard enough and long enough, I'll bet you can find some other program to use as a break from homework.

* * * *

This is a letter written in defense of "Peyton Place."

I say defense because of the condemnation it's received from some people because of being taken from the "awful and immoral" novel of the same name.

First of all, all the players in it (the TV series) are most talented.

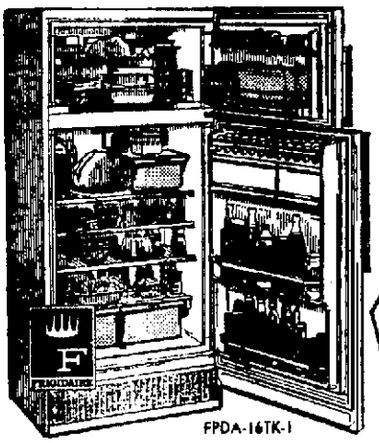

Secondly, none of the younger set on it have either the hillbilly haircuts (dog collars, anyone?) or sheepdog bangs which are so common nowadays.

Mrs. C. Shallcross, L. B.

Excerpted Reviews on Recent TV Programs

Programs: "Showdown" and "Chain Letter," premiered last Monday on channel 4.

The television networks somehow didn't find July 4 worthy of much special attention, but NBC-TV did manage to use Independence Day for the debut of two game shows.

The two programs which arrived Monday are daytime entries, and they feature Joe Pyne as host of the half-hour "Showdown" and Jan Murray as emcee of the 30-minute "Chain Letter."

I guess Pyne rates first attention because one's initial response is: What in the world is he doing as host of a game show? In case you are not acquainted with Pyne's reputation, he is one of the most controversial of broadcasting's collection of almost-anything-goes talk show emcees.

Anyway, discounting the usual silliness of most of these game shows on television, the debut of "Showdown" had its moments chiefly because of the generally acerbic attitude of the aforementioned Pyne. His approach was precisely right in that his manner seemed to be saying, in effect, that he knew there was a lot of nonsense, but if somebody wanted to pay him a lot for doing this stuff, it was okay with him.

His program is, essentially, simply a straight question-and-answer affair with competing teams, and the level is just about what one would expect: Two women didn't know what monogamy meant, and another contestant thought that Mickey Rooney wrote "Little Women."

I personally found this charming, but I particularly liked Pyne's attitude toward a trio of pint-sized rock-and-roll youngsters he apparently was stuck with for occasional musical selections. At one point he told them to go back to their cage, and it was a pleasure to see an adult on television being disrespectful toward children.

Anyway, "Showdown" went along like that, establishing quickly that Pyne is actually the entire program because of his brusque, authoritiative, slightly amused put-down approach, which seems to be quite a bit milder than his attitude on his talk broadcasts. And a good thing too.

Jan Murray's "Chain Letter" is simply a game in which teams use the last letters of words in the same category to see who can come up with the longest list. Murray has done this sort of show before, and somehow he manages to continue to display enthusiasm, which is the sign of a professional, even if the program looks like the work of amateurs.

Critic Rick Du Brow of UPI

Any program with Jan Murray can't be all bad, but "Chain Letter" comes pretty close. "Mad" magazine should have a ball with this one.

On "Showdown," words gurgle out of Pyne's mouth like water over Niagara Falls. One wonders how a breath manages to force itself into his lungs. Nevertheless, Pyne does an apt job with a format that, if it doesn't improve, should shortly be renamed "Closedown."

Critic Bert Resnik of "Tele Vues"

Program: "Hippodrome," aired last Tuesday on channel 2.

A new comedy-variety-circus series taped in England by a partnership of American and British firms bowed in and it was one of our less exciting international alliances.

The one-hour program, beautiful to look at in color, replaces the Red Skelton show for the summer, and it is the comedian's firm that is partnered with a British company in the production.

The general format is that a different American entertainer is host each week to U.S. and British guest stars and top acts of European circuses. The premiere host was comedian Jack Carter.

HERE ARE 9 REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD BUY A HOOVER SPIN DRYING WASHER

THIS PORTABLE — ROLLS ON LARGE CASTERS. Large easy rolling casters let the HOOVER move about with complete ease. Store it in one place . . . use it in another.

WITH 1/3 CUP OF DETERGENT — SAVES $$ ON DETERGENT. The washing action is so efficient it needs less detergent than any agitator or tumbler-type washer. It has a SUDS-SAVER, too!

WASHES A FAMILY SIZE LOAD — FAMILY SIZE LOADS. 2 Double Sheets, plus pillow cases or 36 diapers, 12 men's shirts, 9½ lbs. capacity of most washers in use. Washes even the most delicate things.

IN 4 MINUTES — NO OTHER WASHER IS SO FAST. The HOOVER washes a load of laundry in only four minutes. And gets clothes cleaner than automatics do in a full washing cycle.

SO THOROUGHLY YOU'LL HARDLY BELIEVE IT — TURBO-ACTION ENERGY DISK. The unique HOOVER energy disk, located on the back of the washer tub, actually surges water through the clothes. This remarkable wash action gets clothes really clean.

RINSES AND SPINS DRY IN 2 MINUTES — DRIES IN SECONDS. The clothes are spun at the amazing speed of 2000 RPM, which enables the washer to extract the water and suds in just seconds. No other unit can match the performance of the HOOVER.

SAVES UP TO 100 GALLONS OF WATER — 100 GALLONS — SAVES $$ ON WATER. Uses only ¼ the amount of water that most automatics use. Saves 100 gallons every 3 loads.

NEEDS NO PLUMBING — NO PLUMBING NECESSARY. Needs no plumbing, needs no installation. Just roll the HOOVER to any sink, slip on the hose and start washing. Pump empties washer automatically.

SERVICE Truly a do-it-yourself washer if servicing is ever needed. necessary. The back panel is removed by taking out only Belt replacement is a breeze. No special tool requirements two Phillips head screws.

Repeat Prize-Winning Artificial Kidney Documentary, 'Who Shall Live?', Today

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Awards and practical results for the best network documentary of the season, NBC-TV's "Who Shall Live?"—about artificial kidney machines—point up the opportunities for programs on little-understood subjects.

The one-hour broadcast, which will be repeated today (6:30 p.m. Sunday, channel 4), dealt powerfully and humanly with the lack of enough of these machines—despite their proven effectiveness—and the resultant huge cost to needy patients, and the death of those unable to "qualify" for the treatment.

"Who Shall Live?"—which draws its title primarily from the fact that other human beings must decide which of their fellow citizens have a chance to survive—tied for a first place award in the video category of the American Medical Association's annual medical journalism competition.

The broadcast also won recognition in the 1966 Ohio State awards competition conducted by the Institute for Education by Radio-Television of Ohio State University.

NOW COMES WORD from the National Dialysis Committee in North Bellmore, N.Y., concerning the program, which originally was seen Nov. 28, 1965, and was produced by Lucy Jarvis, previously known for such shows as "The Kremlin" and "The Louvre."

Enclosing excerpts from a congressional committee report submitted to the House of Representatives a while back by Rep. John E. Fogarty of Rhode Island, the National Dialysis Committee says in a letter:

"Frankly, we were inspired to further efforts because of Lucy Jarvis. The legislative presentation used as testimony on June 3, 1966, was a reflection of the more dynamic approach we are now able to assume towards those who will decide to provide more funds for treatment of kidney patients because Lucy Jarvis softened them up.

"Each new patient treated with the therapy of Dialysis on the artificial kidney will owe some portion of his life to the camera and cutting shears of Lucy Jarvis."

THE LEGISLATIVE presentation says in part, according to the excerpts:

"The committee has been greatly impressed by the rapid strides made during the past few years in the development of an artificial kidney and the techniques of hemodialysis by which impurities, normally removed from the blood by the kidneys, are removed externally.

"The necessary equipment, however, is still too complicated to operate and prohibitively costly to meet the widespread need.

"It is indeed distressing that probably as many as several thousand people will die this year who might have been saved if artificial kidney equipment were available in more than just the few centers in which this research is now being conducted . . .

"It is clear from tesimony of official and public witnesses and from personal observation on visits to artificial kidney research centers by members of the committee, that the engineering-development aspect of this work can, and must, be accelerated with a view to reducing the size, complexity and cost of the necessary equipment.

"FOR THIS PURPOSE, the committee has increased the estimate . . . for the artificial kidney program in the budget of the National Institute of Arthritis and Metabolic Diseases . . . the committee has been assured that this additional sum can be fruitfully applied to speed up work on this life-saving equipment."

Previously, NBC-TV had reported: "Following the telecast of 'Who Shall Live?', large numbers of viewers wrote to NBC News, to President Johnson and to their senators and representatives in Washington expressing their shocked and angry reactions to conditions revealed in the program.

"Mrs. Phyllis Miller of Vancouver, Wash., one of the kidney disease sufferers described on the program who could not afford treatment by the machine, received almost $30,000 in contributions from viewers around the country following the telecast."

In Louisiana, the New Orleans Touro Infirmary contracted to purchase the type of artificial kidney machine described in the program.

Dr. Ted Bloch, department of medicine chairman, reported that purchase approval came after the program was shown to the hospital's board of managers.

"That program is one of the finest medical films for lay people I've ever seen," he added.

'Teenage Revolution' a Winner

ABC News has been named the winner of the 1966 National School Bell Award for its hour-long documentary, "The Teenage Revolution," which was aired over the network last October.

The award, to ABC News and David L. Wolper Productions, was presented specifically for "Distinguished interpretation of education during the year ended April, 1966, in a single documentary program aired over a national television network."

"The Teenage Revolution" captured the increasing and more dominant role young people are playing in our society by examining the modern-day teenager through profiles of several youngsters.

Typing Education

Henry Morgan, sophisticate-at-large and panelist on "I've Got a Secret," is prone to say, regarding his education, that he "often attended public schools in New York City" and that it was there that he learned "touch typing and humility." Morgan says that he is currently spending much of his time planning to retire, "as soon as I can figure out from what."

Most Valuable Advice

By PETER BRECK

Starring in ABC-TV's (Channel 7) "The Big Valley"

Although I am regarded today as primarily a western actor—and I don't mind that at all—I actually started my career on the legitimate stage in Shakespeare and Shaw.

You can't get any better training than that and what I learned in those classic and demanding plays still serves me today . . . even in television performances that might depend more on action rather than dramatic dialogue.

When I finished a performance, I used to go to my dressing room and go over my performance. I analyzed it to see where I was right and where I was wrong. Some nights I didn't get to sleep trying to find that perfection I sought as a "pro."

One night a real old veteran in our troupe took me aside and said he had noticed me and was worried.

He said that nothing I could do would bring that performance back, that it was in the past.

"You're only as good as your last performance," he told me.

"But you've got to remember that performance is over—period. You can't bring it back . . . so forget about it."

Sure, you can learn from the past—but you should be thinking about the future. Tomorrow is more important than yesterday, but today—right now is more important than both of them. So I've learned never to look back. Look ahead because that's where the pitfalls are. The ones behind you are ancient history.

LONG HOT SUMMER— For this series, it'll have to be short heat wave, as it, plus "The Baron," ring down their curtains this week and ABC's summer shuffle moves the defunct "Avengers" to Thursdays, "Big Valley" into its new fall Monday slot, and makes way on Wednesdays for an 8-week series of repeat movies. September schedules have Robert Lansing's "Man Who Never Was" in Wed. at 9 p.m., followed by "Peyton Place II," and the prestigious "ABC Stage '67." Tonight at 10 p.m., ch. 7, Ricardo Montalban guestars as a man crippled years ago in saving Clara's life, who returns to Frenchman's Bend expecting to resume where he left off, including in his romance with Minnie Littlejohn. # Julie Harris Set for Role of 'Anastasia'

New York Times Service

NEW YORK—Julie Harris has been signed to star in Guy Bolton's "Anastasia" on NBC-TV's "Hallmark Hall of Fame" series next season.

George Schaefer, the series' prize-winning producer, also disclosed that Hallmark had acquired the rights to Noel Coward's farce, "Blithe Spirit," for next season and had commissioned three original 90-minute plays by noted writers for televising either next season or the year after.

Hallmark, which has presented serious drama continuously over the last 16 years, will televise four new productions and one repeat program next season.

* * * *

IN ADDITION to "Anastasia" and "Blithe Spirit," Hallmark earlier had announced that it would present Sir James M. Barrie's "The Admirable Crichton" and Maxwell Anderson's "Barefoot in Athens," which will star Peter Ustinov in the role of Socrates. No decision has been reached yet on which program in the Hallmark series will be repeated.

Schaefer, who has been wtih Hallmark for 12 of its 16 years on television, said he has commissioned James Costigan, Jerome Ross and Joseph Liss to write original plays for the series.

* * * *

COSTIGAN, who is the author of one of television's classics, "Little Moon of Alban," has written "Love Among the Ruins," a sophisticated comedy set in England at the turn of the century.

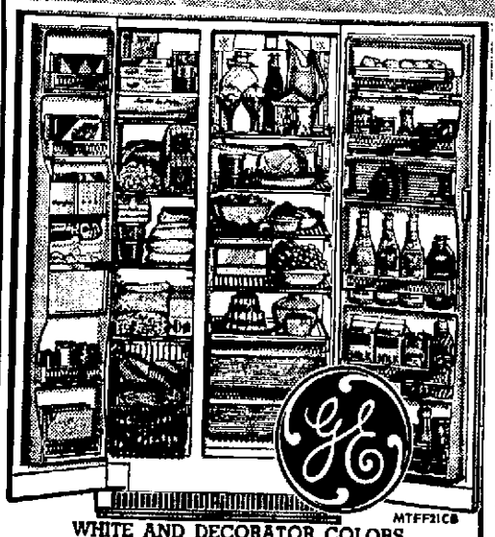

Ross, a screenwriter, has written an as yet untitled psychological drama about the intertwining relationships between the first Duke of Marlborough, Sir Winston Churchill's famous ancestor, his wife, Sarah, and England's Queen Anne.

Miss Harris's appearance as Anastasia, the woman who claims she is the last surviving member of the Russian royal family, will be her ninth starring role for Hallmark.

She created the role of Brigid Mary in Costigan's 1958 TV production of "Little Moon of Alban," then appeared in the 1960 stage production and recreated the role for television in 1964.

'Noon Wine' for Jason Robards Jr.

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — ABC-TV has announced that Jason Robards Jr. and Gypsy Rose Lee have been signed to play leading roles in forthcoming television productions.

Robards will star in "ABC '67's" production of Katherine Anne Porter's short novel, "Noon Wine," the story of a Texas farmer's search for redemption after he kills a bounty-hunter who is after his Swedish farmhand. Miss Porter, who received both the National Book Award and the Pulitzer Prize for her works in 1965, published the novella in 1937 and it was later included in "Pale Horse, Pale Rider," one of her best known collections. The story, which takes place at the turn of the century, is being produced for ABC-TV's Wednesday night series by Talent Associates, which is headed by David Susskind and Daniel Melnick.

Miss Lee will appear in next season's Tuesday night series, "The Pruitts of Southampton," which stars Phyllis Diller. The former burlesque star, who now has her own syndicated TV talk show on the West Coast (9:30 a.m. daily, channel 11), will appear as Regina Wentworth, Miss Diller's arch rival in Long Island society.

Teen-Age Band

Stan Seckler of Stanton will direct his teen-age band, "The Pico Rivera Stage Band," during a performance on "Scope" at 3 p.m. today (Sunday), channel 7. Seckler is a musician with the band currently featured in the Long Beach production of "The Music Man."

Baseball Buff

The star of "The Danny Kaye Show" on CBS-TV is truly a baseball buff. Compelled to fly to London during the World Series last fall, the comedian left his watch set on Los Angeles time. As they approached the English coast, Kaye looked at the watch and nudged his seat-mate. "Let's stand up," he said. "They're playing 'The Star-Spangled Banner.'"

What Your Name Means

Send your name to La Reina Rule in care of Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90801, for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

MISS RULE: May we have the source of BINGAMAN—L.B., Bellflower.

BINGAMAN of Germany began as "Binge-mann." Deciphered from 14th century German, this surname referred to the ancestor as a "dweller in a hollow shaped like a cauldron." No shield is available for this family.

MISS RULE: Kindly inform us on MARSHALL—M.S., W.M., Long Beach.

MARSHALL, from the French title Mareschal, was brought to England in the 1100s. A "Mareschal" was the king's overlord of horses and horsemen. Ancestors include John Mareschall of Yorkshire, 1379, as well as a Lord Mayor of London in 1755. Deacon Thomas Marshall of England arrived at Boston, Mass., in 1633, and was a primary American forefather.

MISS RULE: Kindly give data on KERRIGAN—J.K., Anaheim.

KERRIGAN of Ireland developed from the archaic Gaelic clan name O'Clarahain of County Mayo. This lengthy cognomen deciphers as "Sons of the young, black-haired one." The Kerrigan shield is silver, crossed by a red chevron placed between three black ravens.

MISS RULE: Please explain JONKER, de JONGHE and JUNGMAN. — A.Y., Long Beach; M.W., Norwalk; W.Y., Bellflower.

JONKER, de JONGHE and JUNGMAN (spelled Youngman in America) all trace to North Germany and nearby Holland. These names decipher simply as "Descendants of the young man."

MISS RULE: Kindly give genealogy on RIOS.—R.N., Garden Grove.

RIOS had its inception in early Spain. This surname represents an ancestral estate that lay between two "rios" or "rivers." The Rios armorial shield is gold, emblazoned with two blue stripes, representing rivers, surrounded by a gold border.

MISS RULE: Please explain MANKO.—L.M., Long Beach.

MANKO is a Central European Slavic surname. The ancient Teutonic-Slavic source word "Magan" meant "young warrior."

MISS RULE: Please explain CRAIG. — G.C., Long Beach; M.C., La Puente.

CRAIG, from the Gaelic "Carraig," is an Irish and Scotch locality-origin surname meaning "Rock." Craig was used in reference to a family living near a high, rocky cliff used as a neighborhood landmark. The Scotch Craig shield is covered with ermine, emblazoned with three silver crescent moons on a black band across the center. The Irish Craig shield is red, with three three-arched bridges centered on it. James Craig, among early Scotch south Pennsylvania settlers, owned land there in 1741.

MISS RULE: Please give genealogy data on McGLAWN.—C.M., Lakewood.

McGLAWN began as MacGiolla-Foin in north Irish Donegal and Tyrone. This clan held extensive baronies. The Gaelic significance of this clan name was "Sons of the adherent of St. John."

LIFE WITH A SPORTS CAR

After a While You Hardly Notice the Cramped Torment

By Art Vinsel

THERE'S THIS "Big 3" dealer I dislike, see, which is how I came to buy an Austin-Healey Sprite . . . out of spite.

The little independent used car lot my bug was on also happened to be smack in the middle of this guy's sprawling agency, which was a continuous humiliation to him and therefore another reason why I wanted to buy the little car. Bad enough to lose business to your competition, but when you surround him on three sides with your flapping flags, banners and other eye-catching hoopla, it hurts more than ever.

So I dropped in on Fairly Honest John, with his 20-by-30 yard lot and his eight cars and set in motion those merciless wheels by which auto dealers and loan companies profit.

It was just like getting married. After the last smile and handshake the trouble starts. Without benefit of rice. But it's even worse with a car, because you don't get any action by kicking it in the rear fender like you do with a woman. It just sits there, 800 pounds of passive demonstration.

THE RISKS are many when buying any used car, but purchasing a used sports car is tantamount to perusing the patient roll at a mental hospital and signing release and custody papers on one at random.

You just never know what you're going to get.

I took custody of my own little four-wheeled cross-to-bear and drove it home on noon hour the following day. After a light lunch—all six cans and a handful of peanuts—I headed back to the office. And I got as far as the driveway, 20 feet from my door.

When I twisted that bright, shiny key in its snug ignition switch, then pulled the starter handle, nothing happened. Chuckling murderously, I rang up old Fairly Honest John.

REDUCED TO terms which will allow this magazine to be mailed to subscribers, the conversation boiled down to: "How do I start this beast now, fella?"

Cooing sympathetically around his cold cigar, old F. H. suggested that I rattle one of two wires attached to the left battery terminal. This, after he explained what a battery terminal looks like, I was able to do.

Kkkhhaatttaattattoouumm . . plumph, plumph, plumph, plumph, plumph.

Hallelujah.

And then I was shrieking back to the office in a manner that would have warmed the cockles of Graham Hill's heart, a satisfied customer once again. Until tomorrow.

THE FOLLOWING day dawned gray and drizzly. I know because I was awakened by the misty rain as it blew in through my broken bedroom window. A sparrow had flown into it the previous spring and ruptured the oiled paper pane, which was in vogue when the apartment was built.

My 1961 Sprite squatted disconsolately outside, ever so faintly resembling a brown frog with a Pepsodent smile. After a brief skirmish with the old adobe's plumbing system and two cups of brackish brew I accepted as coffee, I was ready to get to work.

The car wasn't.

Its stout little battery dampened by the rain, it sounded at each yank of the starter wire like a fat old man entering his 36th consecutive hour of seasickness.

The boys from the garage were nice about it and didn't annoy me with shop talk. It isn't often that you get offered a $42 generator job at 7 a.m. And besides, you never can tell about a man who greets you at the door at that hour of the day, desperately clutching a brandy bottle in one hand and a trembling fistful of automobile contracts in the other.

BUT, LIKE so many other days in the preceding 25 years, I survived and lived on to face and surmount new calamities. Would you believe how soon, though?

The rain in Spain falls mainly on the plain, but in Orange County, it just plain falls on your head when you have an ancient convertible top like my car did. It would have done credit to any Spanish lace maker, but it lacked character in a sudden downpour. The underside of a Sprite, by the way, also presents a few problems with standing water.

Pity us when we come toddling down the pike in one Orange County city and plow into an intersection flooded one foot deep. (Three John Birch Society members eavesdropping on a Boy Scout meeting were swept down a storm drain and clogged it.) The car's drenched engine gave a phlegmatic cough, a feeble chug, and we wallowed to a halt.

"I'll push," said my hardy companion, who then leaped — without regard for his own personal safety — behind his passenger seat and started shoving against the dashboard. After a brief explanation of Newtonian physics, spiced with colorful adjectives, I convinced him that he would have to get outside the car proper—and get wet—if he expected to move it.

BUT EVEN then he was dubious about theories and wanted something more tangible to explain why he couldn't push a car while sitting in it. I think it was the tire iron under the front seat that finally got the message across.

At that point, along came three yahoos in a red domestic sedan, one of those automotive harlots with her front end hiked up in the air and bawdy chrome wheels. Spotting us splashing around knee-deep, he decided to pull over.

And pull over he did. With a flick of his slender wrist and with a sophomore drama class sneer playing across his chapped lips, he veered close enough to drench us with a wall of muddy water.

(Dub in your own screams of rage and discomfort here.)

Now I have some idea of what it's like to be in a submarine when a depth charge blows a hole in the side right next to you.

Again, good taste forces the author to let the reader fabricate his own version of the ensuing remarks, hurled at the taillights of the youngsters' car.

NOW, the rainy season is

The Little Cars That Lit a Fire

By Paul Wallace

Always in car-show condition, gleaming and bright, is this refurbished MG, a revered vehicle among those who drive for sport. Frank Mason proves the sports car is for the young at heart.

IN 1950, THE promise of a bright new world, that had buoyed a generation of young men through World War II, was just making itself evident. The several-year lapse since the war's end had been needed to transform a wartime production into one supplying, in ample quantity, new refrigerators, houses and automobiles.

In 1950, it had not been many months since the discouraging postwar waiting lists for new cars finally had ended—not many months since Detroit's Big Three finally had brought out completely fresh models for the first time in a decade.

In 1950, hardware of all sorts at last had entered a buyers' market, inspiring the first real competition in marketing new products to entice dollars from customers with increasingly sophisticated tastes.

AT ABOUT THIS time, two events occurred which were to have an influence on the tastes of Americans—and, indeed, on the U. S. economy itself—far out of proportion to their apparent significance at the time: the tentative importation into the U. S. of a few MG-TC sports cars, and the introduction in England of the Jaguar XK-120.

Soon driving would become not only utilitarian but a sport.

The first postwar MGs arrived on these shores with little fanfare and the first hint to most Americans that such cars existed came when they suddenly found themselves staring at one of the high-wheeled little two-seaters with the chopped tops and tails at a traffic light or in a parking lot.

True to the boy-meets-girl format of The Saturday Evening Post of that era, the confrontation seldom was love at first sight. The square little long-hooded roadsters inspired a variety of emotions among their viewers. But, like a Post story, these emotions almost never included indifference. If nothing else, people found them hard to forget.

CONTRARY TO THE MG's arrival, the new Jaguar was given wide publicity in the U. S. The XK-120 was so low, so fast, so spectacularly streamlined for the time that it captured a spark of yearning in all car fanciers who read about it. And, in the reading, many Americans learned something about sports cars for the first time. However, the dazzling Jag, at more than $4,000 a copy, was a rich man's toy in the economy of a decade and a half ago.

But it lit the fire. Then Mr. Average Car Nut would run across another MG. Now, he had some idea what he was looking at. And the more he stared, the more captivated he was by it. He suddenly began seeing it as a virile, rakish, masculine machine that evoked thoughts of weekends at English country places, 'round-the-houses road races on the French Riviera, and laughing, long-haired blonde girls who said "dahling."

It was too much. First one young man, then another sought out the rare dealer who sold the little sports cars. The buyers multiplied, slowly gaining momentum until the headlong rush in the late '50s for anything with two bucket seats and a cloth top. The sports car fad petered out, leaving a steady clientele of enthusiasts and a mark on the nation's views of automobiles that changed the industry.

IN LONG BEACH, according to Walt Masters, long-time MG buff, a man named Ross Sherwood was the first owner of a TC. Then Jim Easton bought one and others followed.

The growing, esoteric little group naturally banded together—to talk of downshifting, cornering, nerfing bars and ritual mysteries of synchronizing twin SU carburetors. It was only logical that the group organize some structure to supervise such sports car fun and games as rallyes, time trials and road races.

So, in 1950, 16 local residents, all TC owners, gathered to form the Long Beach MG Club. The charter roster included Caz Bartlett, Sam Caldwell, Clarence Covert, Dan Dickinson, Jim Easton, C. D. (Pete) Evans Jr., Tom Frisby, Dale Halliday, Bob Lockness, Clarence Mulvey, Al Moss, Vic Trodd, Ross Sherwood, Ferrel Webb, Paul Winters and John McFarland. Dickinson, who still lives in the Long Beach area and maintains an active interest in the club, was named the first president.

Later in 1950, the group was chartered as a centre (chapter) of the international MG Car Club. As such, it has grown into one of the largest and most active sports car clubs in the country. Present membership, under the gavel of President Constantin "Dallas" Dallas, numbers in the vicinity of 375.

IN ITS EARLY years, the Long Beach MG Club sponsored some full-fledged sports car road races in Southern California, including one in 1953—a financial disaster—on the unused runways of the Navy's Reeves Field, a World War II fighter strip on Terminal Island.

The main event, as I recall, was won by that senior hot-rodder and current proprietor of a local racing shop, Bill Stroppe, driving a Kurtis-Kraft roadster powered by a very hot flat-head Mercury V-8. Ken Miles was second in a home-built MG special—to the delight of club members—and Max Briney took third in a powerful Lincoln-engined Allard.

Early in its race-producing days, the club organized a flag team, the men who stand at corners in a race course to signal drivers of danger—a crash or oil or gravel on the track—out of sight ahead.

The club also set up a scoring team—people who record the laps of each car and officially keep tabs on the progress of a race—a difficult chore in a long race when the cars become spread out laps apart.

AS SPORTS CAR racing in Southern California got to be a big and very expensive business, the MG Club got out of race promoting. The expertly-trained flag and scoring teams, however, still handle these duties at virtually all Southland road races including such high-octane professional affairs as the Riverside Grand Prix each autumn.

But the club still exists primarily for the same reason it was formed—to organize participant activities for sports car enthusiasts.

It sponsors numerous rallyes each year —competitive, non-racing events in which the object is to travel a prescribed route at a specified average rate of speed.

It stages time trials and slaloms, one-car-at-a-time racing events against the clock over short road courses.

It holds an annual outing for foreign exchange students studying in the Long Beach area under American Field Service scholarships.

And it sponsors a car show for a blooded automotive stock—concours d'elegance —each year at Santa Ana's Fashion Square that probably is the most elegant and selective such event in Southern California. The concours was the promotion of three-time club president Fred Sander but the fulfilled ambition of one of the club's oldest and most enthusiastic members, Frank Mason, who maintains one of the handsomest of the now-classic TCs in these parts.

Club members no longer drive MGs exclusively. Many other makes are represented among the group's roster and some, in fact, own no sports car at all.

An enthusiasm for responsive automobiles, for cars that are a joy to drive, is all that is required.

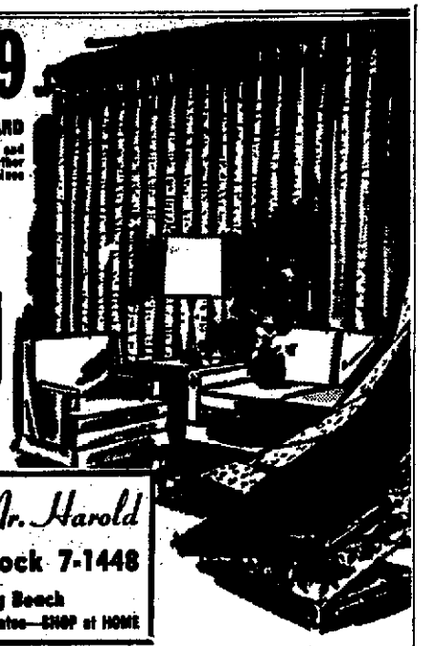

It is the same feeling that united, in 1950, 16 young men who were enchanted by a wire-wheeled, hard-riding, hard-steering, sensitive, thoroughbred of a car, the Morris Garage's TC model.

In one-two-three formation finish Ford GT cars prepared by Carroll Shelby Company cross finish line at gruelling Le Mans 24-hour endurance race; victory capped unprecedented rise of Shelby from bankruptcy to multimillion-dollar business in 3-year span.

It's a Well-Worn Phrase, but There May Be No Other Way to Describe Mr. Shelby . . .

The New King of Cars

THE BLAAT OF EXHAUST pipes, the whine of wound-up engines, the squeal of slipping tires, the shuddering, shattering screams that warn of impending crash, the howl of the crowd at the finish line . . .

These are the sounds of the sport of auto racing.

For quite a while now the world of Carroll Shelby has been one big, long, loud roar.

He has been surrounded by the roar since he was an Air Corps flier in World War II, since he bought a cement-mixer truck with his mustering-out pay, since he plunged into auto racing at the grand old age of 29, and he is surrounded by it today in his office that overlooks the main runway at Los Angeles International Airport.

This is not even to make mention of the roar of the crowd that is due him, the victory cheer he earned in capturing world road racing championships for the United States, beating Europe's best in Europe's sport on Europe's roadways.

Shelby shows two models that made him world's largest independent producer of sports cars, the GT 350 and (rear) 1965 world champion Cobra.

Shelby, a tall, sun-toughened Texan who has put together one of the more remarkable success stories in American industry as well as sport, has had a loud, boisterous life (there are those who would say it has been, in the language of his sport, a rip-snorter).

In recent months—not years—he has turned a small-time garage business into a multimillion-dollar operation that has made him the world's largest independent producer of sports cars, the first American to break Europe's domination of grand prix-type racing events by winning the World Manufacturers Championship in 1965.

Last month Shelby sent forth a team of vehicles that totally embarrassed the perennial champion Ferrari cars, giving the United States its first triumph in the world's foremost road race. On a rain-doused stretch of mid-France roadway three weeks ago a trio of American cars finished one-two-three in the awful, agonizing, monstrous thing called Le Mans, a 24-hour endurance that is the world's most difficult race. Left far to the rear were the Ferraris and the Maserattis and the Jaguars that for so long had made so laughable Americans' attempts to build GT (grand touring) race cars.

So as Carroll Shelby gazes out his office window today he can relax for the first time since he began bolting sheet metal together in a back-yard garage in Santa Fe Springs hardly more than three years ago, scratching for cash to buy parts for his first attempts at assembling race cars, sleeping in the back seat of his auto because it was a case of choosing between paying the rent or buying a couple of carburetors.

That was 1961, just two years after a heart condition forced Shelby to retire from competition driving, and only months after he had won one of the two most important prizes in auto racing, the Le Mans, while driving an English-built Aston Martin. But with the aid of a small experimental budget from the Ford Motor Co. he combined a Fairlane engine with a British sports car body (an AC) and assembled the first Shelby racing machine.

Within three years he was head of a $12 million business. "I fully expect to gross $100 million next year," he says coolly. Shelby Enterprises mushroomed from a two-man business to an assembly-line operation with an annual payroll of $1,500,000 in that three-year span.

It has been recognized by American industry as one of the outstanding success stories of all time.

As to sport's point of view, it was perhaps an unparalleled rise, for in 1965 the infant Shelby American Co. cracked the domination of the Ferraris, the Mercedes, the Maseratis and the Jaguars to win for the former Texas cement truck driver the International Manufacturers' Championship, the premier prize in sports car racing.

Last month Ford GT cars, prepared by Shelby & Co., swept the first three places at Le Mans in a performance widely acclaimed as unparalleled in motor racing history, the climax of a year-long intense effort by Shelby, who had been handed an ultimatum by the Ford Company to win at Le Mans at all cost.

Now that the victory has been accomplished there are indications that both Ford and Shelby will cut back their racing efforts. (There also are indications that the Le Mans victory was so sweeping that the international ruling body of road racing will change the rules to make both the Ford GT and the Shelby-built Cobra ineligible.)

Henry Ford II, whose engines have powered cars to victory in both the Indianapolis 500 and Le Mans 24-hour endurance—the two major races in the world—has publicly confirmed his intention to shift into low gear and Shelby has said "To continue fielding teams of cars all over the world at huge expense just to do the same thing over and over again would be completely ridiculous." So from now on Shelby will build racing cars, sell them and then make another profit on them by contracting to keep them in peak racing condition.

"I never considered racing as an end in itself," he says, but a means to his ultimate objective, which was to sell for six to seven thousand dollars a car that would compete with the $15,000 Ferraris.

This he has done, for the famed Shelby Cobra, with which he won the world manufacturers championship, is available for almost immediate delivery at $7,495. If you don't feel you are quite capable of negotiating hairpin turns and floorboarding it on the straightaways, Shelby has an answer for that, too. He operates a drivers' school that can turn a novice into a high-speed expert in a dozen lessons. (The race-ready Co-

Life-size re-creation of da Vinci's painting, "The Last Supper," has been enjoyed by every Festival audience since 1935.

LAGUNA BEACH'S 'LAST SUPPER'

The 'Master' at the Pageant

By Bill Duncan

THE HOUSE LIGHTS had dimmed and the audience of the Pageant of Masters in Laguna Beach waited for the stage curtain to rise on the final living picture—Leonardo da Vinci's immortal painting, "The Last Supper."

There was a long pause, then the lights went on again and the orchestra filled the void with an impromptu concert. Backstage there was a flurry of activity. Everyone was in place on the set except the main actor—the man playing the role of Christ. He was late—caught by an unheavenly human device, a traffic jam.

When he arrived and was quickly made up for his part, the show went on.

That was the only time in the 27 years that volunteer actors have staged the living replica of da Vinci's masterpiece that Christ was late for the Last Supper.

Judas was late one year and missed the entire performance. He was substituted with a man sitting in the audience who "had the features of Judas in da Vinci's painting." And again one year the rats backstage ate the bread of the Last Supper, but a carpenter quickly carved new loaves out of a 2x4 board.

THE PAGEANT of Masters, the living art show that has run for 31 years—suspended only during three years of World War II when military orders blacked out the nighttime, outdoor presentation. During that span of years, thousands of living pictures have enthralled audiences, but only one has lasted year after year—da Vinci's painting, "The Last Supper."

Some 800 volunteers will breathe life into the works of the masters for the next five weeks at the Pageant of the Masters, which opened last night in the amphitheater of the Irvine Bowl. Great paintings and famous sculptures are re-created through the medium of live actors, men, women and children, using backdrops of paint, plaster, canvas and wood to simulate in depth the artist's masterpiece.

The pageant has become world famous, equated to the Bavarian Oberammergau Passion Play, for its unique staging, costuming, lighting and makeup to bring the work of the masters—old and new—to life. More than 3½ million persons through the years have come to see the remarkable results of this labor of love, a community volunteer enterprise unlike any other in the world.

EACH YEAR the traditional closing of the pageant is the staging of The Last Supper, the masterpiece that is described as the crowning work of da Vinci's amazing career. It was first produced—not as a closer, but as one of the living pictures in the middle of the show—in 1936 by then director Roy Ropp. The work received such acclaim that the directors of the Festival of Arts, the parent group of the pageant, voted to close the program each year with this moving religious painting.

The original painting was done by da Vinci on the end wall of the refectory of the Monastery of Santa Maria delle Grazie in Milan, Italy. Today it is badly deteriorated and almost lost. Da Vinci, a perpetual tinkerer with new ideas, had mixed egg whites in the plaster and paint which caused the work to flake off. The soldiers of Napoleon, who slashed off part of the painting to cut a door into the refectory which they used as a stable for their horses, also damaged the painting by throwing stones at the heads of the 12 Apostles, but superstitiously would not toss a missile at Christ's head.

IN THE RE-CREATION at Laguna Beach, even the hole that Napoleon's soldiers cut through the wall is depicted.

As years pass, the pageant officials have tried to duplicate the original as closely as humanly possible. Today's presentation is quite different from the one done years ago, which was merely a table with 13 men posed around it.

"We now have captured the feeling, I believe that Leonardo intended for the painting," explains pageant producer Don Williamson. "Leonardo's Last Supper will always remain 'The Last Supper' in art. We work from a copy of the original made shortly after it was painted and before the deterioration began. This, coupled with the historical studies of the painting itself, has allowed us to duplicate the original nearly to perfection."

The studies Williamson refers to go into each production of the pageant in an attempt to catch in minute detail the feeling the artist intended to convey. The men portraying the figures of The Last Supper have attempted to capture da Vinci's particular expression for each of the disciples and Christ, himself, as Christ spoke the shocking words:

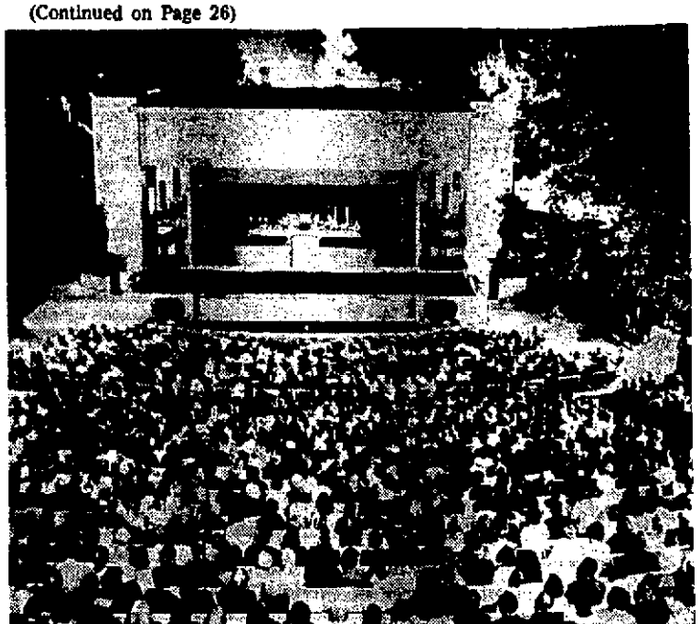

"One of you shall betray Me!"

Beginning at the left, as one looks at the painting, Bartholomew has risen in consternation; James reaches his arm over to Peter; Andrew throws up his hands in utter incredulity; Peter leans over to the beloved John, while in front of him.

Try a Shadow 'Jewel Box'

Mrs. Henry L. Carr points to velvet-lined shadow box she arranged to show "treasures."

By Helen L. Gillum

DO YOU wish often for a suitable way to display those treasured pieces of jewelry handed down to you from long ago? If so, why not try this delightful old standby, the shadow box? Mrs. Henry L. Carr of Long Beach, uses this method very effectively.

In a 12x14-inch shadow box frame, on a background of red velvet, she artistically has arranged a nice assortment of antique jewelry that once adorned her paternal grandmother. In a lower corner of the shadow box is a recently-restored small phograph of Mrs. Carr's grandmother taken soon after the young lady's marriage in 1880.

The box frame, made from beautifully polished old wood, is 3-inches deep, setting off to good advantage the charming contents. The composite exhibit makes a decorative wall piece, a fine conversation piece and best of all, a pleasing memorial to her grandmother.

AN IMPRESSIVE item is a "necklace" across the top of the shadow box, consisting of a uniquely designed chain and locket. The locket features a raised gold motif of a small crescent, triangle and cross, and a little diamond, ruby and pearl. (Mrs. Carr's father's baby teeth are also imprinted on the back of the locket—but these could hardly be considered part of the decoration!) The young wife in the picture is wearing this same necklace, a wedding gift from her husband. The inner compartments of the locket contain pictures of the married couple.

An interesting bracelet is made of six small porcelain-like discs, each brightly decorated with flowers in bright mosaic colors. There are two heavy gold bracelets of the old-fashioned type so popular in late Victorian times and in the early 1900s. A round gold locket and small gold heart-shaped locket with mother-of-pearl in the center are appealing.

Pins include a silver crescent-shaped one with small pearls, and a diminutive china doll, only 1½ inches high, with movable legs.

THE FISH THAT HAS A HOOK FOR PEOPLE

There's No Sunshine in This Ray

By George Serviss

THERE'S A QUIET but nasty little character lurking along the Southern California beaches—retiring by nature, easily frightened and not looking for trouble.

But don't step on him!

He carries a weapon that will make an unwary bather sorry if he does.

He and his ilk are the sting rays, more commonly called stingarees, bearing barbs or stings on their tails and secreting a powerful poison—not fatal but mighty painful.

Long Beach Life Guard records show 161 cases of sting ray injury last year. Up and down the coast from Santa Monica to San Diego, figures reported and unreported would show several hundred more. Perhaps not a startling percentage in relation to the thousands who use the beaches annually—but very important to the ones who are stung.

STING rays like the warmer water, hence are most frequently found along the shallow beaches and in the bays. Most common in the Long Beach area are the round rays, Urobatis halleri, rather harmless in appearance but a real menace to bathers and fishermen because of a resemblance to the common and harmless shovelnose shark often hooked along the beaches. Others of the same family of rays are the diamond and California butterfly sting rays. A fourth poisonous fish, the bat ray, is of another family.

Best advice: To bathers, use bathing areas where there are others in the water, create a splash and scuff the toes when entering the water; to fishermen, learn to recognize the rays and kill them before attempting to take them off the hook.

If struck, soak the injured part quickly as possible in hot water, as hot as the area can tolerate it. Addition of Epsom salts to the water is also a help, according to Vic Miller, lieutenant of the Long Beach Life Guards.

THE LONG Beach lifeguard stations offer special first aid treatment for sting ray victims, where medicines especially effective for treatment of the undersea nuisance are available.

Whatever the poison injected by the sting rays, the effect seems to be on the nervous system and, under the hot water treatment, may cause severe pain for varying periods of time. Lieut. Miller said he has witnessed recovery of some victims in as short a time as 10 minutes and back to play on the beach. In other cases, pain may last for an hour or more. Regardless of recovery time, sting ray victims should be treated by a physician to remove possibility of post-injury infection.

Sting of bat ray is painful and poisonous; victims should seek care from physician.

Dr. I. D. Litwack, Long Beach health officer, further recommends a tetanus shot as a precaution against infection other than from the ray poison. Bits of barb or other foreign substances may remain in the wound and should be removed by a physician, Dr. Litwack stated.

RAY stings most commonly are in the instep, atop the instep or in the area of the ankle. The severe pain that follows may extend up the leg into the area of the groin. Muscle spasms also may follow. Nausea and fainting may be shock symptoms and victims should leave the water at once.

A Red Cross pamphlet on sting ray treatment recommends washing out the wound as the hot water treatment begins. Should one making flat dives in shallow water be stung in chest or abdomen, immediate reference to medical treatment is considered imperative.

Sting ray venom is deposited in the wound by pressure of the wound edges against the membrane covering the stinger, not by forced injection, says the Red Cross in quoting from a Caltech research report on these fishes. Wounds range from small punctures to lacerations of more than an inch.

Research shows that the action taken by a sting ray is defensive only, quick and accurate but, because of the location of the stinger, appearing impossible for the fish to attack a person or another fish. Experienced bathers shuffle the feet or slap the water with their swim fins to frighten away rays. Waders may prod the bottom of the bay ahead of them with a stick and fishermen may wear some type of footgear, although rays have been known to penetrat rubber boots with their barbs.

ROUND rays are a sort of circular disk with tail shorter than the disk, skin smooth with few spines, up to 20 inches in size, usually smaller, dark brown or slaty-brown in color above with spots or blotches, undersurface yellow. The stinger is a sharp spine lying atop the tail. They are found from Pt. Conception to the tropics. Many are caught by surf fishermen.

Butterfly rays are distinguishable primarily by their butterfly shape, about twice as wide as long, with small, short tail and stinging spine atop the tail small in comparison. They may achieve a width of five feet. Range is from Pt. Conception to Turtle Bay, common south of San Diego.

Diamond sting rays, also called Pacific and rat-tailed sting rays, may range up to 6 feet in size, are of bluish brown with a long, whip-like tail, 1½ times the body length, and with a sharp sting or spine a short distance back of the body and atop the tail. They are not common north of Dana Point but the habitat is from British Columbia to the tropics. Of interest to anglers only in that they are very dangerous.

Bat rays attain a width of more than four feet and a weight up to 150 pounds. Their heads project above and beyond the flat body planes in bat fashion and have large eyes on the sides and large, flat teeth. Color is black or greenish black, the undersurface white, and the range is from Cape Mendocino to Turtle Bay. They also trail a long, rat-like tail topped with a dorsal fin, just behind which is a long, sharp spine.

Although not commonly taken by surf and bay fishermen, several bat rays ranging up to 60 pounds were caught recently in the vicinity of First Place on the Long Beach Strand. Specimens of this size can put up a struggle on hook and line and should be killed before removed from the hook.

They should always be exterminated because of their menace to crabs, lobsters and other edible shellfish. By reason of the power in their "wings" or pectoral fins they create a suction in the sand when swimming near the bottom, exposing the mollusks which they devour.

Special raids are sometimes made on the bat rays in the San Francisco area and in the oyster beds of California waters. Netting raids have also been made on all types of rays that have been attracted to the river outlet between Seal Beach and Long Beach where warm water released from the inland power plants creates a magnet for these fishes.

Greatest danger period for bathers is in the early summer before crowded beaches drive rays into deeper water or quieter areas, life guards say. The far east end of the Long Beach strand is a more likely place to encounter rays than are most other areas, they say.

While the individual beachgoer's probability of being stung is relatively small, if you are one of the unlucky ones, get out of the water, get help and be sure to see a doctor afterward.

The bat ray, underwater nemesis of the beach bather, often grows as large as 150 pounds. This specimen was taken in Alamitos Bay.

Why Not an Old-Fashioned Bulletin Board at Home?

Hide 'n' Seek Notes

By Ruth C. Ikerman

THE OTHER DAY a group of young mothers were talking about where they leave notes for their families, and I was amazed to discover how out of date the good old reliable bulletin board seems to be in some homes. Instead, the children and parents have devised various forms of the old game of hide and seek.

One mother writes her notes and then with transparent tape leaves them on the outside of the refrigerator door. She figures this is the first place the children will look when they get home from school and if she can catch their eyes as they open the icebox door, she has a good chance of letting them know what time she wants the casserole put into the oven.

ANOTHER mother uses the inside of the icebox, on the theory that the children are too hungry to really give a good look or reading to anything on the outside of the box. Once they reach inside for the cool drink, or the peanut butter to make a sandwich, they will be more inclined to pick up the piece of paper and see what chores are in order for the afternoon.

"They may even suspect I am telling them where the chocolate cookies are stored, so they won't dare not read it," this mother admitted.

A third one has discarded the icebox notes as being too routine. "Now if I want to be sure my son knows what I want, I write the note on a big piece of paper and drop it in the doorway of his bedroom, where he will see it when he goes inside to get his ball and play shoes."

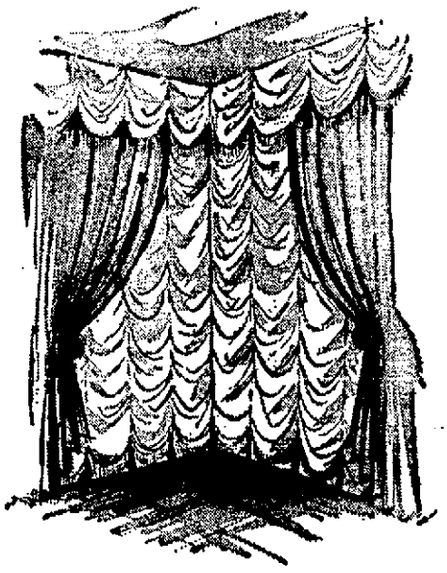

SOMETIMES she shuts the door, when he expects to find it open, so he will know something is "afoot" when he walks inside. In cases of desperation, when the content of the note really has to get across, she has been known to pin it to his play shirt inside the closet of his room.

One thing the young mothers have in common seems to be a consistent use of transparent tape to put the notes in some place where they will be seen, and will not blow away from an opened window. Tape has taken the place of chalk for a blackboard in many homes.

On one other point they were all in agreement — it does no good at all to put a note on the bathroom wall near the washcloths, for small boys especially will never even look in that direction when in a hurry to run out to play.

A House Full of Art Lovers

By Ellen Krec

EVERY FAMILY has a personal philosophy of living and the Hurtubise family is no exception.

Dr. and Mrs. Francis A. Hurtubise say: "Children first, then gracious living and comfort." All are apparent in the mellow Spanish colonial house that truly "belongs" in the Bixby Knolls area of Long Beach.

It took a long time to arrive in Southern California, but Mrs. Hurtubise says they love it and "California has been very good to us."

BOTH DR. and Mrs. Hurtubise are Canadian-born, and their French ancestry shines in conversation as well as in furnishings.

The architecture is typically California-Spanish with the red tile roof, the patio-courtyard enclosed with wrought iron gates and the arcade leading to the massive carved door.

The moment the door is opened the eye is greeted with art. The foyer is dominated by a prized oil painting they purchased in Beverly Hills, only to discover the artist was from Montreal and French-Canadian!

THIS IS a family with a truly artistic background. Dr. Hurtubise paints and the rooms hold samples of the work he did at age 14. His mother discovered her talent at 65 and delights them all with her still-lifes. One sister is an artist-teacher and all have contributed to a home that reflects talent and beauty.

The rather formal living room is as blue as the Canadian sky with French absinthe draperies, antique white walls and blending tones of blue in the carpeting and accessories.

The two English regency chairs were made to their specifications, then covered with a blue print Italian silk. The enormous urn-shaped lamp is Venetian handblown and shares the corner of this ethnic room.

THE LIVING room is basically English and French, either antique or reproduction, with careful touches of Italian provincial in commodes and coffee table. One exception is a chest with a travertine marble top and doors that fold back to uncover Dr. Hurtubise's "toys." These are records for stereo is his second hobby. A loudspeaker tastefully is hidden in a louvered, Indonesian chest that also serves as a table.

The fireplace color matches the walls, thus allowing the paintings to form the focus of the room. The only touch of another color is a plum velvet ottoman that rests in front of the fireplace. Each of the five Hurtubise children is represented on the mantle with a silver cup, a gift from godparents at birth.

The family heirlooms add a great deal of interest. Crystal decanters, hand-painted china cups used for cigarettes and a gold-inlaid bonbon dish serving as an ash tray suggest the past must be useful as well as attractive.

With a nod toward the Hispanic architecture, the dining room is completely Spanish in decor. A distressed fruitwood chest serves as a buffet and holds the silver and linens. The oblong dining table will seat 12 people very comfortably. Spanish contemporary ladder-back chairs with black leather seats are used. A pair of 12th century English candlesticks are very comfortable on the table and the chest is flanked by two immense antique Indonesian candlesticks. This room alone took two years to assemble.

A GOOD-enough-to-eat-in alcove in pink and white serves as the breakfast room. A still life came as a surprise from Grandmother Hurtubise. When she discovered the color scheme, she just painted a good-enough-to-eat watermelon.

A practical choice of furniture is a round Vilas antique table and reproductions of Windsor chairs. Theirs is a particularly warm fruitwood finish that is non-marking and requires only washing, never polishing. The only problem with this furniture is it sometimes takes a year or more to receive it after you place the order. It is made only in Quebec and mostly in Early Canadian or Early American reproductions.

The den really is the "living room" with all Vilas antique reproductions with cheerful washable covers on the sofa in shades of blue, green and lavender. There are shelves to hold books and tables to hold food. The walls are for paintings, except for one framed photograph Dr. Hurtubise took of a snow-covered Canadian countryside when he was in the tenth grade and playing "hooky." The children "live" in this room and love it.

The traditional Spanish use of tile makes the butter yellow kitchen a dream to care for. The walls are covered completely with ceramic tile. A purely functional room, but a treasure for a family with children.

A scissor staircase leads upward to a well-balanced wall of family art. The stained glass window at the top of the stairs gives the perfect light to the grouping.

THE SECOND level of this home is, for the most part, the children's domain. The bed-playroom shared by Su Su, Louise and Anne Marie is peppermint and white. There is an air of circus and fun. Even the chests have been painted by Dr. Hurtubise in three vivid colors. As Mrs. Hurtubise will tell you, "With five children it certainly is time-saving to say 'It is in the orange drawer' instead of 'You will find it in the lower righthand drawer.'"

The headboards are white wrought iron, very little girlish, with pink bedspreads to match the pink and white appliqued circus animals on the cafe curtains. The pictures in this room are framed French vitamin ads. These are charming circus figures very "Puissant," as the little French clown says.

The eldest daughter, Michele, has graduated to a fresh-as-a-daisy room, lemon and white-striped shades with white curtains trimmed with removable daisies. A silver green carpet adds to the spring-like effect. The furniture is the practical Vilas antique finish. Michele is an avid reader and her walls hold the framed covers of the first four books she read. The most important book at the moment is an etiquette book given her by her mother, who says, "I am delighted with her interest even though she finds it necessary to remind the rest of the family when they are in error."

The addition of a boy, Paul, to a family of girls created a need for an additional room. The sun porch with its many windows became his room. Coral carpeting, a bedspread woven with animals and another chest-of-many-colors complete this little 2-year-old's room.

THE MASTER bedroom is elegant simplicity, with deep red carpeting, an English contemporary bed and double chest, an Italian provincial desk with a Brewster chair, gold cherub wall lamps, add to the mildly Victorian setting.

The elder Mrs. Hurtubise "grew" the paintings for this wall. She painted the flowers from her garden in Canada to remind her children of home.

The Hurtubise youngsters have a lovely home but they are fortunate in another respect—they have their own house — a play house. This makes them the envy of all their friends.

It combines slides, rings, ladders and has seating in the sky for five. It's a peanut penthouse that intrigues sometimes 9 or 10 children to eat lunch on the steps. This is the high spot of a yard that is surrounded by a lovely used-brick patio that might well have been a part of Old Mexico.

Family art dominates the staircase (above). Dining room mode definitely is formal, with Spode china, Czech crystal and Spanish furniture.

The Sandwich Is King for the Busy Modern

By Mildred K. Flanary
Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

THE "ENCLOSURES" are as important to a sandwich as are "the middles." And a triple basic to the sandwiches in this spectrum is enriched bread—white bread to which has been added three B-vitamins, thiamine, niacin and riboflavin, and iron.

Enriched bread comes to market in a spectrum of shapes and types. You may select rolls or buns. You may choose French or Vienna variations. Sesame seeds and poppy seeds top some of the versions, while plump raisins, sugar and cinnamon swirl through slices of still others.

A taste of any of the nine sandwiches featured here will demonstrate that each is different, and each is best.

BUCKAROO BUNS

- 1 pound ground beef
- ½ tsp salt
- ½ tsp crushed chillies
- 1/16 tsp pepper
- 4 unsliced hamburger buns
- ¼ cup chopped salted peanuts
- ¼ cup pickle relish
- 4 lettuce leaves
- 1½ tblsp mayonnaise or salad dressing
- 1½ tblsp chili sauce
- 4 thin slices tomato

Combine beef, salt, chillies and pepper; shape into 4 meat patties; grill until done. Slice buns, crosswise, into 3 equal-sized layers. Spread bottom layers with mixture of peanuts and pickle relish. Top each with a lettuce leaf and middle bun layer; spread with mixture of mayonnaise and chili sauce and top with cooked hamburger, a tomato slice and bun top.

Yield: 4 Buckaroo Buns.

LONG JOHN HERO

- 4 Brown 'n Serve French rolls, (2½ ounces each)
- 2 tsp prepared mustard
- 4 (1½ inch) strips boiled or baked ham
- 4 (1½ inch) strips cooked turkey or chicken
- 2 tsp relish sandwich spread
- 6 thin slices tomato, halved
- 6 thin slices cucumber, halved
- ¼ cup shredded lettuce

Cut 2 lengthwise slits in each roll, leaving bottom crusts whole. Brown according to package directions. Spread ½ teaspoon mustard in 1 slit; insert a slice each of ham and turkey. In other slit use sandwich spread, 3 pieces tomato and cucumber and a tablespoon lettuce. Repeat for each roll. Yield 4 Long John Heroes.

CANADIAN CHEESE PUFF

- 4 sliced sesame sandwich buns
- 8 (1 ounce) slices process American cheese
- 4 slices Canadian bacon, grilled
- 2 tsp prepared mustard
- 12 onion rings
- 4 green pepper rings
- 12 slices stuffed olives

On the bottom of each bun, stack a slice each of cheese and grilled bacon, ½ teaspoon mustard, 3 onion rings, another cheese slice, a green pepper ring and 3 olive slices. Place both halves of buns in a shallow baking pan and heat in a moderate oven (350 degree F.) for 5 minutes, or until cheese is soft. Serve openface. Yield: 4 Canadian Cheese Puffs.

TROPICAL TEMPTER

- ¼ cup mashed banana
- ½ (3 ounce) package cream cheese
- ⅓ cup drained crushed pineapple
- 2 tblsp chopped salted cashew nuts
- ¼ cup finely chopped dates

Demonstrating disassembly of sectional surfboard he helped design is Karl Pope of Costa Mesa. Two such boards may be carried in Volkswagen, he says.

Surf Set Gets C-o-l-l-a-p-s-i-b-l-e 'Board

By Bob Loeffelbein

A MATHEMATICIAN and an electronics engineer have come up with a collapsible surfboard. It may be broken into three pieces and carried in a suitcase. Two such 'boards may be carried in the backseat of a Volkswagen, the inventors claim.

Its easier portability by plane results in a not-inconsiderable saving of a $50 shipping fee — which is going to please a growing number of international competitors who trek to Australia, South America and Hawaii.

The new 'board, called a Tri-sect by co-originator Karl Pope, the engineering half of Morey-Pope Engineered Surfing Equipment Co. of Ventura, was tested in the 20-foot "heavies" (waves) during last December's International Makaha Surfing championships in Hawaii. Riding the 'board then was Tom Morey, the other half of the company.

Results of that test were so good the newly-crowned meet champion put in 'an order for one, says Pope.

Morey, recently elected president of the United States Surfing Association, says the company also is manufacturing bisected boards (2-piece), injection-molded skegs (for other manufacturers) and the new "slip check" spray-can wax replacement for surfboard use.

Both Pope and Morey graduated from the University of Southern California and have surfed for the past 10 years. Pope lives in Costa Mesa with his wife, Paula Jean, a former Olympic diving champion, and their three children. Morey's home is in Ventura, the company's headquarters.

Bearded Iris

Tall Bearded Iris are common flowers with an uncommon beauty about them. They were once more popular than they are now, and more's the pity, for anyone who fails to include them in their garden today is missing something special. California Association of Nurserymen members offer a wide selection of iris for fall planting so plan to try a few of them, at least.

There's a plant of some kind blooming in Southern California every season of the year. Grow your own. The garden columns of Southland Magazine will help you.

Tracing Palos Verdes Lore

By Bob Sanders

TIME AND THE TERRACED LAND. By Augusta Fink. Howell-North Books. $7.50.

TRACING THE history of the Palos Verdes Peninsula from the time a million or so years ago when it first pushed itself up out of the ocean to the hectic present is a monumental task.

But Auther Augusta Fink, who lives atop a high bluff over-looking Abalone Cove, has done it with a researcher's knowledge, an artist's insight and a longtime resident's deep affection.

Presenting one of the many undelved parts of Californi's colorful history, the book, with its many hard-to-come-by illustrations, leads the reader gently down through the ages that have made the Palos Verdes Peninsula what it is today.

* * * *

AFTER A preliminary geological survey of the area, the author plunges into the life of the earliest inhabitants. Not only who they were and where they came from but poignant accounts of these people's day-to-day existence, including the wickiups they lived in, the tools and weapons they used and the rigors of their primitive life are intriguing parts of the early chapters.

Stirring sagas of the early exploring expeditions with details of how some of the participants later became settlers in the wild land are examined, not with the historian's dry eye but with the flowing feelings of an ardent lover of this particular portion of the earth's anatomy.

Later chapters described in intimate detail the Early Days of the peninsula, the bitter fight between the rival families of Dominguez and Sepulveda, the warfare between the United States and the Californians that culminated in the cessation of Mexican rule, the beginnings of the economic development of the area with Phineas Banning's fight to have San Pedro declared a port of entry and myriad little known facets of the development of the peninsula up to the present day.

* * * *

READING this book, it is obvious that Miss Fink knows her subject well and, consequently, writes with authority. It will be a delight to those who live on the peninsula and a boun to Southern California's history buffs. It is an excellent treatment of a little-known subject that is well worth reading, even for the only casual reader.

And Try Not to Miss . . .

HEIRS TO FREUD: ESSAYS IN FREUDIAN PSYCHOLOGY. Edited by Hendrik M. Ruitenbeek. Grove, $7.50.

A "second generation" of Freudians: Ferenczi, Hitschman, Eitingon, are represented in this collection of essays. There are discussions of child psychology by Freud's daughter Anna, and Melanie Klein; on the superego by Freud's great biographer Ernest Jones. There are early essays by the original American Freudians—Brill and Putnam.

RED MAN'S RELIGION. By Ruth M. Underhill. University of Chicago, $7.95. Having lived a good part of a long life on most of the nation's Indian reservations, Ruth Underhill, anthropologist and ethnologist, is more than well qualified to write of any facet of Indian life, culture and lore. She has done so in numerous books, and "Red Man's Religion" is a rare mine of information on Indian beliefs, practices, rites and ceremonies. There are fine chapters on the Indians and the supernatural, on their ideas of world origin, on their attitudes toward the dead, on medicine men and shamans, on the Sun Dance and other cults.

THE WESTERN WORLD: RENAISSANCE TO THE PRESENT. By J. Russell Wilson. Lippincott. $12.95.

An American historian spreads the panorama of 500 years. The economic and political institutions that have made Europe and America what they are receive an expert's treatment. Arts, sciences, philosophies, literature and even the important matter of taste get full attention.

A PEEK AT OLD NEW YORK

By Les Rodney

TURN WEST ON 23RD, by Robert Baral. Fleet, $5.95.

AS A UTRILLO painting can create for a viewer who has never been to Paris the illusion of nostalgia, so this sprightly volume may do for old New York.

It deals lightheartedly, though with historical accuracy, with the legends of the Chelsea section, that expanse from Fifth Avenue to the Hudson, from 14th to 34th Street, once the center of Manhattan's gay, seamy and creative life.

The old Grand Opera House, the notorious Haymarket sin center, Lillian Russell swirling out of the grand Chelsea Hotel and walking to Cavanagh's for dinner, Sarah Bernhardt playing chess with a dummy at the Eden Musee,, Tin Pan Alley, the antics of O. Henry, Thomas Wolfe and even the latter-day Brendan Behan, the picturesque murder of Stanford White atop the old Madison Square Garden, girl friend Evelyn Nesbit—"I'm a Broadminded Broad from Broadway"—Proctor's 23rd Street Theater, where an opera star was hired to sing in the lobby on the ingenious theory "When they hear such singing in the lobby free you can imagine what they think will happen inside!" and a host of other celebrities and hangouts pass in lively review. Plus Adolph Zukor's Famous Players Film Co. on 26th, given enchantment by Pickford and Barrymore before Hollywood bloomed, with the early Westerns filmed in the New Jersey Palisades right across the river (by ferry, if you please, NOT the Lincoln Tunnel.)

LIKE MOST totally gone New Yorkphiles, the author is from somewhere else—Fort Wayne. He occasionally succumbs to the danger in this kind of book of becoming a little arch, pressing the light touch. And absent is the workaday world of plain people whose lives rarely if ever touched the high spots.

Yet part of the truth of the age before machine culture was undoubtedly a more inventive, lusty, individualistic flair, and enough of that is captured and documented to make this account interesting indeed. Vintage art, old ads and clever typography add to the flavor.

A TALE OF WRECK AT SEA

THE WRECK OF THE CASSANDRA. By Frederic Prokosch. Farrar, Straus & Giroux. $4.95.

A CRUISE SHIP burns and sinks at sea and a motley group of nine drifts on a lifeboat to a large, remote island, somewhere between Hong Kong and Australia, which is inhabited in its interior by savages: the pattern may sound familiar, but in the masterly hands of veteran author Frederic Prokosch this tale is an engrossing, even haunting, novel.

The ship survivors (the year is 1938) are Miss Penelope Eccles, a butterfly hunter; Mrs. Lily Domingo, 59-year-old millionairess from Tennessee; her Austrian boyfriend, Baron von Wolfhausen; Zenzo, a Japanese youth; Laura and Tony Wagenseller, bickering couple from Philadelphia; Billy Baxter, a young American boy; Professor Shishnik, scholarly, childlike Russian; and Ibrahim, the ship's bartender, a handsome young Negro from Morocco.

Prokosch is a fine novelist who compels the reader's interest in the fate of each of these characters. There is violence, terror and vileness in the story; but there also is tenderness and beauty—BOB MARTIN.

A Few Vintage Volumes

WILLIAM YOUNGER, a Scotsman, departed this earth in 1961 at the age of 43. One would like to believe he has gone to a land where every year is a vintage one.

He was, we say, a Scotsman, but he could not have been dour. (All Scotsmen, non-Scotsmen believe are dour, just as all Japanese wear thick-lensed glasses and all Frenchmen are great lovers. Conversely, so all Americans believe, all Frenchmen think all Americans are lambs for the fleecing.)

But back to William Younger. No one dour of nature could have chosen, as the major work of his life, to trace the influence of wine on mankind from the earliest times. His posthumous book, "GODS' MEN AND WINE," published by the Wine and Food Society in association with World Publishing Co., $19.75, is a shout of praise for the pleasure wine has given man, when taken in gentlemanly moderation, from Ur of the Chaldees, Egypt and ancient Asia Minor, from Minoan Crete. It sings of the noble role played by wine in the glory that was Greece and the grandeur that was Rome.

ON THROUGH the Middle Ages, the Renaissance, the Age of Reason, the Victorian and Edwardian eras, Mr. Younger pens the epic of wine's exhilaration.

Wine was a woman's discovery. King Jemsheed of Persia, being inordinately fond of grapes, had them stored in jars. He found a certain bunch bitter—and believing their liquor noxious, ordered the jar labeled poisonous. As Mr. Younger tells it, a lady of his harem, wearied of life, drank some of the liquid, and instead of dying, fell asleep and awoke so refreshed that she finished the jar. The king pried the secret out of her and "a quantity of wine was made; and Jefsheed and all his court drank of the new heverage."

This veritable encyclopedia of wine contains 165 contemporary illustrations, a good many of them in color, that are in their own right a documentary of man's wine-making and drinking habits in every age.

THE WORLD PUBLISHING CO., again in conjunction with the Wine and Food Society, offers another boon to wine fans in Andre L. Simon's "THE COMMON-SENSE OF WINE" ($7.50). There cannot be much worth knowing about wines and winemakers of today, or how to use wines to the best advantage, that is not in Simon's book. The five stars of the book are the greatest wine-growing countries—France, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Germany. Their wines and wine regions are described in detail. Our American wines come in for a good deal of praise. The lesser-known wines of Switzerland, Bulgaria, Greece, Israel, South Africa and Chile, and some 15 other countries are titillatingly discussed. And there is advice on serving and storing wine, on wine glasses and decanters, and on wine cellars.

So, a toast to William Younger, Andre L. Simon, the Wine and Food Society, and World Publishing.

Relax--Be Comfortable!

By Steve Ellingson

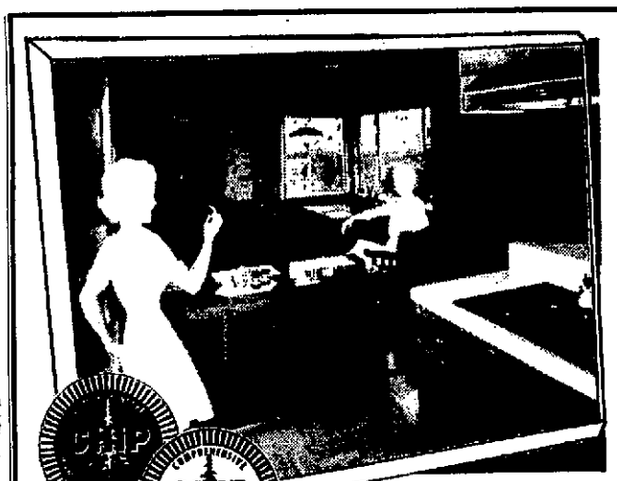

Invitation to relax is extended by simply-constructed settee—and star Marie Cheatham.

CALL IT A PATIO, a yard or a retreat—by any name this area issues an open invitation to "come relax and be comfortable." And the biggest inducement to comfort is a well-padded settee under the shade of your favorite tree. Now, with the long daylight hours, there's nothing like it to help squeeze a little more relaxation out of the end of a busy working day.

The settee, shown here with Marie Cheatham, co-star of NBC's "Days of Our Lives" series, has many attributes. Not only is it rest-promoting, tension relieving and good looking, but it's a project that most amateurs will enjoy building because of its simplicity of construction. The pads are a standard size and available everywhere. Wheels make it easy for you to follow either shade or sun.

The full-size pattern makes this an exceptionally easy project. You need only trace the pattern parts on wood, then saw them out and finally put the parts together. Lots of pictures are included showing the various stages of construction along with easy-to-understand directions. If you have a young boy in your family, this is an ideal project for him—or any other amateur in your household. Inexpensive too!

To obtain the full size settee pattern No. 396, send $1 by currency, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Southland Magazine Patterns Dept., P. O. Box 2383, Van Nuys.

COIN ROUNDUP

Canada 'Specials'

By Maurice M. Gould

THE COINS to be issued by Canada during 1967 —100 years since Canada became self-governing—will be in big demand among collectors all over the world. First of all, these coins will be minted for only one year and are unique commemorative pieces.

Totally different from the 1966 coins and the coins to be issued in 1968, they are a must for the collector of type pieces. They will be of special interest to the topical collector, since they will be struck with fish, birds and animal designs.

The 1967 Canadian centennial coins will include such animals as the wolf, wildcat, rabbit, dove and a fish (the mackerel), and will appear on the 10-cent piece.

One of the most beautiful coins will be the Canadian silver dollar, to show a Canadian goose in flight.

A New Brunswick artist, Alex Colville, winner of the competition for Canada's Centennial of Confederation Coinage, is the designer of the new coins.

Of course, the much-publicized $20 gold piece will be in the news for a long time and it is hoped that eventually this will be made available to U. S. collectors.

The minister of finance of Canada has reported that consideration is being given for the issuing of some centennial paper money during the celebration. In fact, a great many collectors sent in suggestions regarding a special commemorative paper money issue for the one centennial year.

Sesquicentennial medal of Cambridge, Mass., shows New England street scene on obverse.

LOOK FOR MORE interest in the collecting of medals and medallic art of all kinds.

The 89th Congress has a large number of commemorative medal bills before it, probably more than at any other time in history; the House of Representatives has been considering and debating the merits of each individual piece.

Some already have been passed, among them the Alaska Purchase Centennial, the Scranton, Pa., Centennial, and the 75th anniversary of the American Numismatic Association. These three pieces are considered national medals.

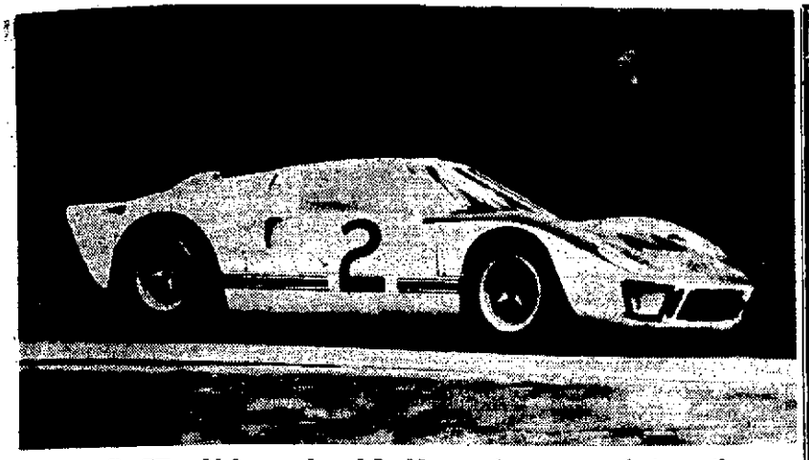

There will probably also be a Secret Service Centennial Medal, along with many others.

One of the most important pieces to be struck, of great interest to all coin collectors, will be the American Numismatic Association medal. This group is the largest organization of coin collectors in the world, has over 25,000 members and is now in the process of preparing to build a permanent home and museum in Colorado Springs, Colo.

One example is the beautiful medal issued recently on the 150th anniversary of Southbridge, Mass. This sesquicentennial piece shows the main street on the obverse; the reverse has a map of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the famous Deneson Rock, and the "To the Victors Belong the Spoils," which is a famous quotation from one of its outstanding citizens, William Learned Marcy.

To order the new COINS OF SPECIAL VALUE booklet send 50 cents to Maurice Gould, care of Southland Magazine, Box 4037, Grand Central Station, New York, N. Y., 10017.

The New King of Cars

bra accelerates from 0 to 60 miles per hour in 3.9 seconds, from 0 to 100 in 7.5 seconds, and from 0 to 100 to a dead stop again in 14 seconds.)

With auto racing steadily gaining spectators and competitors all across the country, Shelby sees a whole new breed of race driver in the making, a return to the gentleman sportsman who takes his machine, which he drove to work all week, to the track on weekends and runs it in races. He claims loudly and proudly that his GT 350 Mustang, the car he produces by the thousands at his L. A. International Airport factory, where jet fighters were assembled, can be driven from his showroom floor directly to a drag strip or road race course and come up a winner.

The projection is that Shelby American will sell 6,000 of the revamped Mustangs this year at $4,428. (The race-ready competition model is $5,950. The GT 350 Mustang has a slightly modified body from the stock Ford model but there are major changes in its steering, suspension system and engine. Shelby sells them through 90 dealerships nationwide, and when in a jovial mood, which is most of the time, the owner of Shelby American is likely to quip of the GT 350 Mustang: "It's what made Horace Wink blink."

(Another statement by Shelby of the GT 350 and the Cobra: "What I am trying to build is a car for a very special class of buyer, but I think there are a lot of buyers in this special class. This car is for the person who, when the light turns green, wants to go.")

Shelby American's concentration on mass producing modified Mustangs has caused a loud ripple within the organization. Pete Brock, a brilliant young race car designer (he designed the Cobra Daytona coupe which many racing authorities consider the best racing car in the world today), resigned from the Shelby American in recent months. Brock, the first man hired by Shelby when he began to build his empire, commented to this writer: "They're turning it (Shelby American) into a washing machine factory, just stamping out Mustangs." Brock says he would like to return "if he (Shelby) ever gets back into the business of building race cars."

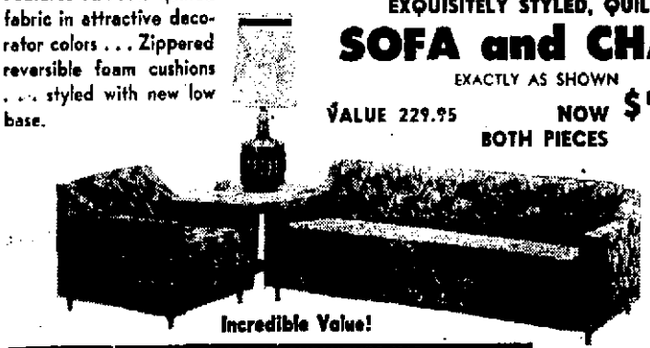

But it is more likely that Carroll Shelby is moving in the other direction. It's been a long and loud trail since that first victory in a race car in Okmulgee, Okla., the first time he ever sat in a sports car. They were lean years, traipsing along the circuit through Caddo Mills and Jacksboro and Hudson's Corners and it was a hectic life even after he hit the big time of Daytona, Monza and Le Mans.

That's why those who've watched closely his climb from penniless ex-driver to a position of being the guiding force in America's burgeoning sports car business in a span of only a few years understand his point of view.

He has won everything. Now he wants money.

PET PARADE

Max, the Non-Conforming Cat

By Eleanor Avery Price

"Maxwell," whose tri-colored markings are quite rare, belongs to Ruth Arthur, Long Beach.

TWO YEARS AGO, we carried in this column a picture of a male tortoiseshell (tri-colored) born in Signal Hill area. He's still a beauty, and living happily although he's never permitted to get into nocturnal feline brawls. Now another genetical nonconformist has appeared in Long Beach. Named Maxwell, he's owned by Ruth Arthur.

Tortoiseshell and calicos are fairly common as females. They are not to be confused with cats—male or female — with yellowish or tawny fur around the face, the underparts or back. This is a coloration of fur and is not sex-linked.

The study of genetics is not always easy to understand, and scientifically the birth of a male tri-colored should not be possible. Each individual cell of every living species carries a constant number of deeply-stained bodies in cell nuclei, which can be studied when taken from the mouth. They are called chromosomes, a word originated in 1888 by Wilhelm Von Waldeyer.

LATER, Walter S. Sutton formulated the theory of their importance in reproduction. Man has 46 chromosomes; rabbits 44; mice 40; cats 38. A female normally carries two X chromosomes, whereas a male has one X and one Y. In reproduction, if the X fertilizes the egg, the offspring has two Xs and is female. If the Y fertilizes the egg, the offspring carries both X and Y and is male.

In the genes of black and yellow in a cat's color, the female with her two Xs can have both black and yellow in her coat. The male with his own X and one Y is not supposed to carry both colors. If he does, he has two Xs plus the Y, giving him 39 chromosomes instead of 38. The extra one usually makes the male sterile. In fact, the odds are about 100,000-to-1 against the male being fertile. People have claimed their male tris sired kittens, but the only one I know about with proof is Quad. Ch. Torti Man of Gallus who lived in Texas from 1950 to 1959.

Sterile tri cats can still drown out a TV with caterwauling, and they may leave "calling cards" in every room in an attempt to attract a female. Just as with ordinary toms, their personalities vary.

In studies of humans with extra or missing chromosomes, which has nothing to do with hair color, the human may be mentally sluggish, have abnormal growth or personality problems. For this reason, doctors who study mentally retarded persons at Rainer School in Buckland, Wash., also study as many male tri cats as they can obtain. Most cats sent to them do not have the positive pattern of nuclei cells and are not true "triploid-diploid mosaics."

The Washington school also is interested in blue-cream cats, a rare enough coloring in females, and another "impossible" in males, because this color is probably a dilution of the true calico.

No Cure for Obesity?

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical Science Editor

NEW RESEARCH supports the belief that obesity remains incurable.

Dr. Joseph A. Glennon of the University of Wisconsin Medical School tells of 199 obese patients who took part in a long-term weight-reduction program. Only 12% lost 20 pounds or more and only one succeeded in approaching an ideal weight.

The program consisted of a short period of hospitalization followed by dieting at home. (All did manage to lose weight in the hospital.)

But follow-up studies one to two years after hospitalization show that weight reduction was not appreciable. Men were no more successful than women in combating obesity.

Dr. Glennon made his report to the Central Society for Clinical Research, Chicago.

A 20-YEAR follow-up study of 200 schizophrenic patients shows that many "hopelessly deteriorated" patients fully recover after a long illness.

Schizophrenia is a severe emotional disorder marked by retreat from reality.

Dr. Manfred Bleuler, Zurich, Switzerland psychiatrist and son of the man who invented the term "schizophrenia," says that if a patient lives long enough, he is likely to recover.

DOCTORS HAVE long felt that smokers get more respiratory infections than nonsmokers. A new research project gives proof:

Student nurses—47 smokers and 47 nonsmokers—were studied at Vancouver (Canada) General Hospital. As expected, the incidence of respiratory disease was less in the nonsmokers, reports the New England Journal of Medicine.

LONG-TERM treatment with a cortisone-like drug of the child with disabling asthma usually helps him to lead a nearly normal life and attend school.

So says a British researcher in Annals of Allergy. Dr. John Morrison Smith of Birmingham (England) Chest Clinic says that most of 56 patients treated were able to change from chronic invalidism to a reasonably normal life. Drug usually used was prednisolone.

WEST GERMANY is plagued with emotional problems, public health officials report.

The suicide rate is rising to new highs. Seven million persons (11.5% of the total population) are severely neurotic. One of every 30 students is disturbed.

SCIENTISTS WITH the Agriculture Research Service are working on a high-calorie fat emulsion that can be given for long periods by intravenous injection.

The new produce, made from cottonseed oil, is capable of providing up to eight times as many calories as currently used solutions. Thus it should prevent weight loss when patients have to be fed intravenously for long periods.

The emulsion, still considered experimental, has been used only on laboratory animals.

BEFORE A CROWD, skilled athletes perform better but less-skilled ones do worse, research shows.

Leon E. Smith, Ed. D., associate professor of physical education at University of Iowa, puts it this way:

"In other words, an audience facilitates performance and impairs learning."

The report was made at a regional meeting of the American College of Sports Medicine.

The Younger Set Heads for 'Tent-Outs'

IF A "TENT CITY" arises overnight in the neighbor's back yard, don't be surprised.

It's one of the "in" things among the younger set this summer to move out of the house and into their own easily-built playhouse towns in the far corner of the back yard of suburban homes all over the country.

It's a movement that has full approval of most parents, too, for it is not only providing an outlet for pent-up energies, but the fad is quieting down a lot of houses, as well.

THE KIDS ARE going for the latest outdoor innovation for children, the "A"-Tents. These experimental "A"-Tents, created by the Play Council, using inexpensive Homasote building board and simple wood framing, were patterned after the popular "A"-frame vacation homes. They were the result of studies to determine how they could serve as playtime projects for children to make use of their inexhaustible energy.

Plans were prepared for a wide variety of tent designs which would stimulate the imagination of any child and which could be easily assembled by any parent. Children and parents were consulted for ideas, test models were made and the children's enthusiasm was noted.

Some models were discarded and additional new ones created. And, finally, the day arrived when the group of "A"-Tents was assembled in the back yard of a quiet suburban home to receive the final approval of the children.

LET LOOSE, some of the kids zeroed in on a gaily decorated "A"-type wigwam (like a bunch of Indians). Others became soldiers zooming in on an "A"-Tent painted a khaki color.

Still others became sheiks of Araby, playing in and out of a colorful striped canopy "A"-Tent. Two other children tried their luck at prospecting for gold in front of their prospector's "A"-Tent, which had the natural gray finish of the weatherproof Homasote building board while another group tried erecting "instant tents," tents without framing which can be assembled and disassembled in minutes and which stimulate a child to use his creative as well as his imaginative skills.

In all respects, the project was a huge success. It encouraged children to use their imagination and, at the same time provided an outlet for their energy.

Parents require no professional skill to assemble and decorate the tents nor are any hard-to-get materials needed.

The wood framing and the Homasote board are available at most building material dealers. Being splinter-free and weatherproof, Homasote board makes an ideal material for outdoor projects designed for children's play.

A spokesman for the Play Council has indicated that plans and ideas for the "A"-Tents are available free to all by writing to The Play Council, Box 441, Trenton 3, New Jersey.

IN ALL ITS forms, the "A"-Tent, as devised by the Council, is an educational "starter." Children have an opportunity to take pages from history as the situations for the "A"-Tent settings, such as Washington at Valley Forge, Lawrence in Arabia, the Battle of the Little Big Horn, Sutter's Discovery of Gold and many, many more incidents which make up their studies of history.

And there also is fun for the whole family, first in assembling and decorating the various "A"-Tents and then in helping the children plan some of their pint-sized adventures.

There's no doubt, the "A"-Tents are here to stay and with them a whole new concept of play.

They Love Summer Sun

SOME plants, like some people, are sun worshippers. Give them a full day in the blazing August sun and they only ask for more. Give them shade, and they sulk or otherwise show their discontent.

The season when these sun-worshipping members of our plant world can be of use is hard upon us, so if you wondered what to plant against the heat-drenched south wall or on a sun-baked hillside, visit your local nursery now. California Association of Nurserymen suggests any of the following will do the job and do it well.

One sun-loving perennial that long has been a California favorite is the lavender—that plant of great sentimental attachments. The old fashioned English lavender hasn't changed much since our grandmother's day and is still a ruggedly atttractive shrub for sunny borders and beds. Its gray foliage and spikes of lavender flowers are easy to live with and easy to combine with other colors. There are newer lavenders, however, worth a look. One of these, Munstead Lavender, is specially dwarfed, seldom growing over a foot in height. It is an excellent choice for the base of a sunny wall, or the top of a retaining wall on a sunny hillside. The blooms have the wonderful fragrance which one associates with the lavender family.

ANOTHER gray-leaved perennial which soaks up any amount of sun is the Dusty Miller. There are two or three Dusty Millers available, varying in size from the squat edging plant we use to line walks and beds to two or three foot specimens used to fill in the shrub border or to stand by themselves in a featured spot.

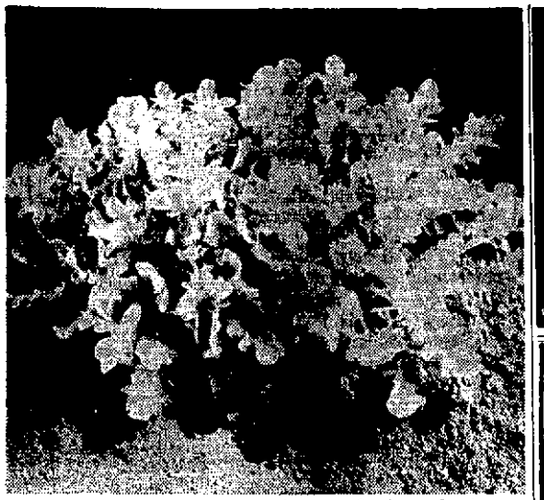

Dusty Millers are all silvery-gray, bearing yellow flowers in summer which add to the attraction. It is the foliage color which we rely on mainly however—through 12 months of the year—to combine with other colors, primarily those of such sun-loving bedders as Scarlet Sage or zinnias. In not-so-hot garden settings, it can be most attractive when combined with the bronzy tones of fibrous begonia.

Similar in color to the Dusty Miller is another perennial, Silver King artemesia. This one has the same silvery foliage, but the leaves are much more fine cut and the overall appearance is of a delicate lacy quality. The foliage of Silver King is wonderfully decorative in bouquets, especially dried bouquets. To prepare it for such use, cut in late summer and hang upside down in a cool, dry place such as your garage or basement. You can also cut it fresh during winter for display indoors, and fine display it makes.

IN THE GARDEN border, this artemesia will grow in a loose, mounding form from two to three feet high, though the latter is unusual. Keep it pruned back (by cutting bouquets) to discourage ranginess and give it all the sun your garden has. You can't overdo it.

The unchallenged king of our sun worshipping plants is the lantana which never seems to get enough heat to hurt it. So many wonderful new varieties of this rugged plant are available that the gardener owes himself a trip to the nursery just to see them. Most of them are of the low, spreading type, but put them on a lattice work and they will fan upward in a neat espalier. You couldn't ask for a nicer addition to a sun-baked wall than one of the newer lantanas grown this way.

All of the plants mentioned above are rugged individualists who make their own way despite neglect and unfavorable soil conditions. They are much better for regular care, however. Poor soils should be improved with steer manure, though supplemental feeding as the plants grow is not necessary. As a matter of fact, in the case of lavender, extra feeding is inadvisable, for too much food reduces the wonderful fragrance.

Dusty Miller is a popular sun-loving plant for border and accent in California gardens.

Vermilion-red cosmos, Sunset, is a medalist.

Gold Medal Winner

FOR ONLY the third time in the past 27 years a new flower has been scored sufficiently high by all judges to receive a gold medal award from All-America Selections. A cosmos, of a color never seen before in these flowers, it is named Sunset. Scarlet or vermilion-red blooms with an underlay of gold, make this an outstanding annual for any garden.

It is so easy to grow. Just make a shallow drill with the tip of your hoe or rake handle after soil has been spaded and raked level, and scatter the seeds—thinly please, because every one will grow.

And the color—it has to be seen to be believed! It is just as bright and unfading in the states in the lower south as it is in provinces in Canada. Here's a real eye-stopper you'll be delighted to grow.

If you serve a dish that friends rave about, submit the recipe to Recipe Contest Editor, Southland Magazine. It may win a $5 "Recipe of the Week" prize.

LAGUNA BEACH ART FESTIVAL

Judas clutches the bag of silver. John waits with calm confidence. Christ, His head turned slightly to the right and lowered, is a wonderful study of simplicity and meekness. To the right, James has spread out his hands in dismay, while behind him, Thomas shows disposition to be aggressive; Philip has risen in troubled doubt and young Matthew turns to the two near him in wonder. Thaddeus is struck with horror and Simon is stern and forbidding.

"We have studied the picture of The Last Supper hundreds of times," says George Owen, 81, of Laguna Beach, who has played the role of St. Peter for 16 years straight. "Yet each time we catch a little different mood of each disciple and try to add it to the presentation."

THE HUMAN figures in The Last Supper hold their poses for three minutes—longer than for any of the other pageant presentations.

This year, the pageant will feature a startling contrast to da Vinci's painting by also enacting the painting of The Sacrament of the Last Supper by Salvador Dali—a master work of modern art. The original of this piece is in the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D. C., but a magnificent copy hangs in the refectory of St. Michael's Norbertine Seminary in Trabuco Canyon.

In addition to the da Vinci and Dali works of religious art, the pageant will stage three other religious paintings, St. Michael Casting Satan Into Hell, by Antonio Palomino y Velasco; The Holy House of Nazareth, by Francisco de Zurbaran, and The Virgin With St. Ines and St. Tecla, by El Greco.

THIS YEAR'S pageant features 30 re-creations of paintings and sculptures, but also adds the charm of other types of art, repeating the showing of the exquisitely detailed Oriental carved ivory chess figures in a classic checkmate position on the same stage with the contrasting Mexican chess set of simple paper mache also in checkmate position.

Of course, during the five-week run there is more to see at Laguna's Festival of Arts than just the Pageant of Masters. The six acres surrounding the Irvine Bowl are clustered with the work of some 200 artists in every medium of the arts. The work is for sale and many artists sell enough at this festival to keep them in business for the greater part of a year.

An interesting display is the Anna Mary Beck Junior Art Gallery which presents the best work of Orange County students from kindergarten through high school. There are puppet shows several times daily and on Sunday afternoon the "Performing Arts on the Green" is presented by the Festival Arts Chorale in cooperation with the Civic Ballet, Community Players and other local cultural groups.

From June to August, when most are planning their vacations, the people of Laguna Beach are busy rehearsing and practicing a living art. And many, like George Owen, a St. Peter for 16 years, wouldn't think of doing anything else.

Life With a Sports Car

over for a time, and we sports car owners must rise to new heights of injured persecution. We're a carefree lot at heart, but we're also a bit paranoid about big cars and the Big Car mentality of many Americans.

I personally hope for a special tract in Gehenna reserved for sloppy parkers of those cars with sharky fins, mammary-like bumper projections and taillights that could be hired out when the spotlight breaks down at a supermarket grand opening.

This breed of man—and woman—has cost me many a parking light lens and has put numerous dimples in the Sprite's frail grillework.

Within two weeks, three lenses were broken and my car's license plate illuminator was sheared off. It got so I'd check the parking space for tire-slicing shards of broken glass before I dared to move the car. I've never been present for one of these power-steering pervert's performances, but I eagerly await the confrontation.

Perhaps I'll just hand the culprit a bill for the damage, and then again, up for serious consideration, is the simple act of walking over and smashing the corresponding light of the offender's car.

Guess which method appeals to me most?

THERE ARE more subtle aspects of sports car ownership which don't necessarily lead to mayhem or the urge toward it. You encounter, for instance, some complex social problems with whomever happens to be the light of your life on a given night, especially if the occasion is more than ultra-casual.

In one brief fling I learned that:

—Leaking clutch fluid ruins satin shoes.

—Beehive pomadours do not hold up at 60 miles per hour with the top down.

—Pipe ashes should not be tapped out on the edge of the windshield frame except when the car is motionless.

—One mustn't expectorate without a careful analysis of prevailing winds and rate of travel.

—Handholding in city traffic is feasible only among the automatic transmission set.

A word about safety might be wise in light of the current controversy over American automobiles and the degree of their skull-banging and kidney-punching liabilities.

You can induce aches, pains and a carbon monoxide headache just riding in a roadster such as mine.

SPORTS CAR knee, for example, is a leg malady caused by the low seating arrangement, plus much use in braking and clutching the car. For one who was never considered a Brer Rabbit for grace and agility, it was an awkward affliction. People stare so when you climb out of the tiny cockpit, groan audibly and hobble down the sidewalk gingerly favoring your left leg. It usually disappears after three weeks of cramping torment.

Eventually, one learns to live with a sports car and love it, despite such womanish wiles as constant demands in time, money and attention. But just like with a woman, you never let a sports car involve you to the extent that it interferes with your career.

I was going to write more to this article, but I've got to get down to the garage and pick up my Sprite. Clutch went out on it the other day, you know.

Recipe of the Week

Sukiyaki meat balls, a la San Pedro, win for Mrs. George Homrig, who lives in the port community at 905 W. 29th St., the $5 recipe-of-the-week prize. Her recipe:

2 lbs. ground beef
1 egg
2 cups diced bread
1 cup evaporated milk
1 med. onion, diced
Salt and pepper to taste
2 1-lb. cans bean sprout, save liquid
1 8-oz. can mushrooms, save liquid
¼ cup soy sauce
¼ cup cornstarch
1½ cups sliced onions
Water to make 1 cup

Moisten bread cubes with milk, add to ground beef along with egg, salt and pepper and onion. Mix well. Shape into large balls and brown in hot oil. When all are browned, combine juice of bean sprouts and mushrooms. Mix water, cornstarch and soy sauce together, add to juices and mix well. Pour over browned meat balls and simmer for 15 minutes. Push meatballs aside and add onions, cover and simmer 15 minutes. Add bean sprouts and mushrooms—cover, simmer for 10 minutes. Serve over hot fluffy rice.

Sandwich Is King

2 tblsp toasted flaked coconut
2 tblsp soft butter or margarine
8 slices cinnamon raisin bread

Combine banana, cream cheese, pineapple, nuts, dates and coconut. Butter bread. Make sandwiches, using ¼ cup filling for each one. Yield: 4 Tropical Tempters.

STACKED APPETIZERS

8 sliced hamburger buns
2 (4 ounce) packages thin sliced corned or dried beef
24 slices cucumber
8 thin slices Swiss Cheese
8 thin slices tomato
8 lettuce leaves
32 stuffed olives

Cut top halves of buns in half, horizontally. To make "triple-decker" sandwiches, re-assemble buns placing 2 slices each of beef and cucumber on bottom "deck"; top with second "deck" of bun, a cheese slice, a tomato slice and a lettuce leaf, then bun top. Cut each sandwich into fourths and fasten together with a toothpick. Place a stuffed olive on each toothpick. Serve as party appetizers. Yield: 2⅔ dozen Stacked Appetizers.

AVOCADO-SARDINE SANDWICH

16 (¼ inch) strips peeled avocado
3 tblsp lemon juice
4 tblsp prepared sour cream
½ tsp prepared mustard
8 slices enriched potato bread
4 lettuce leaves
8 thin slices tomato
¼ tsp salt
12 sardines

Dip avocado strips in lemon juice. Combine sour cream and mustard; spread 1½ teaspoons over each bread slice. On half the spread bread slices, layer a lettuce leaf, 2 tomato slices, a sprinkle of salt, 4 avocado strips and 3 sardines. Serve openface with remaining bread slices alongside. Yield: 4 Avocado-Sardine Sandwiches.

SEAFOOD HAND SANDWICH

⅛ tsp marjoram
⅛ tsp pepper
¼ tsp salt
1 tblsp vinegar
½ pound boned fish (fresh or frozen)
1 pint boiling water
1 tblsp butter or margarine
¼ cup cocktail sauce
½ cup green onion slices
8 thin dill pickle strips
4 sliced, hot buttered frankfurter buns

Add marjoram, pepper, salt, vinegar and fish to boiling water; cover and simmer about 5 minutes, or until fish is tender. Drain. Skin and flake fish. Melt butter in a large skillet, add flaked fish and fry until lightly browned, tossing frequently with a fork. Sandwich ¼ cup browned fish, 1 tablespoon cocktail sauce, 1 tablespoon onion slices and 1 pickle strip between bun halves. Serve hot. Yield: 4 Seafood Hand Sandwiches.

Your wife deserves a medal.

This medal is the symbol of an all-electric Gold Medallion Home.

We call it "the home that helps with the housework."

How does it help?

The electric oven cleans itself automatically.*

The electric range never blackens pots and pans.

The electric dishwasher and washer-dryer do loads of work a day.

But the biggest help is the electric heating system. It keeps the whole house cleaner.

White draperies stay white longer. Walls need less scrubbing. The heat is as clean as electric light.

If you're looking for a new home, look for the medal your wife deserves—the symbol of an all-electric Gold Medallion Home.

Thousands have been awarded to homes (and wives) in Southern California.

Best of all, Gold Medallion homes come in all price ranges and work all day for surprisingly little.

EVER SO often — without warning — I am wracked by a powerful desire. I've just got to have a delicious beefsteak for dinner.

Fortunately this robust wish is accompanied by a mild, tempering influence. I do not care to bankrupt myself in pursuit of that steak. I don't want to leave my car keys with the proprietor to take care of the tab. Nor do I wish to take a less drastic way out, arranging to pay for my dinner in easy monthly payments.

Being fairly intelligent as well as hungry, I know exactly where to go when I want a marvelous steak served at a sane price. It's the Melody Cove, 1960 Santa Fe Ave., Long Beach, an attractive, modern place with thick carpeting, paneled walls and a quiet atmosphere conducive to pleasant dining. It's been owned for many years by Jerry Reynolds and his tall, graceful wife Jo, knowledgeable hosts well-acquainted with the secrets of pleasing patrons in two important ways: (1) quality and (2) price.

The Cove has two featured steak dinners, both $2.75. One is a top sirloin, char-broiled to perfection, accompanied by onion rings, soup du jour or a large fresh salad; baked potato with thick, delectable cheese sauce; garlic toast and coffee. The other is a teriyaki steak, which is a conventional top sirloin accompanied by a cup of spicy, exotic teriyaki sauce, as well as the aforementioned side dishes.

Closed Sundays but open for luncheon and dinner daily, the Melody Cove also offers tasty sea foods and poultry. The Thursday night special is prime rib au jus (juicy and flavorful), $2.25. One of the luncheon treats is a $1 hamburger sandwich, served on a French roll with melted cheese and a green salad.

Q. Is it true that the U.S. Army is now operating Dachau, Hitler's oldest concentration camp in Germany, as a stockade for American GI's?—E.L.T., New York, N.Y.

A. Eastman Barracks, a prison for American GI's, is located on the same land that encompassed the Dachau concentration camp. From time to time GI inmates report a strong nauseating stench wafting up from the nearby crematorium where the Nazis murdered approximately 28,000 Jews and anti-Nazis. Dachau today is divided into two areas: one consists of the memorial to victims of the German atrocities, headed by Ruth Jakusch of the Dachau International Committee; the other consists of the Eastman Barracks, which once was used to incarcerate important enemies of the Third Reich. GI's in Germany refer to the Eastman barracks as "the Dachau stockade." It is a neat, whitewashed jail that houses GI's who have been sentenced to six months of imprisonment or less.

Q. Were Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and Nathaniel Hawthorne college classmates?—Watson Henry, Evanston, Ill.

A. Yes, both were graduated from Bowdoin College, Maine, class of 1825.

Q. I've read that most of the fatal accidents in private flying are caused by drunk pilots. Is this so?—Vernon Richards, Paducah, Ky.

A. One of the first formal studies of general aviation accidents, made by Drs. Charles Harper and William Albers of the Federal Aviation Agency, shows that in 158 of 477 fatal general aviation accidents in 1963—this has nothing to do with commercial airline flying—56 or 35.4% of the 158 pilots registered positive at autopsy as regards alcohol in the blood.

Q. Does Barry Goldwater plan to run for the U.S. Senate again? — Dan Lloyd, Tombstone, Ariz.

A. Probably in 1968 or when Senator Hayden of Arizona retires.

Q. Not long ago while I was in Europe, I was told that most major European countries deliver the mail faster and more frequently than the U.S. Post Office does. Is this true? If so, please use only my initials as I would still like to get my mail.—M.P.G., Bal Harbour, Fla.

A. True.

Q. How many years have Chet Huntley and Dave Brinkley been with NBC, and who was responsible for putting them together?—R. Espinard, Chicago, Ill.

A. Brinkley has been with NBC since 1943, Huntley since 1955. The original pairing suggestion came from the late Fred Wile of NBC-TV, Los Angeles, was implemented by Pat Weaver, formerly in charge of NBC-TV.

Q. I've heard that Robert Goulet was married before his marriage to Carol Lawrence (1,) and that he has a child from that first marriage. Is that so? — A.T.E., Jamaica, N.Y.

A. Yes, he was married to Louise Longmore in 1956, has a daughter, Nicolette, by her.

Q. How many times has columnist Drew Pearson been sued for libel? Has he ever lost? Is it true Gen. Douglas MacArthur planned to sue him for libel because he reported that MacArthur every now and again touched up his hair? —Arthur Holt, Los Angeles, Calif.

A. Pearson has been sued approximately 25 times, has lost only one suit. MacArthur resented Pearson's intimations that he was a vain man.

Q. Who said: "In America there are two classes of travel—first class, and with children."?—J. Robert Jenkins, Cambridge, Mass.

A. The late Robert Benchley, U.S. humorist—1889-1945.

Q. In 1961 President Kennedy sent his Vice President, Lyndon Johnson, and his sister and brother-in-law, Jean and Stephen Smith, to Vietnam. What was Johnson's report on Vietnam? What did he recommend back then?—S.L., Washington, D.C.

A. He then reported that the number-one danger in Southeast Asia was not Communism but "hunger, ignorance, poverty and disease," went on to say that we must "make imaginative use of our scientific and technologic capacity." He favored military training missions but no commitment of American troops on the grounds that such commitments would revive anticolonial demonstrations in Vietnam. The major supporter for troop and combat escalation in Vietnam was Walt Rostow, who with Gen. Maxwell Taylor followed Johnson to Vietnam in October 1961. Both gentlemen suggested U.S. troop commitments. Despite demurrers by Averell Harriman and J. Kenneth Galbraith, President Kennedy reluctantly agreed to send combat troops to Vietnam. In May 1962, when Defense Secretary Robert McNamara flew into Saigon for his first assessment of the situation, he said after a two-day stay: "Every quantitative measurement we have shows we're winning this war."

Q. Is Petula Clark married? Does she have any children? Is she English or French? — Claire Diamond, Jersey City, N.J.

A. Petula Clark, British, is married to a Frenchman, has two daughters.

Q. In Vietnam many American soldiers are referred to by their buddies as "Straight Arrows" and "Broken Arrows." What do these expressions mean?—Viola Rushmer, Baltimore, Md.

A. "Straight Arrow" signifies a married man who remains faithful for his entire stretch of duty in Vietnam. "Broken Arrow" refers to a married soldier who succumbs to temptation.

Q. When Senator Fulbright was president of the University of Arkansas, is it true he was given the choice of resigning or being fired, and that he chose resignation? — C. H. B., Deming, N. Mex.

A. No. Fulbright was fired by Gov. Homer Adkins on the grounds that he was not an educator but a political hack. This occurred immediately following Adkins' election against which Fulbright's mother had strongly fought in her reform newspaper, The Northwest Arkansas Times, describing Adkins as a "blowhard" and a "handshaker."

Q. Lucille Ball recently made a TV special acting as a guide around London. My question is—was Lucille Ball born in England or the U.S.? Also how much does she know about London? — R. Smith, Jamestown, N.Y.

A. Lucille Ball was born in Jamestown, N.Y. In all probability she does not know enough about London to be licensed as a guide, but she is a big TV name, which is what the sponsor is buying.

NEEDED NOW: A CODE OF ETHICS FOR CONGRESSMEN

by SEN. PAUL DOUGLAS

"CONGRESSMEN WHO CHEAT"—WHAT SHOULD

On March 24, 1963, PARADE published an article by Jack Anderson on "Congressmen Who Cheat" — the small number of legislators who sell influence, misuse funds, pad payrolls. This focused the public spotlight on congressional ethics, and the uncomfortable legislators have never been able to back out of its glare. The scandals that followed have brought the issue to a head.

The original PARADE revelations kicked up a storm on the House floor. No less than a dozen members angrily leaped to their feet to deny the charges. Congressman Omar Burleson (D., Tex.), whose Committee on Administration is responsible for policing the House, challenged PARADE to "come before us in public hearing and reveal all or any part of the allegations in the article." But the congressman turned out to be not the least interested in errant congressmen, only in who had given information to PARADE. When Anderson offered to submit a statement documenting cases of misconduct, Burleson dismissed the meeting.

A statement PARADE had prepared for that session disclosed many incidents. One name that figured in the statement was that of Bobby Baker, and his role in the award of a $21 million contract to build Washington's new sports coliseum.

Philadelphia contractor Matt McCloskey, a Democratic party sugar daddy, came to see Baker about the contract in 1960. Baker arranged a meeting with Congressman John McMillan, (D., S.C.), chairman of the House District Committee. McMillan, as part of his political blessing, suggested that one Don Reynolds write the insurance.

That's precisely how the deal turned out according to testimony before a House committee. McCloskey won the contract. Reynolds wrote the performance bond. Baker allegedly got $4000.

Later, the Washington Post reported McMillan received a $5100 Cadillac from Reynolds. After the disclosure, McMillan sent Reynolds two checks for $5100.

The Senate was no more eager to investigate its members than the House had been. Baker's closest friends, constant associates, counselors and confessors were senators. The Senate sent investigators into 32 states in the Baker case, interviewed 200 witnesses, took sworn testimony from 60. But not a single senator was questioned.

In both Houses, however, there have been attempts to police legislative ethics. Not long after the PARADE article, for instance, the Senate established a Special Committee on Standards and Conduct, to look into charges against members. The House restricted per diem allowances and expenses members could draw while traveling abroad. A number of senators — led by Senator Douglas, Sen. Clifford Case (R., N.J.), Sen. Hugh Scott (R., Pa.) and Majority Leader Mike Mansfield—have risen in the Senate to disclose voluntarily all their income and holdings.

In the House, Rep. James Scheuer (D., N.Y.) arose to announce he was refusing to vote on an issue in which he had a personal interest.

The Baker scandal also triggered proposed legislation that would require congressmen to file a record of holdings, to show possible conflict of interests and would require governmental departments to keep complete public records of contacts made by congressmen in behalf of constituents.

In the Senate last year, however, an attempt to pass a disclosure statute was pigeonholed after Sen. Everett Dirksen (R., Ill.) complained it made him a "second-class citizen." In the House, the bill was hooted down without a vote.

There are before the Congress now similar bills that would require disclosure of congressional income and restrict campaign donations. A bill backed by the President would require that all outside income and gifts to a congressman or member of his family worth more than $100 be disclosed.

These bills are not given much chance of passage. But, as Senator Douglas points out in his article, the need for such legislation is great. Congressmen who cheat, as PARADE's article said, must be stopped from giving a black eye to their honest colleagues. And American citizens have a right to legislators whom they can trust.

I believe that the time has come for Congress to act to reform the antiquated laws on campaign contributions and political expenses and to provide for the disclosure of the income, assets and the holdings of its members.

Congress has been dilatory in these matters. We have fooled around long enough. The failure to act could jeopardize the public confidence in the legislative branch of the government.

There are already a series of bills before Congress, including President Johnson's proposals, which could go a long way to solve the problems we face.

But year after year Congress fails to act. One year, the Senate passes a bill but the House fails to act. The next Congress, the House acts but the Senate does not. For a variety of reasons, nothing of consequence gets done.

Basically, there are two problems: Members of the Senate and House have great power and influence over a variety of favors, privileges or benefits that selfish interests desire — Defense Department contracts, insurance for a bank or savings and loan company, a quota for an oil refinery, agricultural allotment arrangements, sugar quotas at highly subsidized prices, tax favors, appointments to important positions and influence over hundreds of bills and resolutions that Congress routinely passes.

The other problem is the tremendous amount of money that a candidate needs to run a modern political campaign. It has been estimated that in the New York City mayoralty campaign last year at least $5 million was spent. In the recent senatorial campaign in that state, the expenditure for each candidate has been estimated at over $3 million. In my own state of Illinois, a recent candidate for statewide office said that he spent a million dollars before the final campaign; certainly he must have spent at least that much when the campaign really got underway. In a major two-party state, under modern campaign conditions — especially with the importance and extremely high cost of television and radio time — a bare minimum of $500,000 would be needed to run even a modest campaign.

MISTAKES & TEMPTATIONS

I advocate disclosure not because I think that members of the House and Senate are dishonest or corrupt. On the contrary, I believe that the level of honesty is a good deal higher than the general level in our society. But the fact is that these men have more opportunities for mistakes and more temptations thrown their way in a month or year than the average person does in a lifetime. If congressmen and senators acted as most of those in private business do, many would be pilloried in the press and driven out of public life. So it is not because of lack of integrity on the part of my colleagues as a group that I advocate both disclosure and reform of campaign contributions, but rather as a protection for these men whose power and position make them especially vulnerable to the ambitious, the self-seekers and the narrow interest groups.

One of the reasons Congress has failed to act vigorously in these areas is that each member of Congress knows from personal experience the pressures of running even a modest campaign. He therefore tends to be a good deal more tolerant and considerate of his colleagues for fear that "there, but for the Grace of God, go I." And, in addition, as men who deal daily in their publi lives with the tremendous problems and difficulties of human beings, legislators are far more compassionate than those in administrative and judicial positions.

Nonetheless, Congress has great problems that we must do something about. Let me give some examples. One man I know, who was literally without funds near the end of his campaign for the Senate, was asked if he could use $10,000. His reply was, "Can I use $10,000?!" But strings were attached. He could have the $10,000 if he agreed to support one of the most flagrant of the tax loopholes. The candidate said that he had not studied this provision, but he could not agree to take the money on condition that he vote in a particular way. Eventually the $10,000 was raised elsewhere, and the candidate received it with no strings attached.

DOZENS OF GIFTS

Shortly after I was first elected, my wife and I received dozens of gifts, some quite valuable. These came from people whom we scarcely knew and from people we had not known at all. We packed them up and shipped them back.

I remember in a major debate on the steel basing point price system, I was taking a position essentially against the steel industry when it crossed my mind that I owned a few steel shares and that if the fight were successful my own shares would decline in value. This did not deter me, but the mere fact that I thought about it warned me, and I sold the shares and since have put what small holdings I have into mutual funds where no legislation could affect the value.

On numerous occasions people have offered campaign contributions while making a request for a job, privilege or favor. My policy is to return these and to make certain that campaign contributions are insulated from me so that I will not be influenced either consciously or subconsciously. But these are precisely the reasons why we need to have disclosure legislation.

The expenses of holding office are not commonly understood. Last year I spent over $10,000 buying lunches for constituents, holding receptions for Illinois visitors, going back and forth to Illinois, for weekly television and radio reports to the citizens of my state, for political contributions and for telephone and telegraph expenses beyond the allowances given a senator. This year I will probably spend more. Tremendous demands are made on the public official, and if he doesn't pick up the check, people will properly complain that he is a "freeloader." And, frankly, I regard contributions to my political party and to candidates in whom I believe as much a civic duty as contributions to church and charity.

I believe that the full disclosure of a senator's income and assets is the best possible insurance to the people that he is not engaging in conflicts of interest. I believe that the people who elect us at least have a right to know about our income and holdings as well as expenses. For this reason, first as an alderman in Chicago and more recently as a senator, I have made a public disclosure of income, assets and expenses of myself and my wife. Also for this reason I have a rule for myself and my staff of returning any gift the value of which exceeds the arbitrary figure of $2.50.

What is the solution to these problems of requiring personal financial disclosure? The best solution would be for all citizens to take their civic duty seriously and contribute a few dollars to their party and its candidates. This would adequately finance campaigns and leave no candidate indebted to anyone. But this obviously does not happen and will not happen.

The system that has grown up recently of having dinners where a guest gets a $5 dinner for $50 or $100 is a great improvement as a campaign fundraising device. No officeholder can feel that anyone can influence him for amounts as relatively small as this. Even the larger sums from the trade unions represent the dimes and dollars of ordinary working men and women. It is much healthier to have a large number of people giving $50 and $100 than a handful giving $5000, $10,000 or $15,000 apiece. People who give large amounts expect, and generally get, favors in return. And in the end, the public pays for these contributions because the cost is absorbed in the defense contract or deposit insurance or the sugar quota received in return.

FLAT FEE PER VOTER

In my judgment, the best solution is that put forward more than a half-century ago by Theodore Roosevelt and more recently by the late Sen. Richard Neuberger of Oregon. They believed the best method of financing campaigns was for the federal treasury to pay to the major candidates for federal office a flat fee such as 10¢ per prospective voter. Campaign expenditures would be limited to these amounts. In this way, campaigns would be adequately financed, candidates freed of any obligation and the public protected.

Some may say that with the present level of taxes and of government expenditures this would be just another unnecessary expense. But the fact is that under our present system the public generally pays anyway. This proposal is a better method of doing it.

For all these reasons some proposals should be enacted into law by the Congress. The problems can no longer be swept under the rug. ■

BRINGING UP BABY®, Hints Collected by Mrs. Dan Gerber, Mother of Five

Cool thoughts for warm tots

Great time, summertime. But scorcher days do call for tips on how to keep your cherub cool.

• Try not to let baby sit, creep or run too much in the sun. On scorcher days, it's wise to stick to shady, draft-free play spots.

• Sunsuit or diaper will suffice on most days. On real sizzlers, baby will be more comfy with a Gerber cotton shirt to absorb perspiration.

• A kiddy wading pool, or even a pan of water and a cup to dip and pour with, is fun and refreshing. Baby, of course, should be carefully watched.

More refresher courses

Heat has a way of working up a baby's thirst. Among the truly happy quenchers are Gerber Strained Fruit Juices. Fruit-bright, yet delicate, they also provide vitamin C. That's an important factor in maintaining sound gums and other body tissues. One can of any variety will give your baby over 100% of the recommended daily allowance.

Besides the pleasant and popular orange and apple juices, Gerber offers a wide variety of delightful combination juices.

JUICE OF THE MONTH

Have you treated baby to the new Gerber Strained Orange-Apple-Banana Juice? Subtle, smile-provoking, downright delicious.

Indoor cooling systems

• If you shade baby's room against strong morning sunlight, he'll be cooler during his afternoon nap.

P.S. A snack of a cooling Gerber Juice is great for curing post-nap blues.

• Occasional tepid baths are welcome cooler-offers. (With a bit of baking soda to help curb prickly heat.) Brushing hair away from nape of neck also helps keep baby cool.

Dan Gerber footnote

"It may interest you to know that before oranges are picked for Gerber Juices, they are specially tested for sugar and acid content. When the sugar/acid ratio is just right, the flavor is at its peak; the vitamin-C content at its highest."

Note: Gerber prepares over 100 baby foods—infant formulas, cereals, strained and junior foods. Comfortable, durable babywear, too. We're proud to say:

The catfish that got away was probably a lot smaller than this 46-pounder.

OLD SHOVELFACE

AS AMERICAN AS APPLE PIE, THIS FISH REALLY CAUGHT ON

by ROBERT DEINDORFER

Arrangements to lease 500,000 acres of backland near Alexandria, La., for military maneuvers some time ago proceeded without incident—until a U.S. government agent approached a certain landowner for permission.

All of a sudden it wasn't a matter of money, or duration, or even any shell holes that might affect the future value of the land. As the property owner explained the situation to leasing agent Clarence B. Lent, it was much more serious than that—at least to him.

"In Kisatchie Bayou, which runs through a corner of my land, there's a catfish weighing over 30 pounds," he told Lent. "The hole in which he stays has got to be put off-limits. When that catfish is caught I expect to be on the other end of the line."

The farmer's concern helps prove a point few people would challenge: Old Shovelface is pretty special in America.

In bayous and ponds, rivers and lakes, anglers by the millions fish for the catfish and its kid brother, the bullhead, with rod and reel, cane poles, trotlines, jugs, hayhooks and sometimes nothing more than their own bare hands. They use everything from soap to green apples as bait, and they land whoppers up to 100 pounds without making headlines.

Whatever groceries they feed on, the catfish is a succulent, sweet-tasting fellow. In cities like Memphis, for example, fresh channel cat frequently bring a higher price than trout. And smalltown cafes beyond number confine their seafood strictly to catfish.

Few, if any, freshwater fish have a more unusual appearance. Bony plates armor the cat's thick, white-bellied, forktailed body and long, stringy whiskers, weak little eyes and a great crater of a mouth ornament its flat head. On seeing his first catfish a writer for the English humor magazine Punch commented that it seemed to be something more than a fish.

The Englishman put his finger on a blunt truth. The catfish is indeed something more than a fish. It's a gamester, a gargoyle, a meal, a stew, a nickname and even a political platform, not to mention an abiding part of our national folklore.

While few parents ever christen their new-born "Old Shovelface," it isn't long before hundreds of kids start answering to the nickname "Catfish." Among a host of sports celebrities who rejoice in the name are Georgia's old All-American end W. W. Smith, the Minnesota Twins' World Series pitching hero Jim Grant and umpire Bill Klem.

Then there is Catfish Row of the musical comedy Porgy and Bess and any number of actual ponds, streams, streets, neighborhoods, parks and often entire small townships that bear the name.

Throughout the Mississippi River basin practicing politicians regard the catfish as an important ally. Skinned and cleaned, dipped in flour and corn meal, sputtering in a pan of deep fat, the cat contributes to the election of innumerable sheriffs, mayors, state legislators and congressmen. And certainly a plate of fried catfish can taste suspiciously like good government.

The folklore concerning catfish is abundant, and many legends have at least an edge of truth to them.

ANOTHER DRACULA?

In rural cabins along the Alabama waterways, for example, some people believe that Old Shovelface walks the shore by night in search of chickens, rodents or even small babies to feed on. An old school friend of mine swore he watched a big cat swallow a dead squirrel on the bank of a Missouri river.

The fact is, America's 25 types of cat are definitely not ambulatory. But ichthyologists do claim that certain foreign species, among them an eel-shaped African catfish, have been known to crawl on dry land, using the rough surface of their pelvic fins to locomote.

The American legends of lunkers coming ashore for a fresh chicken probably grew out of the catfish's appetite, which happens to be downright prodigious. Old Shovelface feeds on literally everything down near the bottom, in fresh or brackish water, both day and night. In the Missouri Ozarks anglers bait their hooks with worms, nightcrawlers, cheese, apples, liver, corn, crawfish, frogs, clams, beef, field mice, grubs, sour potatoes or grapes.

"Just for the fun of it I put a fresh cherry on my hook, and guess what?" Carl Parker of St. Louis recalls—"I had myself four pounds of cat."

Out of professional curiosity the Iowa State Conservation Department inventoried the contents of some large cat during a postmortem several years ago. They found rags, newspapers, rubber heels, scraps of wood, burlap and even, in one vast Mississippi River oldtimer, a pair of ice tongs.

Fishing techniques vary as widely as the cat's diet. In states whose game laws allow it, addicts bait hooks with soap, tie the lines to gallon jugs and float them on a pond. When a jug gets to jiggling, they row over and pull up a fish.

Slim Alderson of Crabb, Tex., who used to support a family of nine by selling fresh-caught cat every week, managed to take two bull cats totaling 150 pounds on a heavy handline.

In northwest Arkansas frugal sportsmen see no reason to bother with bait at all. And in rural areas of Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi, grabblers go right down into rivers and ponds during the spring nesting season and pull 20- and 30-pounders out of spawning beds with their bare hands.

These and other novelty methods notwithstanding, the sport still packs a thrill for an angler using the traditional rod and reel.

Roy Groves of South Dakota got a special taste of catfishing kicks one memorable day in 1949. Fishing Dakota's James River, Groves strung a minnow on the hook and cast out his nylon line. All of a sudden the rod thumped in his hand, and line went winding off the reel. After five wearing minutes, Groves had the feeling that this was by far the biggest fish he had ever hooked. At the end of a long, arm-sore battle, he landed a catfish almost five feet long, 94½ pounds.

Yet despite the record books, it wasn't actually the biggest—not if you put any faith in fish stories.

FISH STORIES

Oldtimers in Georgia still talk of a 148-pounder, while two men in lower Illinois claim they seined a 195-pounder out of the Mississippi. The European catfish, or wels, has weighed in at more than 200 pounds. And a Georgia newspaperman writing over 50 years ago acknowledged the rumor that two night fishermen landed a great catfish of just under 150 pounds.

But according to eyewitnesses who insist they were there, nothing can quite match one overgrown cat that perished near the small town of Morrison, Mo., long ago. Early one morning a farmer walked down to inspect a heavy trotline he'd baited with a rancid ham the night before. As he stood there the line moved slowly back and forth, an awesome side of a fish showing in the water. Even with the assistance of three neighbors, it took two hours before a final heave on the line brought a 315-pound catfish heaving into the shallows.

It's little wonder that the cat has an impact all out of proportion to just another breed of fish. Along with everything else, it suits America's chronic sense of bigness.

But perhaps the most resounding tribute to Old Shovelface came about when several Texas colleges were wooing a prize high school basketball prospect named John Reynolds of Possum Walk. Wherever he went coaches and college officials proudly showed off the campus, the gymnasium, the fraternity houses and dormitories, and at least a few of them suggested he wouldn't have to worry much about spending money if he chose their school.

On the basis of a bit of enterprising personal research, however, assistant coach Shelby Metcalf of Texas A & M didn't even give Reynolds a sightsee of the campus when it came his turn. Instead, he packed him off to the nearby Brazos River, where the two of them caught a mess of channel catfish, which they cleaned and iced.

"I like your river," Reynolds told Metcalf later. "I believe I'll go to school here."

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jackie Kahane, born and raised in Montreal, is a delightful, glib leprechaun who's played most of the top nite spots in America for the past 15 years. Married, father of two daughters, a resident of New York, Jackie writes most of his own material, which he describes as "fresh, semiliterate, contemporary and clean, clean, clean." A small, energetic crew-cutted dynamo, Jackie says, "I eat, drink, breathe, talk, sing and live comedy, which is true of most comedians. The big difference with me, however, is that I not only think funny, I also think clean." Of late Kahane has been touring with singer Wayne Newton, playing the Flamingo in Las Vegas and Harrah's in Lake Tahoe, drawing great yaks with such jokes as these:

A woman entered a plane with a newborn infant in her arms. A drunk sat down next to her. He took one look at the baby and said, "Ma'am, I've never seen anything more repulsive in my life. Your baby is the ugliest thing I've ever set eyes on."

The mother, livid with rage, rang for the stewardess. "Miss," she said, "I've never been so insulted in my life. Either you get this obnoxious wretch away from me, or I'll sue the airline for every penny it has."

Diplomatically the stewardess led the drunk to another seat in the rear of the plane. Then she rushed back to the lady passenger. "I'm terribly sorry this had to happen," she explained. "Now you just relax. I'll bring you a hot cup of coffee and I'll dig up a banana for your monkey."

---

A little boy asked his father, "Daddy, where do I come from?" His father went on at great length about the birds and the bees. After 10 minutes of this dissertation, the youngster said, "Daddy! I can't understand why you're taking so long to answer such a simple question. Billy next door tells me he comes from Detroit. Where do I come from?"

---

It was on the second day of their honeymoon. The tired groom, weary but determined, shuffled from bedroom to kitchen. He prepared a sumptuous breakfast for his bride, carried it up on a tray, set it down on their bed. His young wife was overwhelmed by this display of consideration.

"Darling!" she said. "You're the most wonderful husband any girl could ask for. The tray is so pretty, and the food looks so yummy."

"Then you've seen what I've done?" the husband asked.

"Of course," said the bride. "Every little detail. Why?"

"Because," snapped the groom, "this is exactly how I want my breakfast served every morning from now on."

---

Two drunks followed a funeral procession all the way to the cemetery and took positions among the mourners. The minister closed his eulogy with, "As dust we come and as dust we go. As the Lord giveth, so the Lord taketh." The drunk turned to his ossified friend and said, "Well, you can't be fairer than that."

---

A beggar approached a back porch. "Madame," he said to the woman who answered his knock, "I'm awful hungry." Said the woman, "Would you mind too much having yesterday's soup?" The hobo said, "Not at all. That would suit me fine."

"Great!" said the woman. "You come back here tomorrow."

Two mother kangaroos were gossiping one afternoon. Cracked the first mother kangaroo to the second: "I sure hope it doesn't rain. I just can't stand that kid inside all day."

THE WORLD'S SMARTEST CAT

by LLOYD SHEARER

Six-year-old Siamese, Syn Cat, earns $1000 a week. Blue-eyed Syn was born in Ontario, Calif., and his fact sheet reads—height: six and one-eighth inches; weight: nine pounds, two ounces; length: 20 inches without tail, 30 inches with.

Owner Al Koehler found Syn at a pound, says the cat is the "smartest, most emotionally stable cat in the world," would like to find a Mrs. Syn.

HOLLYWOOD.

Any idea how many cats are born in this country each year? An estimated 50 million compared to an estimated 32 million dogs.

A dog may be man's best friend, as Sen. George West of Missouri claimed in 1876, but a cat is definitely America's number-one family pet. For every dog in a U.S. family, there are now 1.9 cats.

This information may reach you as a surprise, but to Walt Disney, the boy who never grew up, these statistics are old hat. A past master at bringing out the best in animals, Walt for years has been trying to elevate a cat to screen stardom. And now he's done it.

He's taken a 6-year-old Siamese, named him Syn Cat "because he synchronizes so well with everything," has starred him in two top money-making films, Incredible Journey and That Darn Cat.

In contrast to human beings who become screen stars, Syn Cat refuses to let success corrupt him. He remains so unspoiled, so modest and cooperative that Disney has ordered his story department to come up with a third vehicle for the feline. But good "cat scripts" aren't too easy to find these days.

That's Al Koehler's major worry. Koehler, 51, originally from Freeport, Ill., is a veteran animal trainer who three years ago bought Syn Cat for $2 from the Chafee Humane Association Pound in Ontario, Calif. "I am convinced," Koehler declares, "that Syn Cat is the smartest, most sociable, most emotionally stable cat in the world. And I want him to work while he's still in the prime of life. A cat like Syn comes along once or twice in a century, and I don't want to sound commercial, but if we're ever going to have a TV series in this country starring a cat, I think Syn Cat is the only one with the intelligence and know-how to fit that bill.

"I've been in the animal training business ever since I was 14," he declares. "I've had many animals in many films. But Syn is something special. This cat can almost reason."

"IN BUSINESS FOR HIMSELF"

Most cats are unintelligent compared to dogs. They show no sense of responsibility or eagerness to learn. Most of them are crafty, predatory, emotionally unstable, selfish, anarchistic, or as animal trainers put it, "A cat is generally in business for himself."

There are exceptions, of course, but these are so few as to make a cat capable of taking film direction a great rarity. Cats frighten easily, particularly in strange circumstances and surroundings, and only those with calm temperaments can be used for film work.

Syn Cat is the rare one who doesn't bolt and run at the sound of a gun or the honking of a horn or the scream of an actress. Stroked tenderly, given a bit of food as a reward for a good performance, he will hold still no matter what the action around him.

In training Syn Cat, Al Koehler sharply conditioned the animal's response to a bell. Cats boast a remarkable sense of hearing, and in Syn Cat's case this auditory sensitivity is outstanding. Figuratively he can hear a pin drop.

When a film gets underway, and a director wants Syn Cat to follow a designated course of action such as jumping from a ladder to a ledge and then down to a trash can, a miniature speaker is taped out of camera range to the ledge and another to the trash can. Syn Cat is placed on the ladder at the start of a sequence. The ledge bell is then rung, and Syn Cat jumps to the ledge in search of the sound. The trash can bell is next sounded, and Syn Cat leaps to the ground, rushes to the trash can searching for the bell lure.

"What I did with Syn Cat," explains Al Koehler, "is this: I taught him to stay, to lead, to run, climb, jump and walk not only by command but also by ringing bells in sequence. Then when a picture like That Darn Cat began, I recorded the sound of ringing bells on tape and hid miniature speakers in strategic spots. For example, when I wanted Syn to enter a room, I would reproduce the sound of a bell ringing just inside the door, and Syn would follow the sound with no trouble. And of course, I always rewarded him with a tidbit of food after each action to make it worth his while."

Training a cat is a tiring, painstaking job. Teaching him his name, how to follow his master in fast or slow time, how to obey commands—all this takes time, patience, effort, talent and love. Before Koehler puts Syn Cat in a film, he reads the script most carefully, rehearses the animal, accustoms him to particular noises such as automobile backfires, police sirens, door knocks.

When Syn Cat—he is insured for $2000, the maximum insurance accorded cats—reports for work, Koehler receives $1000 per week for his services. Syn Cat earned approximately $32,000 for his job in Incredible Journey, most of which was filmed in the Canadian northwest, and $10,000 for his stint in That Darn Cat.

Koehler would like to mate him, "providing we can find a Siamese with the same kind of calm, easygoing, pleasant temperament, a gal who's real friendly-like. But that isn't easy."

When Syn Cat isn't working, he lives in his own eight-foot pen behind Koehler's house. The pen is equipped with a 10-foot tree and a snazzy bed box, but Syn spends most of his days roaming inside the Koehler household. He's liked the house ever since Koehler brought him there from the animal shelter three years ago.

SYN MEETS KOEHLER

His previous owner was an unidentified lady in her 60's who tearfully gave him up to the shelter with the explanation that she had to move and cats were forbidden in the apartment house she was moving to. An hour after this lady turned Syn Cat in, a friend of Al Koehler's at the shelter phoned and told him about "a real sharp cat."

"I came down," Koehler recalls, "and they were kind enough to let me test the animal for temperament and reaction. He was very friendly, he didn't frighten easily, so I figured, 'For two bucks, what've I got to lose?' Needless to say, it's the best investment I ever made. Siamese cats on the average live 12, 14 years, which means Syn is ready for at least five more years of good hard work. Matter of fact, he loves to work, and in front of the cameras he's a real ham. All we need now is for a producer to come up with a good cat script. I don't want Syn applying for unemployment insurance."

Hayley Mills and Dean Jones costar in That Darn Cat, but vying for top billing is Syn Cat. Owner Koehler trained him for film by conditioning him to sound of bell.

"After weeks of pain in my back and hips, I tried DeWitt's Pills—got wonderful relief," says Mrs. R. Gardner, Waterloo, Iowa.

DeWitt's Pills act fast with a proven analgesic to relieve pain of backache. Their mild diuretic action helps to eliminate retained bladder wastes that can cause physical distress. If pain persists, see your doctor. DeWitt's Pills often succeed where others fail—quickly relieve minor muscle aches and pains, too. Insist on the genuine DeWitt's Pills. At all drug counters.

PARADE'S SPECIAL INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF LARGE MAIL VOLUME, PARADE CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES.

HOLIDAYS FOR WIVES. Every employed person in Norway is entitled to four weeks' holiday each year with pay. That's the law. And happily enough, it applies to housewives. They, too, are entitled to four weeks of vacation. It's all part of Norway's Holiday Act, which established the Housewives Holiday Fund. Here's how it works: Suppose a Norwegian housewife wants to get away from it all for a few weeks. Who will look after her children and household? The answer: the Housewives Relief, an organization that consists of well-trained women, specialists in child care and household management. Practically all communities in Norway are blessed with a branch of the Housewives Relief, financed by the local authorities. When a housewife gets fed up, she phones the Relief, applies for her state-guaranteed vacation, and the state provides an acceptable substitute.

MARRYING AMERICANS. In 1940 approximately 12% of all American women 30 to 34 years old were single. In 1960 only 6.9% were single. In 1966 an estimated 5% of women in that age bracket are single -- proving irrefutably that more girls at an earlier age are learning how to snare a husband.

NEW SUPER MISSILE. A new intercontinental ballistic missile (ICM) -- standing for Increased Capability Missile -- is being developed in this country. Its objective: to penetrate any existing or future enemy defense system. The missile will probably be equipped with a multiple warhead. This will divide into a number of smaller, independent missiles, each targeted into another area under individual guidance systems designed to avoid the most sophisticated radar tracking devices. Soviet Russia, which now possesses almost 300 ICBM's and fewer than 100 submarine-launched missiles, hopes to develop by 1970 a ballistic force capable of killing 120 million Americans. The U.S. nuclear kill-probability at this time is already double that figure. In any future U.S.-Russia nuclear war, the only victor will be death.

RATS & INDIA. A rat in India consumes five kilos of grain a year; 2.4 billion rats consume 12 million tons of grain, or the equivalent of all the aid in wheat being sent to famine-ridden India in 1966. These statistics have prompted the Indian government to renew its efforts to exterminate rats. But the results so far have been disappointing. The government is meeting with the indifference if not the hostility of 350 million Hindus, who push their respect for animal life to the absurd. The Hindus find it just as intolerable to exterminate a rat as to crush an ant. At Rajasthan, rats even have a temple to which the faithful bring bowls of rice every day, being careful not to get their toes bitten. The Hindus generate the same attitude toward monkeys, vultures and especially cows. At the last census there were 176 million cows in India, almost all of them reduced to unproductive skeletons wandering freely in the streets. Last week the city of New Delhi made efforts to organize a troop of "cowboys" to round up the wandering cows in the city -- but no gassing for these sacred animals. In India cows die in their own good time or in traffic accidents, which they frequently provoke. To remedy this social ill, the Indian government tried methods of contraception for cows, but with no better results than those in birth control for the human animal. In India, good year or bad year, the rate of increase of the human and cow population is at least 2%.

VACATIONLAND YUGOSLAVIA. The new Riviera of Europe is Yugoslavia's Dalmatian Coast. Last year 2.6 million tourists, including Sophia Loren, Frank Sinatra, Kirk Douglas, Gene Kelly and Doris Day, spent $100 million in hard cash in Tito-land. This year the Communist hosts plan to take in at least one-third more. Tourists and visitors from neutral Austria and Sweden as well as from NATO members Italy, Norway and Denmark may now enter the country without visas. But the expansion of the tourist trade has run into some practical problems. There are not enough suitable accommodations. According to the Belgrade tourist office, between now and 1970 Yugoslavia will need to provide at least 250,000 new hotel beds. The state can provide only 120,000 at the most -- and the gap of 130,000 will have to be filled by foreign and domestic capitalists. In 1963 Tito's government made small-scale capitalism possible. Private entrepreneurs received tax rebates and were allowed to employ up to five people. The result was a boom in handiworks and guest innkeeping. More than 4000 pensions and lodging houses were opened. In Zagreb alone, where the state has built only one new hotel in 20 years, 240 of these innkeepers set up shop. But when these petty capitalists earned too much, the state stepped in to filter off their profits in taxes.

CONTROVERSIAL STAR TELLS OF GIRLHOOD, HOLLYWOOD AND MARRIAGE

Elizabeth Taylor's Own Unvarnished Story

Elizabeth Taylor, now starring with Richard Burton in "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" has been simultaneously admired and attacked most of her life. In her book, ::Elizabeth Taylor: An Informal Memoir," she speaks openly, candidly and disarmingly about her career, her love affairs, her illnesses, her children, her "new life" with Richard Burton. This is the first of an eight-part series taken from the autobiography in which the controversial actress tells how she feels about herself.

By ELIZABETH TAYLOR
Women's News Service

LONDON—I had the most idyllic childhood in England. I really grew up in Kent on my godfather's estate, where my parents had a house. There were hundreds of acres to roam over and a farm of sorts.

My brother and I made pets of all the animals—rabbits, turtles, lambs, goats, chickens. It was my idea of real bliss. I was very small—3 when I was given a pony named Betty. The first time I got on her back — wearing a little organdy dress — she bucked me into a patch of stinging nettles. But they made me get right back on, and I hardly got off again till we left England.

* * * *

IN 1939, WHEN I was 7, we knew the war was coming. Mother and my dad, who was an art dealer in London, were advised to leave England, so we moved to Pacific Palisades near Hollywood and Dad opened a gallery.

Those years before I started acting were truly happy. But I wanted to be an actress—like my mother, who had been on the stage before she married.

I think I was probably born a ham. I was constricted by shyness—I still am—and acting meant I could be at ease behind somebody else's facade. And with my very high imagination I spent most of my time in deliberate daydreams—"Walter Mitty-ing"—which I still do now when I'm putting on makeup or doing my nails.

Sometimes I Walter Mitty about what I might have done, should have said. Or I write scenes, cast them with people I know or imaginary ones, and play out the plots as if I were the director.

ONE OF DAD'S fellow air-raid wardens was a producer named Sam Marx who was doing a film called "Lassie." It was almost finished except for perhaps 10 scenes. These required a little girl with an English accent.

I went down to the studio and pretended to pat an imaginary coolie on a bare sound stage. It was a snap for a Walter Mittying dog lover.

That film is notable to me mainly because I met its star, a little boy named Roddy McDowell who is

Air Traffic Woes Grow

United Press International

The spreading impact of the three-day old airlines strike shattered travel and vacation plans of thousands and reached out Saturday to touch the lives of persons who never get close to an airport.

Mail deliveries slowed. Embargoes were placed on air freight. The tourist and convention industry, particularly hotels and restaurants which cater to it, felt the pinch. Servicemen and dependants who often travel under orders and strict schedules were particularly affected.

Army Pvt. Gustavo Vasquez, for instance, planned to fly from Philadelphia to visit his mother in Puerto Rico before he left for duty in Viet Nam. He hoped to leave Friday but gave up hope of getting home by late Saturday and concentrated instead on transportation back to his outfit at Ft. Lewis.

Five Indianapolis policemen were worried about being docked for being late in reporting back to duty. They were left high and dry when the Shrine convention in San Francisco ended.

A circuit court judge attending the convention said "I'm going to call back and arrange for another judge to take over my calendar Monday."

Ticket-seekers lined up four and five deep at reservation counters of airlines not being struck.

Hotelmen at Miami Beach, Fla., said the strike would cause "partial or complete disaster" to its summer tourist business. The Chicago Convention Bureau was hard hit. Some 65,000 conventioneers had been expected in the city this weekend.

Postmaster General Lawrence F. O'Brien took emergency measures but said there will be serious delays in mail deliveries. At Chicago's giant post office officials ruled that only items stamped "air mail" would be sent by air. Normally, much ordinary mail goes by air as well.

Nonstruck airlines reported capacity bookings. Feeder airlines, railroads and buses also said they were much busier than usual. Surprisingly, crowds eased off at airports. Instead, persons seeking reservations jammed switchboards of operating airlines. But a number slept all night at Kennedy Airport in New York and O'Hare at Chicago.

Airlines Strikers Pressured by U.S.

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The Johnson administration Saturday put the striking machinists union under pressure to end its walkout against five major airlines as mediation efforts resumed amid gloomy comments about prospects for a quick settlement.

The pressure was exerted in a statement by two members of a three-man presidential emergency board that the strike was "unnecessary and unjustified." They urged the International Association of Machinists to end it.

Richard E. Neustadt, a Harvard University dean, and David Ginsburg, a Washington lawyer, said it was "inconceivable" the parties could not reach agreement "without delay" based on terms that the board recommended last month. Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., who headed the board, issued a similar statement Friday.

The administration pressure came as James J. Reynolds, assistant secretary of labor, began efforts to end the strike. He said following five hours of meetings that no significant progress had been made, and the talks were re-

No Sparring As NAACP Ends Parley

Convention Hints Wait-and-See On Black Power Move

Delegates to the 57th annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People concluded a week-long meeting in Los Angeles Saturday by carefully avoiding the highly explosive issue of "black power," the key to future unity in the civil rights movement.

Earlier in the convention, NAACP Executive Director Roy Wilkins had taken some strong jabs at the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) and the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE), as well as their rallying cry of "black power."

BUT THE DELEGATES seemed anxious to steer a neutral course for the time being. In a preamble to their resolutions, they skillfully skirted the words "black power."

Saturday, in an interview with The Independent, Press - Telegram, Wilkins sought to clarify his earlier remarks on "black power" and the NAACP's relationship to SNCC and CORE in order to dispel the impression that the association had reached the stage of an open rupture with the smaller activist groups.

His own position, he said, did not imply any summary break with the two other organizations. At the same time, however, he made it plain that any future cooperation between them would depend on a redefinition of the term to rule out any connotation of ethnic power.

The convention seemed to take the position that it would wait and see what

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union accused the United States Saturday of threatening Soviet merchant shipping in its bombing attacks on North Viet Nam. U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk, on his return home to Washington from Asia, dismissed the Russian protest note as "unnecessary."

Rusk called on the Soviet Union to bring a halt to the war and again welcomed proposals, most recently made by India, for a Geneva conference on Viet Nam.

He said: "Our planes have been hitting the exact targets they have been looking for, namely P.O.L. (petroleum installations). All that kind of talk by the Soviet Union is unnecessary. They are cochairman of the Geneva Conference. They can get together and call a conference and get this thing started toward a peaceful settlement."

THE RUSSIAN note of protest was handed in to the U.S. Embassy directing attention to American bombing raids on July 7 at the North Vietnamese port of Haiphong, according to Tass, the official Soviet press agency.

These raids "created a direct threat to Soviet merchant ships and the lives of Soviet seamen," the Foreign Ministry's note said.

Haiphong Estimate Way Off

WASHINGTON (AP)—The key North Vietnamese oil depot near Haiphong was hit much less severely than the U.S. government claimed after the first U.S. bombing strike there June 29, it was learned Saturday.

Pentagon sources said postattack reconnaissance photos showed the Haiphong complex suffered between 40 and 50% destruction, rather than the 80% claimed by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

The lower than announced destruction in the first raid is what prompted a second strike at Haiphong.

G/s Outwit Cong

SAIGON (UPI)—A U.S. armored column deliberately set out as "bait" Saturday to draw a Viet Cong ambush force of some 2,000 men out into the open near the Cambodian border. Then American planes, artillery and thousands of infantrymen promptly pounced on the Communists, killing 160 and driving the others back into the jungle.

American casualties were officially described as light in the battle that raged for four hours 60 miles north of Saigon after a Communist regiment fell into the daring trap laid by the U.S. Army's 1st Infantry Division.

Making up the bait was a column of tanks and armored personnel carriers of the 1st Division's 4th Cavalry Squadron.

The Communists, in classic guerrilla style, opened fire on the American column with mortars, recoiless rifles, and machine guns set up in trees as close as 30 feet from the tanks. De Puy's cavalrymen swung their 90mm cannon and 50-caliber machine guns on the Viet Cong. As soon as the Communists sprung their ambush De Puy called in U.S. air artillery strikes, poured in more armored and rushed up four battalions of infantrymen—some 3,200 men—to the scene.

Bright Outlook on War

WASHINGTON—Defense Secretary Robert McNamara took his turn Saturday in the administration's sustained celebration of progress in the war in Viet Nam.

Citing essentially the same indicators that other high officials had listed throughout the week, McNamara described himself as "cautiously optimistic" about the military situation. He returned Saturday from military consulations in

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION LOSES ITS 'SNOOPER' CREW

Lurid Sex Report on Calif. Teachers Backfires

By JIM McCAULEY
From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — A "classroom Kinsey report" on state investigations into alleged sexual misbehavior and other misconduct by certain California teachers has ignited a new Capitol controversy.

The report, distributed to legislative committees at least three times in the past year by the State Department of Education, backfired.

The 1966 legislature voted to strip the department of its three-man investigative force, and placed it instead under the State Criminal Identification and Investigation Bureau.

The "educational" investigators had been under criticism for their role in the state probe into a San Diego teacher's play, "A Cat Named Jesus," but the furor over the report lingers on.

Assemblyman Leo Ryan, D-South San Francisco, called it a "questionable document." Assemblyman Willie Brown Jr., D-San Francisco, also ripped into it. Brown deplored that it placed some instructors and ex-teachers in double jeopardy by rehashing their case publicly.

The controversial report identified the alleged offenders by name, then wrote up the account in style which specifically said they committed certain crimes — even in cases where subsequent notations indicated they had been acquitted in court.

The book-length report, distributed to legislators to justify retaining three investigators on the State Education Department payroll, gives lurid case-histories how:

— Eighty teachers and former teachers were arrested for sexual crimes, including 65 for homosexual offenses and five for prostitution.

— Twenty-two others got in trouble over thefts, burglaries and other offenses relating to money.

— Another 33 teachers faced licensed investigations over other things, including four for alleged Communist backgrounds, two for refusing to sign a loyalty oath, three for Selective Service violations, two for alcoholism and eight for mental instability.

— Some of the sexual offenses involved students also.

— One teacher romped nude along a public beach in Southern California.

— A male teacher took three minor girls on a beer-drinking spree in Reno.

— A psychology teacher asked his students a series of personal questions, including: Have you ever had sexual intercourse?

The report involved case history complaints on 135 teachers as compiled over a 3½-year period. They obviously were the most sensational ones in the investigation files. California has more than 120,000 classroom teachers.

Many of the teachers under fire since have lost their credentials, though some still presumably are in the classrooms.

ARTHUR KROCK:

LBJ News Conference Is Revising Art of War

WASHINGTON — The bombing of the chief industrial components of the war-making potential of North Viet Nam is not the only shift of tactics in President Johnson's pursuit of his immediate objective to halt world Communism territorial expansion at the borders of South Viet Nam. Another shift is the resort to official news conferences to try out experiments in the strategies of war.

KROCK

Since news conferences became a fixed institution of the U.S. government, they have regularly been used to stimulate a favorable public opinion of its record, and to forestall spreading dissent when an act or policy has come under critical attack. But it is an innovation to make mass press interviews a vehicle of waging war, as the President did on June 18 and July 5. He used the first presumably to soften the international and domestic impact of the attacks on Hanoi and Haiphong that soon followed. He used the second news conference to create a psychology of certain victory, with the purpose of quieting some critics at home and discouraging expanded aid to the enemy by Moscow and Peking.

His pronouncements on both these occasions departed from maxims which have been scrupulously followed by governments in the conduct of war. One is military: never increase the risk potential in a complete tactical change by even an implication to the enemy that it is impending. The second, which is deeply imprinted in both military and diplomatic manuals, is always to leave an adversary room for a face-saving retreat from battle to negotiation in good faith, particularly when negotiation is a stated policy objective of the other adversary. The value of the first axiom, in terms of limiting casualtiese, has been repeatedly demonstrated in war. The value of the second is a recurrent fact of history.

Nevertheless, the President, after what surely was careful deliberation, virtually warned the North Vietnamese on June 18 of the imminent end of the period in which he had spared the vital enemy supply plants adjacent to the urban masses of Hanoi and Haiphong. "We must," he said, "continue to raise the cost of aggression at its source," a word which had only one meaning in the context.

The light resistance the bombers encountered has been accounted for in some quarters as evidence that the Hanoi government, not finding it credible that advance notice would even be implied, dismissed the President's hint to the news conference as merely another threat which once again would not materialize. Whether or not this is the explanation, the President's innovation in the strategy of war—implying a change in military tactics before it was made and using a medium of communication which assured worldwide publicity—did not result in the battle casualties whose prevention is the purpose of the military convention he disregarded.

Johnson may have as gratifying results from his rejection of the other rule derived from long military and diplomatic experience: say and do nothing likely to stiffen or revive the combat effort of a discouraged enemy. Only a few years ago the allies in World War II paid an enormous penalty in casualties for President Roosevelt's demand of "unconditional surrender" at a time when the dimming prospect of military victory was producing internal pressures on the high command of the enemy for a negotiated peace. But the precedent is recent enough to justify some apprehension that history may repeat itself.

This dubious venture in propaganda as active military strategy, projected through the unusual channel of a news conference, was initiated by the President at his Texas ranch, July 5, with the following comment: "Their record (U.S. Armed Forces in the Vietnamese war) has been outstanding. Their results are very good. Our diplomatic sources indicate that the opposing forces no longer expect a military victory in Viet Nam."

He immediately added he was well "aware of the dangers of speculation," apparently feeling it advisable to warn that the encouraging "indications from . . . diplomatic sources" should be evaluated as just speculation. But, if this was an impulse of caution, in remembrance that similar remarks had acted as a goad of renewed enemy resistance, the impulse was of very temporary duration. The next day Under Secretary of State George Ball called a news conference to promote credence in the reports the President had briefly cited.

In this administration, under-secretaries, and even their chiefs, do not summon news conferences to expatiate on a presidential theme without specific direction. So it was generally taken for granted that Johnson had given Ball the assignment.

After putting more emphasis than the President had on the "reports" of war weariness and a sense of defeat at Hanoi, Ball speculated at great length on his own reasons for feeling that North Viet Nam should have abandoned hope of military victory some time ago. The intent was plainly to advance the psychological pressure which is designed to bring Hanoi to meaningful negotiation. But the question remains whether portraying the foe as already beaten and aware of that will convince him that only by prolonging the war can he hope to avert the necessity of consenting to a Carthaginian peace.

U.S. Must Avoid Creation of Empire in Southeast Asia

PARIS — It is time to concern ourselves with a profound but far from evident danger, the danger that the United States might unconsciously create an empire in Southeast Asia. At whatever cost we must avoid any absent-minded imperialism that would not only contradict America's national philosophy but could lead to nothing but trouble. Our object is to win a war, not territory.

In political planning Washington should avoid two paths, either of which might seem militarily convenient. The U.S. must be careful not to assume too great an influence in small countries like Thailand or South Viet Nam and thereby without knowing it, menace them with neo-colonial dependence. And not deceive ourselves into thinking that heavy investment in huge bases that have been needed for war should commit us to exaggerated rights of tenure once the threat passes.

Of course, American base agreements need not necessarily affect the political or diplomatic attitude of a host country. U.S. base rights in the Philippines, Saudi Arabia or Pakistan have produced litle discernible influence on their policy nor can one argue that continued U.S. presence in Castro's Cuba a faithful satellite.

Nevertheless, it is time to contemplate the future of U.S. bases and influence in Southeast Asia. There is a growing American military presence in Thailand (it should reach 30,000 before long) and a vast U.S. army plus ancillary corps in South Viet Nam.

U.S. airbases in Thailand have been developed at Udorn, Nakhon Phanom, Udon, Korat, Takhli and Don Muang, but by far the most important installation is the massive sea-air complex at Sattahip. The U.S. investment in Thailand's permanent military infrastructure comes to hundreds of millions of dollars.

* * * *

THE COST of permanent infrastructure in South Viet Nam exceeds $1 billion, more than half the country's annual gross national product. To erect a dike against aggression the U.S. has invested enormous sums on Asian mainland installations. Only a few of these, like Sattahip in Thailand or Camranh Bay in Viet Nam, can play a useful future peacetime role.

When stability eventually supervenes, Washington should take special pains not to be tempted to protect this huge investment by seeking a kind of imperial status in Southeast Asia. Both our interests and those of our hosts dictate that we yield most of these fixtures when the proper time comes. However, for a few such as Sattahip or Camranh, it might be desirable for the U.S. to negotiate limited rights or emergency return privileges.

New York Times Service

Once the Viet Nam fighting ends the U.S. will have the chance to prove it has no conscious intention of capitalizing on its wealth and power by creating a new empire and also that it has enough wisdom and self control to avoid doing so unconsciously. Washington seems convinced that ultimate peace in Southeast Asia can be maintained through SEATO and its codicils without any large U.S. military presence.

* * * *

EVEN today some U.S. policy makers look forward to expanding SEATO into a Pacific security alliance linked with ANZUS (the Australian, New Zealand, U.S. security pact) and also linked with our Japanese security treaty. Such prospects are, of course, still a long way off. Japan remains reluctant to play a strategic role.

Nevertheless Washington suspects that Peking is starting to realize the U.S. really does want to withdraw its physical presence from mainland Asia when the situation permits. China may some day come around to favoring negotiations with this goal in mind although Hanoi might then show a certain eagerness to keep U.S. strength in the vicinity. All Vietnamese, northern and southern, share historical distrust for Chinese imperial ambitions.

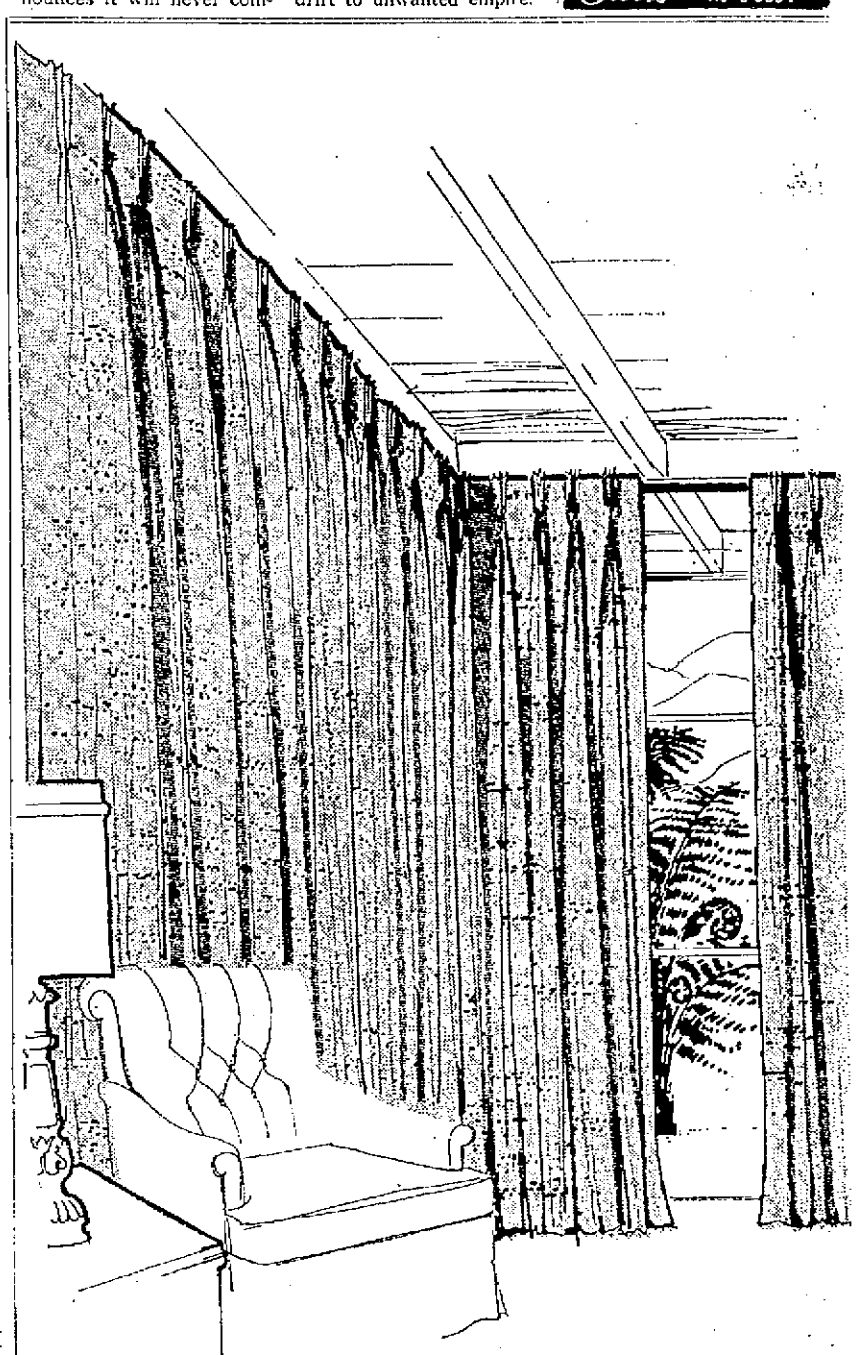

President Johnson has given thought to Southeast Asia's peacetime economic future as shown by his stymied plan for the Mekong Valley. But Washington must also soon start studying the area's eventual political pattern. Should this be a neutral one?

An evidently acceptable form of neutrality has already developed in Singapore, despite its military base lease to Britain, and is developing in Indonesia.

* * * *

THESE trends might some day come to resemble the kind of neutrality practiced by India. Such neutrality, founded on true independence and willingness to oppose external aggression, could certainly recommend itself as an ultimate Southeast Asian solution compatible with U.S. interests.

One may fairly be accused of counting unhatched chickens when speculating about peace amidst the rigors of an unwon war. Hanoi still announces it will never compromise and Peking mutters lurid threats. Yet sometimes in Asia things change swiftly. We would do well to plan for the future and thereby insure against any absent-minded drift to unwanted empire.

JAMES RESTON:

Congress Clings to Creaky Status Quo

WASHINGTON—All the institutions of America—political, religious, commercial, educational—are having trouble these days adjusting to the changes of the age, but none is making less progress than the Congress of the United States.

It is not only rooted in the past, but organized to perpetuate the past. The executive branch of the federal government, the big corporations, the churches, and the universities have all organized themselves to encourage the advancement of younger men and women, but the Congress, and especially the Senate, is still going against the trend, still discouraging youth and protecting age, and steadily losing power and authority to the President in the process.

RESTON

The Democratic primary election in Virginia Tuesday illustrates the point. It is being advertised as a battle against the Byrd machine, and in some ways it is, but the two closest races are against Sen. Willis Robertson, 78, and Rep. Howard Smith, 83, chairman of the powerful House Rules Committee. So the main issue is not so much the Byrd machine as age itself.

Sen. Harry Byrd Jr., is seeking election to the seat occupied by his famous conservative father, now desperately ill, but he does not control his father's political organization, and he has the energy to carry on his father's work if he beats Armistead Boothe in the primary.

THE SMITH and Robertson campaigns are somewhat different. They are arguing that age is power, because service in the Congress gives them seniority and has moved Robertson into the chairmanship of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, and Smith into the chairmanship of the rules committee. Vote for us, they say, not because we will move with the trend of the times, but because we have enough power in our committees to oppose the trend of the times.

It is a powerful argument under present circumstances. State Sen. William B. Spong Jr., a 45-year-old moderate running against Robertson, and George C. Rawlings Jr., a much more liberal 44-year-old from Fredericksburg opposing Smith, have had trouble dealing with it. The conservative elements in the state, including the bankers and most of the newspapers, are against them, but the question in this election is what is in the interests of Virginia in the long run?

The question in the Virginia election is whether it is going with the deeper tides of the nation or whether it is going to oppose them, whether it is going with the past and the old, or with the future and the young. By the 1968 election, the average age of the American electorate will be down to 27, and in the next generation, the majority of the population will get increasingly younger.

The U.S. Senate Republican policy committee, headed by Sen. Bourke Hickenlooper, R-Iowa, a political ally of the senior Byrd, put out a report this weekend arguing that the political future in America lies with the candidates who kept in touch with the young.

The report noted that in the next 20 years, the people in America over 65 will increase by about 7 million, those between 35 and 65 by less than 11 million, but those between 20 and 34 by 25 million and those under 20 by 35 million.

"The center of our political stage," the report quoted Peter Drucker, the historian and economist, as saying, "is now being taken over by a new power group—a professional, technical, and managerial class; very young, affluent, used to great job security, and highly educated. It will soon replace the old power centers — labor, the farm bloc, and big business, in the old fashioned sense of of that term.

* * * *

"AROUND THIS NEW power center, tomorrow's majority and tomorrow's concensus about the new issues will have to be built."

The Virginia primary is perhaps the most interesting in the nation this year because it will indicate whether the state is going with the old power centers or moving toward the new. This is not a question of moving radically to the left, for both Spong, who opposes Robertson, and Rawling who opposes Jud Smith, are moderates, about half way between their opponents and the national trend.

All the powerful institutions of the state of Virginia and of Washington, however, are against them. All the elders of the House and Senate are supporting Robertson and Smith — to say nothing of the wealthy interests of the state and nation — and even the secretary of the treasury, Henry H. Fowler, a Virginian, has come into the primary to back the status quo and oppose the rise of the young moderates.

Beauty Pageant Dates for 1967 Slated Feb. 7-18

The International Beauty Congress will be held here Feb. 7-18, it was announced Saturday by James A. Willingham, president of the civic group sponsoring the event.

Earlier this year, Willingham announced that the finals of the contest to select Miss United States and Miss International would move to a winter date instead of this August as originally planned.

The new dates were selected on the basis of a survey made by pageant director Wayne Dallard. Dallard pointed out that the February date will spotlight the Long Beach pageant as the first beauty event on the calendar each year.

* * * *

DALLARD SAID other advantages of the winter show include removal of the pageant from the summer log-jam of beauty events, wider press interest because of the timing and greater availability of air transportation during the off-peak season.

Preliminary events to select candidates in the United States and foreign countries continue as scheduled this year through November. The present reigning queens retain their titles until the finals here in February.

HIROKO SASAKI

Ingrid "Fiffi" Finger of West Germany is the current Miss International Beauty and Gail Karen Krielow of Cleveland holds the title Miss United States.

NEWEST CONTENDER for Miss International Beauty of 1967 is Hiroko Sasaki, 23, winner of the Miss Japan title in Tokyo. Australia, Colombia and Uruguay have also selected candidates. Franchises for this year's preliminary contests have been signed with sponsors in 40 foreign countries.

A total of 35 franchises have been signed for United States preliminaries, with another 12 expected to become official before the season closes. Missouri, New Mexico, Nevada and Pennsylvania candidates have been chosen to date.

The Long Beach-based beauty pageant has attracted worldwide attention since 1952. Dallard's study indicates the presentation earlier in the year will provide even greater appeal, nationally and internationally.

Surveyor 'Cools It,' Fights On

PASADENA (UPI)—America's Surveyor spacecraft on the moon, a gallant little guy with brain and heart of cables and transistors, fought a stubborn battle Saturday to stay alive for Science.

"We don't know what's going on," admitted a baffled spokesman for the California Institute of Technology's Jet Propulsion Laboratory here.

Scientists Friday reported that Surveyor was near death because the temperature of its battery rose to its design limit of 140 degrees fahrenheit.

* * * *

"WE THOUGHT IT would be dead Friday night," said a JPL spokesman early Saturday. "It could last for several days or it could fail in the next hour or two. It's one of those things you can't tell."

However, by 2 p.m. PDT Saturday the battery temperature had cooled to about 130 degrees. Scientists moved Surveyor's solar panel slightly to absorb energy from the sun.

As a result of this movement, Surveyor's battery was reported "getting a slight charge" from the Sun's energy.

"We don't know what to think," the JPL spokesman said. "If the temperature gets below 125 degrees — below normal operating range — we will continue to adjust the solar panels. If it stays this way, we may start taking pictures again, possibly Tuesday morning."

Should Surveyor live until Wednesday and its cameras resume functioning, some spectacular pictures of the sun disappearing over the moon's horizon might be taken next Wednesday night with the onset of the lunar sunset, scientists said.

The 620-pound, three-legged spacecraft, which survived temperatures of 260 degrees below zero during a two-week lunar night, was stricken Friday with rising battery temperatures that threatened to destroy is power center at any moment.

Teen Brothers Fly Coast-to-Coast

A 23-year-old bird soared from the sky Saturday afternoon as Capistranans looked skyward, but it wasn't the return of the legendary swallows.

It marked the end of a week-long coast-to-coast flight by two teen-age brothers in a 23-year-old Piper Cub plane they rebuilt for their journey.

Kern and Rinker Buck of New Vernon, N.J., landed their small craft at San Juan Capistrano Airport at 3 p.m. sharp. The teen-agers were greeted by their aunt and uncle, two cousins, and Kern Buck's 16-year-old girl friend, Carol Brantley.

The young pilots said they experienced no trouble during the flight.

The boys averaged 85 miles an hour and logged 600 miles per day on the cross-country jaunt. At one point when they had to cross mountain ranges that were 11,000 feet high, the young Bucks had to navigate the craft through mountain passes. The plane's ceiling is 10,000 feet.

The airport-touchdown marked the midway point of eight months of work for the two teen-agers. They worked with their father rebuilding the craft and earned $200 apiece at odd jobs to pay for the flight.

Happy Comic

Comedian Jackie Mason, elated over a court ruling upholding the basis of his $3 million libel and slander suit against television host Ed Sullivan, Saturday said in Las Vegas, he is willing to drop the action if he is asked back on the show.

"I want to vindicate myself before the whole country by appearing on his show again," Mason said. "If he agreed to have me reappear on his show I'd drop the matter."

Sullivan had accused Mason, a former practicing rabbi in Weldon, S.C., of making obscene gestures with his hand. Mason contended he was only responding to Sullivan's finger signals indicating the time he had left.

Reunited

Four years of frustration and heartache ended Saturday for Haiss Yuan and his wife, Jenner, when they were reunited in Tulsa, Okla., with the little girl they had been forced to leave in Formosa when they immigrated to the United States.

Yuan clutched his daughter tightly in his arms and broke into sobs when he saw her for the first time since she was 20 days old. Occasionally, he reached a hand up and gently ruffled her hair.

The little girl, Peggy, who's barely 4 years old, appeared tired and confused by the many strangers around her and cried softly from time to time.

Heads Lions

Edward M. Lindsey of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., a furniture manufacturer, Methodist lay reader and former mayor, was elected in New York Saturday to head the 800,000-member Lions International.

Lindsey, 50, was chosen without opposition to succeed Dr. Walter H. Campbell of Miami Beach, Fla.

Rhine Maiden

Lynda Bird Johnson ended her visit to Western Germany Saturday. She visited ruins and medieval monuments but persistent afternoon showers forced her to cut short her tour.

March Urges DiGiorgi Boycott

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Praised by Sen. Robert Kennedy, D-N.Y., and given a hand by Harry Bridges' longshore union, the National Farm Workers Association paraded up Market Street Saturday urging boycott of a big food firm which does not recognize it.

The 1,000 in the march included a group from the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union carrying cargo hooks.

The NFWA called for the boycott against DiGiorgio Corp. after DiGiorgio said its grape pickers in the Central Valley had no desire to be represented by that union. When NFWA pickets showed up recently on the waterfront in an effort to prevent loading DiGiorgio products on ships, Bridges men refused to cross the lines. A court order later erased the picket line.

* * * *

BEFORE THE parade, John Raymond of the NFWA march committee sent appeals to persons of prominence asking for support.

Kennedy replied:

"I want to let you know again of my continuing support of the cause of bettering the conditions of farm workers in California and around the country. Farm workers and particularly migratory farm workers have been left behind as our country has achieved record prosperity.

"I am advised that the arbitrator assigned by Gov. Brown to look into the DiGiorgio election is making some progress toward the resolution of that problem."

Students Parade With Farm Laborers in Texas

RIO GRANDE CITY, Tex. (UPI) — A half-day's march down sunbaked Texas Highway 83, tall, gangling Michael Holcombe, 20, used an ointment to plaster gauze strips to his beet-red nose.

Holcomb an another "Anglo," Susan Baker, 22, a tall, University of Oregon coed with brown hair up in a bun, marched puffing beside some 100 Latin-American farm laborers, who chatted cheerfully as they effortlessly covered the miles.

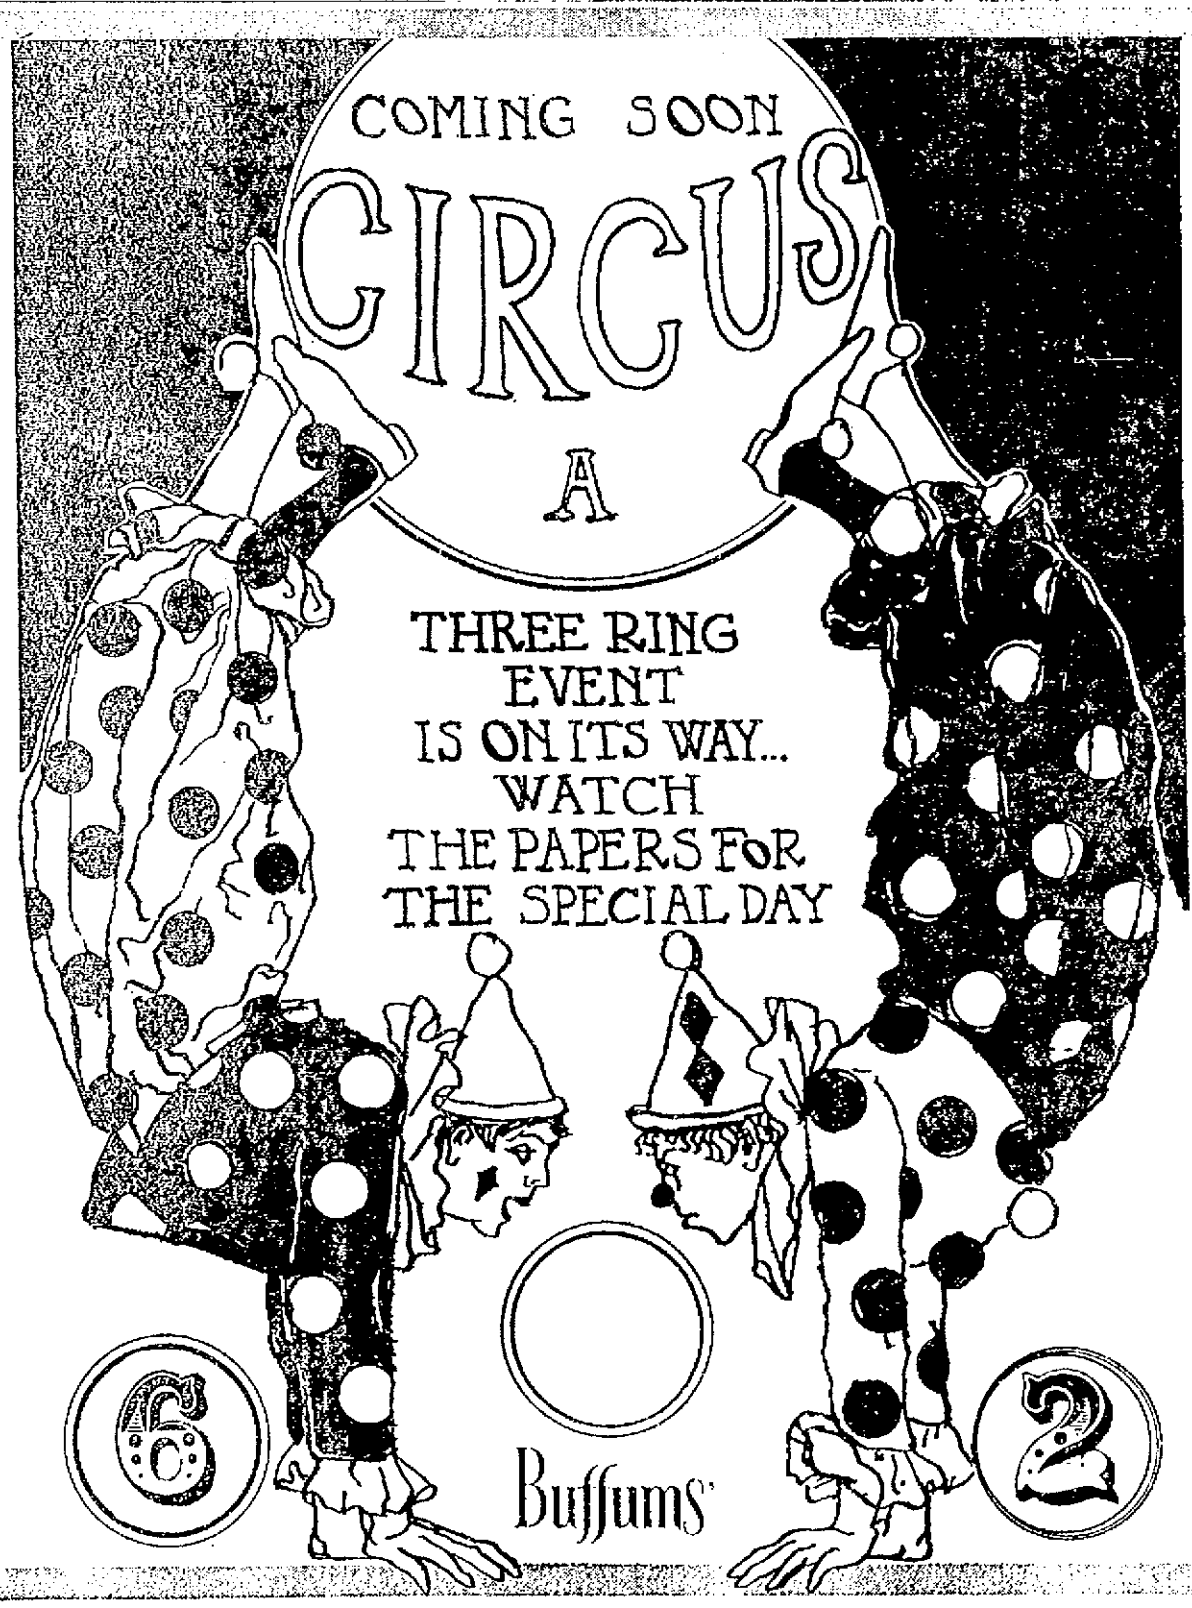

The two are student apprentices for the National Farm Workers Association.

Holcomb, a student at Austin Peay State College, Clarksville, Tenn., said he and five others were renting "one of less than half the houses in Rio Grande City that have indoor plumbing."

Miss Baker, who participated in the Delano, Calif., grape pickers strike, said she was staying with strike leader Eugene Nelson and his wife temporarily, but was "really without a permanent place to stay."

She said she hadn't written her father, Bill Baker, a Ketchikan, Alaska, radio announcer, in quite a while, "but if he reads about the strike, maybe he'll know where I am."

They marched in a five-day, 61-mile trek last week with farm laborers of Starr County, Texas, who had a per capita income of $534 in 1960, lowest in the state.

Liz Taylor Tells Her Unvarnished Story

now just about my oldest friend—and really the perfect friend.

M-G-M had owned "National Velvet" for a long time and every once in a while they'd sort of dust it off. But they either couldn't find somebody of the right size or somebody who rode or somebody with an English accent. They began casting glances in my direction. But when I came down to the producer's office, he saw that though I was 11, I was only as tall as a 6-year-old. He measured me on the wall and made a line with a pencil.

* * * *

HE SAID, "I'M sorry, honey, but you're just too short. No one would ever believe that you could get in through the jockey's weighing room. You look like a child."

And I said, "Well, I'll grow up." He laughed and patted me on the head.

But I was absolutely determined. "National Velvet" was really me. I started riding every morning for an hour and a half before school.

For lunch I'd have steaks and salads, then swim and do exercises to stretch myself.

In three months I'd grown somewhat. I went back to see the producer and said, "I did grow."

He said, "You do look taller."

He still had the little mark by the side of the door, and I had grown three inches. He kept that mark on the wall for years. And I got the part.

To do "National Velvet" I signed a contract with M-G-M — and became their chattel until I did "Cleopatra."

* * * *

THE STUDIO THEN was still in its super era and was truly a most remarkable machine. L. B. Mayer and M-G-M created stars out of tinsel, cellophane and newspapers. Their tremendous publicity staff built the background, built the personality, built the character.

But all the stars were born and built and died more or less at the whim of L. B. Mayer, who was absolute dictator of the studio—and of a good deal of Hollywood to boot.

But I admit that all this time when I was young, M-G-M was a very exciting place to be. I've always loved movie stars, loved movies, loved everything about them except doing them.

There were two other girls on the block where I lived and we called ourselves the Three Musketeers.

We'd make up plays for ourselves and make up stories, and of course I was really IN, because I could say, "Well, I know Van Johnson, so Van Johnson is going to be my boy friend today. But I'll let you have him tomorrow."

God! That seems so long ago, so sweet, so clean.

* * * *

I HAD ALWAYS had a very strict and proper upbringing —and absolutely necessary it was, living the existence I did.

The irony is that the morality I learned at home required marriage. I couldn't just have an affair. So I got married all those times, and now I'm accused of being a scarlet woman.

I guess I never gave myself the time to find out whether a thing was love or infatuation. I always chose to think I was in love. I didn't know.

I didn't have my own yardstick. But I believed that love was synonymous with marriage.

So I got engaged—to Nick Hilton—at barely 18. I really did think that being married would be like living in a little white cottage with a little picket fence and little roses and little me in an organdy apron.

The wedding was like a fairy tale. It was perfect. I was terrified. So was Nick—I remember taking out my handkerchief and mopping the sweat off his face during the ceremony.

* * * *

THERE WAS A BIG reception and, for the first time in my life, I had two glasses of champagne. Then the time came to leave and I had a third glass of champagne.

And I became more and more afraid.

The honeymoon in Europe lasted two weeks. I should say the marriage lasted for two weeks. Then came, yours sincerely, disillusionment — rude and brutal.

There's nothing more to be said about that first marriage. It scared me and left me with horrible memories.

I am sure this was also true for Nick. But the marriage has nothing to do with my life now; I have no children by him. He's not part of my life and I'm no part of his life.

Marrying Nick had been so easy, so like a fairy tale. Everything was lovely; my parents, everyone approved—too perfect, too picturesque, too ideal.

* * * *

WHEN I LEFT HIM, it was the first divorce in our family, and I was totally crushed. I was afraid of sympathy or understanding from anybody.

I was afraid of myself. I was afraid to go back to Nick. I was afraid of my total failure. I was afraid of the disappointment to my parents and his parents. I was afraid to be alone.

I guess I was afraid of growing up.

But I didn't go home, back to the warm nest. I moved into an apartment with my stand-in—trying to stand on my own and not be afraid!

When I kicked myself out of the nest and got married, I had been vaguely aware that I ought to have been more self-sufficient.

But it really cracked home when I realized I had been a virgin not only physically but mentally. I mean I didn't know ANYTHING—like cooking a meal, like not being sloppy, not throwing your clothes on the floor and expecting somebody else to hang them up.

I didn't like to give orders to servants—it made me feel funny—but I was incapable of doing anything for myself or for other people.

* * * *

AT THE FIRST SIGN of trouble between Nick and me I didn't have one clue how to cope with it.

When I divorced Nick, I said on the witness stand that he had told me to go to hell, and insulted my mother and insulted me in front of friends. I could have gone into such a multitude of really horrendous things to make what I was doing understandable.

But I didn't want anything from Nick. I didn't want alimony. I certainly didn't want to hurt him.

I didn't want to be the wronged woman. The hurt that had happened was too private. Ever since I'd been 12, I'd been a child star with no privacy, and very possessive about my own thoughts and problems.

Until the separation I told practically nobody that there were problems, to say nothing of the nature of the problems.

Pick Panel to Honor Designers

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A seven-member jury on good design and beauty was appointed Saturday by Gov. Edmund G. Brown to honor outstanding architecture, engineering and other developments in the state.

Architect Nathaniel Owings of Big Sur was appointed chairman of the governor's panel. Brown said he hopes to start making annual awards in 1967.

Other members of the jury are Harry Ashmore, Pulitzer prize-winning editor and now at the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions in Santa Barbara; Allan Temko of the University of California at Berkeley; Dean Sam T. Southern California architectural school; Cesar Pelli, design engineer; T. Y. Lin, University of California civil engineering professor, and Mrs. Helen Reynolds, president of the California Roadside Council.

Cooking Contest in Rationed Cuba

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Housewives in Cuba — one of the few countries in the western hemisphere where food is rationed—have been invited to take part in a cooking contest.

Havana Radio, monitored in Miami, said the contest would be sponsored by the Cuban Women's Federation.

A federation spokesman said any ingredients could be used . . . except rice.

No explanation was given for the ban on rice but rations have been cut since Communist China decided to reduce shipments to Cuba.

HARD-NOSED ABOUT SOFT BRAKES

Flood of Car Gripes Released by Hearings

By CARL P. LEUBSDORF

WASHINGTON (AP) — People like to tell their troubles to congressmen, and now they're writing in to complain about their automobiles.

Hundreds of letters have poured in to congressional committees and individual congressmen as an outgrowth of auto safety hearings by five Senate and House committees or subcommittees over the past year.

Some people seek advice on what kind of car to get. Others are angry either because their autos aren't working properly or because of what they term refusal of auto companies to correct the defects.

"I have only limited confidence in the brakes for I fear one day they will not work at all," one man wrote. He said his brakes were soft and that despite repeated trips to the dealer's repair shop they weren't improved.

Some writers gripe about their car's design. "The front seat is so low that visibility over the hood is severely restricted," one wrote to the manufacturer.

In sending a copy of this letter to a congressional committee, he said "it is not to force your hand but rather (to) assist the committee in its efforts to bring about safer automobiles."

Another man reported that his car needed transmission work three times in 17 months—the first time a week after he bought it.

Gemini Pilots Blind at Liftoff; Want—Won't Get Sunglasses

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — When the Gemini 9 astronauts returned from their three-day mission last month, they had a suggestion for future astronauts —wear sunglasses during liftoff.

It was revealed for the first time Saturday that the astronauts had been blinded by the sun beaming into their cockpit during much of the critical liftoff period. The astronauts—Lt. Col. Thomas P. Stafford of the Air Force and Comdr. Eugene A. Cernan of the Navy — were launched June 3 and landed June 6.

The official description of their flight recorded soon after return has not been released to the public. But sources at Cape Kennedy, Fla., disclosed portions of the debriefing Saturday.

The Gemini 9 launching was the first to occur close to noon. For more than two minutes after liftoff, the astronauts could not read their control gauges and dials. They could not have seen a warning light if it had flashed on.

* * * *

IF THERE HAD been an emergency, they reported in their debriefing, they might not have known in time to take action.

The sun, Cernan reported, "just wiped out your whole cockpit. A correction would be the possibility of wearing sunglasses."

The advice will likely go unheeded, the space agency said, because it is impossible to wear sunglasses under the helmets.

But an engineer at the manned spacecraft center in Houston said that as a result consideration was being given to outfitting the outside of spacecraft windows with tinted coverings. These would be used only on launchings when the sun could be a serious problem. The coverings would be sprung free of the windows once the craft was in orbit.

The Gemini 9 astronauts, also reported that their splashdown, the most accurate ever made by American pilots, was a head-jerking experience. Stafford, who had flown before on Gemini 6, called it "by far the worst impact I have ever experienced in my life."

THE NEXT Gemini mission—Gemini 10—is scheduled to be launched July 18.

Overconfidence 'Great' Reagan Peril--Parkinson

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Dr. Gaylord B. Parkinson, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, said Saturday there is a "great danger of overconfidence" among California Republicans regarding Ronald Reagan's chances to be elected governor in November.

"I'm pragmatic," Parkinson told an executive committee meeting in San Francisco.

"Sure, the polls show Reagan ahead right now, but it's the election that counts and (Gov. Edward G.) Brown is working hard to improve his public image."

The Republican state chairman said he agreed with Frank Nicol of San Diego, Republican state registration chairman, that the GOP must win the "registration race" in order to gain the governorship.

Nicol reported earlier that a spring Republican registration drive narrowed the margin of registered Democrats over Republicans to 57.1% for the Democrats and 39.8% for the GOP.

"It's not good enough," Nicol said. "We've got to register 700,000 more Republicans by Sept. 15, the closing date for official registration."

Parkinson told newsmen following the executive committee meeting that he believed the "other key" to a Republican victory in November is winning over the heavy vote which went to Los Angeles Mayor Samuel W. Yorty, who opposed Brown in the June primary.

"I personally believe the Yorty vote, particularly in Northern California, was an anti-Brown vote," Parkinson said, "but I don't want to predict how it will go in November. I want to see it before I count it as ours."

He said the GOP platform committee, which meets Aug. 6 in Sacramento, "may well" draft a plank condemning extremism. However, Parkinson said, "it must include the far left as well as the so-called Republican extremism groups. It's got to include the Americans for Democratic Action, the California Democratic Committee and the other groups that support Brown."

FENCES IN DISREPAIR

Key County Cuts Johnson, But Good

By DONALD JANSON

New York Times Service

AYRSHIRE, Iowa —President Johnson has acres of fence-mending to do in the next two years to be re-elected, unless Iowa's political weathervane is out of whack for the first time.

The bellwether is Palo Alto County, one of five in the nation that has been recorded on the winning side in every presidential election this century. It gave the President a whopping 2-to-1 margin over Barry Goldwater in 1964.

A just-completed survey of voter sentiment showed disenchantment with the President so great that the country might go Republican if a presidential election were to be held now. Johnson has lost support here because of the war in Viet Nam, federal spending and the feeling of farmers that the Administration opposes price increases for farm products.

In 1964 Palo Alto favored Johnson by 4,441 votes to 2,206. Nearly three-fifths of the sample in this wholly agricultural area at present would vote Republican for president unless Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., became the Democratic nominee instead of Johnson. In that event the percentages would be reversed. Kennedy is now preferred to Johnson by both registered Dmocrats and independent voters here.

Many Republicans who switched in 1964 in order to vote against Goldwater say they will not vote for Johnson again under any circumstances. Their preferences are now divided among several potential candidates, with Gov. George Romney of Michigan in the lead.

* * * *

A GRAY-HAIRED widow said she voted for Johnson but would not do so again. She said her son had been drafted but George Hamilton, a friend of the President's daughter, Lynda, has been deferred.

Mrs. D. A. Rouse said she would return to the Republican column both because the President "didn't have any business sending our boys to Viet Nam" and because "he's too plush handing out the money." The only national political name that engenders real enthusiasm today is Kennedy.

"We need to reevaluate our foreign policy and achieve communication with China," said Mrs. James Harvey. "Bobby Kennedy would do this."

"His brother was good for the farmer," said farmer Jerrie Lennard.

"A Kennedy, yes, but I'll never vote for Johnson," said Mrs. Robert Berger.

AEC to Propose Step-up On Harnessing H-Bomb

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Atomic Energy Commission, it was learned Saturday, will soon propose a step-up in the U.S. effort to harness the hydrogen bomb reaction to produce electricity — lest Russia get the jump.

The AEC's move is in the form of a progress report and recommendations for future action to be delivered in a few days to the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee.

It comes in the wake of unpublicized reports by AEC advisers—including one by its own staff scientists—that:

—Russia has forged ahead of the United States in financial and manpower outlays for the quest and that Russia is threatening to overtake America's lead in scientific gains towards the goal of using the hydrogen of the world's oceans as a cheap, safe and efficient fuel of limitless supply to generate electricity.

The U.S. effort toward taming the H-bomb fusion reaction — known as "controlled thermonuclear research"—has been impeded by budgets now running at about $22 million yearly.

Give Negro Career Aid, GOP Told

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Republicans were advised Saturday to capitalize on their business connections and help Negroes toward business careers as part of a drive to reestablish the GOP as the nation's majority political party.

"With the simple facts of population growth and migration bringing control of eight out of America's 10 biggest cities within the potential control of Negroes in the next generation, Republicans—particularly on the national level—face an opportunity equal to that of the Democrats in the 1930s," GOP strategists were told.

The advice was contained in an 84-page staff study, "Where the Votes Are," prepared by the Senate Republican policy committee. The study assesses the political implications of predicted population growth and social trends.

"The decade ahead offers Republicans their first opportunity in nearly 40 years to establish themselves once again as the majority party in the United States," it said. It added that only 25% of the voters called themselves regularly affiliated with the GOP by 1964.

* * * *

"WE SUGGEST that the United States is now entering into the second period in this century of potential change among voters' political allegiance, this time due not so much to mobility as to an unprecedented circumstance of population," it said.

It predicted that the number of families under age 35 will increase by 40% in the next 10 years, and continued:

"Since party identification is at its weakest among voters in their early and middle 20s, we suggest the presence of enormous opportunity; opportunity to make of these new voters Republicans; opportunity to reach these new voters in terms of their own problems, their own issues, their own needs and hopes."

Besides its prescription for expanding the party's share of the Negro vote, the study urged the GOP to gear its operations to a changing and declining farm bloc, a mushrooming education complex and growing teacher vote, and to such issues as conservation and mass transit.

TUSTIN GIRL MISS CALIFORNIA
Victory crown is placed on head of Sue Bradley, 19, of Tustin, by last year's winner, Kathy Hage, after naming of Miss California of 1967 Friday night in Los Angeles. Kathy will vie for Miss U.S.A. next spring.

GEORGA MAE DIDLAKE
Busy Year in Offing

An 18-year-old brunette from Tustin will represent California in the U.S.A. portion of the Miss Universe Beauty Pageant next May at Miami Beach, Fla.

Brown-eyed Sue Bradley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bradley and June graduate of Tustin's Foothill High School, won the title of Miss California 1967 in competition with six other finalists at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles.

The runnersup, including Georga Mae Didlake of Palos Verdes Peninsula, Miss Long Beach titleholder, will serve as Miss Bradley's honor court, each with the title of Miss California Beauty.

In addition to Miss Didlake, they are Pat Derby, Miss North Highlands; Nancy Fredson, Miss Hollywood; Lucy Ann Cook, Miss Los Angeles; Cheryl Arnold, Miss Santa Monica, and Nancy Hoskins, Miss South Los Angeles.

The new Miss California, who succeeds Kathy Hage of Santa Monica in the role, has dark brown eyes to go with her raven tresses, is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 113 pounds and measures 36-22-36 in appropriate places. She won scads of merchandise and other prizes, in addition to a vacation in Nassau and a goodwill tour of Mexico.

Miss Bradley's mother said Sue, who has been modeling in her spare time, had intended to continue her studies at a college in the Southland this fall — "but with all this excitement her plans are up in the air. We're just thrilled about her winning the contest . . ."

* * * *

GEORGA MAE, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Didlake of Palos Verdes Peninsula, is a student of California State College at Long Beach. She is a blonde with brown eyes, measures 5 feet 9½ inches in height, weighed in for contest finals at a neat 130 pounds and reported other endowments as 37-24-37.

Like Miss Bradley and the five other California Beauties, Miss Didlake will be kept busy in the coming year with individual and group appearances on behalf of the Miss Universe Pageant.

U.S. Pushes for Airlines Strike End

cessed until 1:30 p.m. today.

The White House remained silent on the strike by 35,400 mechanics and ground service workers which began Friday morning against Eastern, National, Northwest, Trans World and United airlines. But informed sources said the statements from the emergency board members were encouraged by the Johnson administration.

* * * *

JOHNSON SAID last month that the board's recommendations, which called for a settlement costing about 3.5% above a $4.50 an hour wage and benefit average over 42 months, should form the framework for an accord. The airlines have offered to settle for that, but the union has refused.

The Civil Aeronautics Board, meantime, acted to ease the impact of the strike through a series of steps designed to improve air service between some of the 231 cities affected. An official said the steps would have relatively little impact in easing the crisis that has affected more than 150,000 daily passengers, or about 60% of the domestic air volume.

happened in the months ahead. It also decided to send the question of its future relations with SNCC and CORE—and other civil rights groups—to the NAACP board of directors.

* * * *

IN ITS PREAMBLE to the resolutions, the organization declared that "although the NAACP has carefully plotted the demise of racial discrimination, at no time have we contemplated ethnicide (or racial obliteration).

"Ethnic continuity as well as ethnic unity are not only desirable," the preamble added, "but perhaps indispensable in a pluralistic society."

At the same time, the association reiterated its long-standing policy of not trying to isolate the Negro from the mainstream of American life, but of including him in it. ("Black power," on the other hand, has often had separatist connotations.)

At its windup Saturday in the Embassy Auditorium, the delegates voted overwhelmingly to carry their 1969 convention to Jackson, Miss., "where the action is," as the slogan of the Jackson supporters put it.

* * * *

THE MOVE WAS seen partly as a concession to the Southern delegates and partly as an answer to critics who have accused the NAACP of being too concerned with comfortable surroundings. Jackson, a city of 210,000, is not as well-equipped to handle conventions as some of the larger metropolitan areas in the country.

The convention had some harsh words for the police in some parts of the United States, saying the "trend of misconduct by law enforcement officers against certain people in various parts of our nation seems to be moving at an alarming rate."

It decried the beating of civil rights workers by police in the South, and insisted that FBI agents—when they are present in such cases—"make on-the-spot arrests." (The FBI contends it is an investigatory agency, and its agents are understood to have refrained from such arrests.)

The convention also called for civilian police review boards and the integration of the nation's entire law enforcement system.

In a resolution on labor, it called for a repeal of Sec. 14-B of the Taft-Hartley Act, which allows the states to ban union shops. But it coupled its call with a stinging criticism of the labor movement which, it said, is still rife with racial discrimination, particularly in the building trades.

* * * *

THE RESOLUTION on foreign policy avoided the Viet Nam war issue, and another resolution declared that the country can afford both guns and butter. The convention went on to call for greater spending for social welfare, and urged the government to establish a broad public works program.

In another move, the convention criticized the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormons) for failing to take an affirmative stand "on the great moral issue of civil rights."

Later, Wilkins took pains to point out that the resolution in no way implied any criticism of Michigan Gov. George Romney, a member of the church.

Bernard Appointed Ford Plant Manager

PICO RIVERA (CNS) — Ford Motor Co. announced Saturday the appointment of Clifford E. Bernard as manager of the company's assembly plant in Pico Rivera.

Bernard has been assistant plant manager since August, 1961. He succeeds J. B. Howard, who is on an extended medical leave. Howard, a veteran of 36 years with Ford, had been manager of the Los Angeles plant since January, 1961.

Chicago Rally to Test Support for Dr. King's Brand of Power

CHICAGO (AP)—Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., who has been organizing a campaign in Chicago this year, will get an indication today of the scope of his support.

The occasion will be a Freedom Rally in Soldier Field and a march on City Hall. A list of speakers, issued Saturday, includes Dr. King, two labor leaders and James Meredith, who was shot and wounded last month on a march in Mississippi.

A spokesman said Floyd McKissick, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, was invited but sent word he couldn't attend. Dr. Joseph H. Jackson of Chicago, head of the National Baptist Convention, which says it embraces 5.5 million Negro members, has announced he won't support the rally.

Sponsors are King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) and the Coordinating Council of Community Organizations, an alliance of Chicago civil rights groups. They hope for a turnout of 100,000.

Dr. King led a march on City Hall July 26, 1965, a Monday. Participants numbered more than 10,000. The city has a Negro population of about 900,000.

King has been spending two or three days a week in Chicago since February. Most of the work has been organizing for improved housing, education and employment for Negroes.

* * * *

ONE FUNCTIONING division, called Operation Breadbasket, has been negotiating with employes for more or better jobs for Negroes. Spokesmen said the result thus far has been jobs that added more than $1 million to the annual income of Negroes.

City, county and federal government agencies are pushing programs that parallel Dr. King's plans. Among them are rehabilitation of run-down apartment buildings through the new Chicago Dwellings Association, job training by the Cook County Welfare Department and teaching preschool children in the Head Start project of Office of Economic Opportunity.

The marchers plan to wind up their parade today by affixing a list of demands to a city hall door.

They are directed against discrimination and aimed at more economic and political power for Negroes, who represent one fourth of Chicago's population.

Among the demands:

—Precinct captain posts in political parties for Negroes to replace whites who have moved from the precincts.

—A state minimum wage law pegged to $2 an hour.

—No racial discrimination in listings by real estate brokers or mortgage making by financial institutions.

—More low-cost public housing on a scattered basis.

—Desegregation of public schools in the forthcoming school year.

—Racial head counts of people on public and business payrolls and in unions.

Mayor Richard J. Daley has arranged to meet Dr. King Monday to talk over the city's problems.

Among the speakers listed for today are Robert Johnston, regional director of the United Auto Workers Union, and Ralph Helstein, president of the United Packinghouse Workers.

More than 600 policemen have been assigned to the rally and march.

CORE In Bogalusa Rights Trek

BOGALUSA, La. (UPI) — A Negro civil rights group begins a two-day, 20-mile protest trek from here to the Washington Parish (county) seat of Franklinton today to demonstrate what one rights leader termed "the need for black power in Louisiana."

"Black power," the new watchword for militants in the civil rights movement, was inserted into the protest movement Saturday by Lincoln Lynch, associate national director of the Congress of Racial Equality (CORE). CORE recently adopted a "black power" approach to civil rights.

Lynch, speaking by telephone from New York, said he would join the march, which is sponsored by the Bogalusa Civic and voters League, a CORE affiliate.

The planned route is along Louisiana Highway 10, which winds through a virtually uninhabited stretch of pine woods hills close to the Mississippi boarder.

Brazil Soap Operas Bring Tavern Woes

GOIANIA, Brazil (AP) — Evening soap operas on television here have produced a third dimension of woe among the city's innkeepers, and they are begging for mercy. First the proprietors wondered where their old bar regulars had gone.

Now they have asked programmers to change time schedules of the evening "novels," as the soaps are called, and wonder if they can lure back the bar trade.

Mississippi Negroes List 51 'Open-City' Demands

GRENADA, Miss. (UPI)—Negro leaders listed 51 demands for an "open city" Saturday and asked local and county officials to reply by Monday.

The demands were presented by Hosea Williams, a top aide of Southern Christian Leadership Conference director Martin Luther King.

The list demanded first-class citizenship for Negroes in Grenada County and called for city and county governments to open for "full and equal participation by all of its citizens." Another SCLC worker, Leon Hall, said Negroes planned to try to desegregate at least six churches today.

The 51 demands were drawn up after it appeared that a civil rights campaign King launched here was stalled for lack of coordination among leaders and a scarcity of volunteers.

Williams issued a call for hundreds of volunteers to gather Saturday to test the compliance of local public accommodations with the civil rights law. Only 15 volunteers showed up, however, and even Williams was not present.

CAPT. T. T. SHEPARD JR.
New Princeton Skipper

Princeton Gets a New Skipper

A new commanding officer has taken over the Long Beach based amphibious assault carrier USS Princeton.

Capt. Tazewell T. Shepard Jr. relieved Capt. Thomas J. Gallagher Jr. in a sun-drenched shipboard ceremony in Cam Ranh Bay, Viet Nam.

Princeton left Long Beach on Feb. 16 and has been serving as the nucleus of the 7th Fleet's Amphibious Ready Group. She has participated in two highly successful amphibious landings this year—Jackstay and Osage.

Capt. Gallagher's next duty assignment is in Washington as project officer for the A-7, the Navy's latest attack airplane.

The new skipper came from Washington duty where he was a member of the Retention Task Force. Prior to that he was Naval aide to the late President John F. Kennedy from 1961 to 1964, and then commanded the fleet oiler USS Ancilla.

Calif. Policy on Tahoe Water Told

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California policy toward Lake Tahoe meets all federal requirements for protecting water quality in interstate waters, Gov. Brown's office said Saturday.

The governor sent a letter to U.S. Interior Secretary Stewart Udall outlining California's action under the 1965 Federal Water Polution Control Act.

Brown mentioned legislative-approved loans to Lake Tahoe areas for exporting sewage from the lake basin. The governor also said that Nevada is scheduled to hold hearings on pollution to consider standards developed by representatives of both states.

Aborigines Find Vein of Gemstones

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Two aboriginal pensioners at Norsemen, 450 miles east of Perth, have discovered a vein of opaline gemstones.

A missionary friend, Keith Stevenson, helped Peter and Eileen Flynn peg out a 20-acre claim and take some of the stones to a mining registrar.

"The find is one of the most promising I've ever seen," Stevenson said. "So far we have scratched only the surface, but the yield has been amazing.

"The stones are of the opaline type but there is every possibility we may come across a vein of pure opal."

The Flynns had been digging for the stones with their hands and primitive sticks. Stevenson supplied a shovel, mattock aand pick.

"I have no idea of the ultimate value, but the Flynns hope to make enough to buy a car and have plenty left to bank," Stevenson said.

He has promised to look after marketing, cutting, facetting and polishing details for them.

WILL HE ENDORSE REAGAN?

Kuchel Keeping Cool, Mum Under Increasing Pressure

By Baxter Omohundro
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Although he's the Republican on the hot spot in California's current political stew, Sen. Thomas H. Kuchel is maintaining his cool.

The state's senior senator has been under increasing pressure to lend his weight to the top GOP slate headed by gubernatorial nominee Ronald Reagan against the Democratic ticket headed by Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown.

Various Republican factions have been putting intense heat on Kuchel to get behind the ticket, but the senator and his top aides have kept behind a figurative asbestos curtain to quietly study the situatioin.

Most of the study is focused on what extent Kuchel, leader of the state GOP's moderate wing, might back Reagan, regarded as the darling of the right.

Kuchel's choices boil down to these three:

1. Remain completely mum or endorse only those candidates he is sure are within radar range of his political philosophy.

2. Back Reagan either by name or by blanket support of the entire top ticket.

3. Endorse Reagan and others on an issue-by-issue basis.

Hints that Kuchel is being wooed by the Democrats have been so firmly rejected by the senator as to rule out the possibility that he would bolt the party and endorse Brown.

The first alternative is most in keeping with

SEN. T. H. KUCHEL
On Hot Spot

Kuchel's practices of recent years. For example he withheld endorsement from Richard Nixon in the 1962 gubernatorial campaign and from Barry Goldwater and Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., in the 1964 political war.

Remaining mum, an attitude some partisans have wildly exaggerated as "stabs in the back," is regarded by Kuchel as entirely in keeping with a long California GOP tradition of personal independence. It was a hallmark of Kuchel's political godfathers, the late Sen. Hiram Johnson and U.S. Chief Justice Earl Warren, who held state office before the end of Crossfiling intensified partisanship.

The second alternative is that which most Republican leaders would like Kuchel to choose. The senator, who has always gotten strong bi-partisan backing in his races, could influence a possibly decisive number of voters.

The blanket endorsement approach was used by the state GOP House delegation last month, but only after moderate members averted a move to endorse Reagan by name. Nonetheless, it was an unprecedented action and one which has been held up to Kuchel as a wise example.

Endorsement on an issue - by - issue basis, a method rarely used, has been getting close examination by Kuchel and his aides.

This third alternative would have the advantage of maintaining the issue-oriented Kuchel's ideological integrity.

But it carries the pitfall of creating among inattentive voters the impression that Kuchel was behind Reagan in all respects when, in fact, he might have some strong reservations.

Kuchel undoubtedly would like to take one of the latter alternatives, if for no other reason that it likely would make the primary sledding easier if he runs for reelection in 1968.

However, the senator sees this as up to Reagan. Kuchel has been closely following Reagan pronouncements as the nominee works to moderate his image—a process expected to accelerate between now and the November general election.

Should Reagan come up with forthrightly moderate views on issues that are important to Kuchel—such as extremism and social legislation—then the senator could be expected to endorse him.

If not, mum's the word.

House Probe of Pollution Set July 20

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Even if used to the fullest extent, present technology could barely keep up with, let alone reduce, air and water pollution, a congressional advisory panel reported Saturday.

The report was released along with an announcement that the House Science and Astronautics Committee will begin hearings about July 20 on pollution abatement.

"At present we have no way to assess or to deal with some aspects of pollution," the advisory panel concluded. It posed questions which will be taken up at hearings of a subcommittee on science, research and development.

The report, presented to Rep. Emilio Q. Daddario, D-Conn., subcommittee chairman, launches a week of congressional action on so-called environmental pollution.

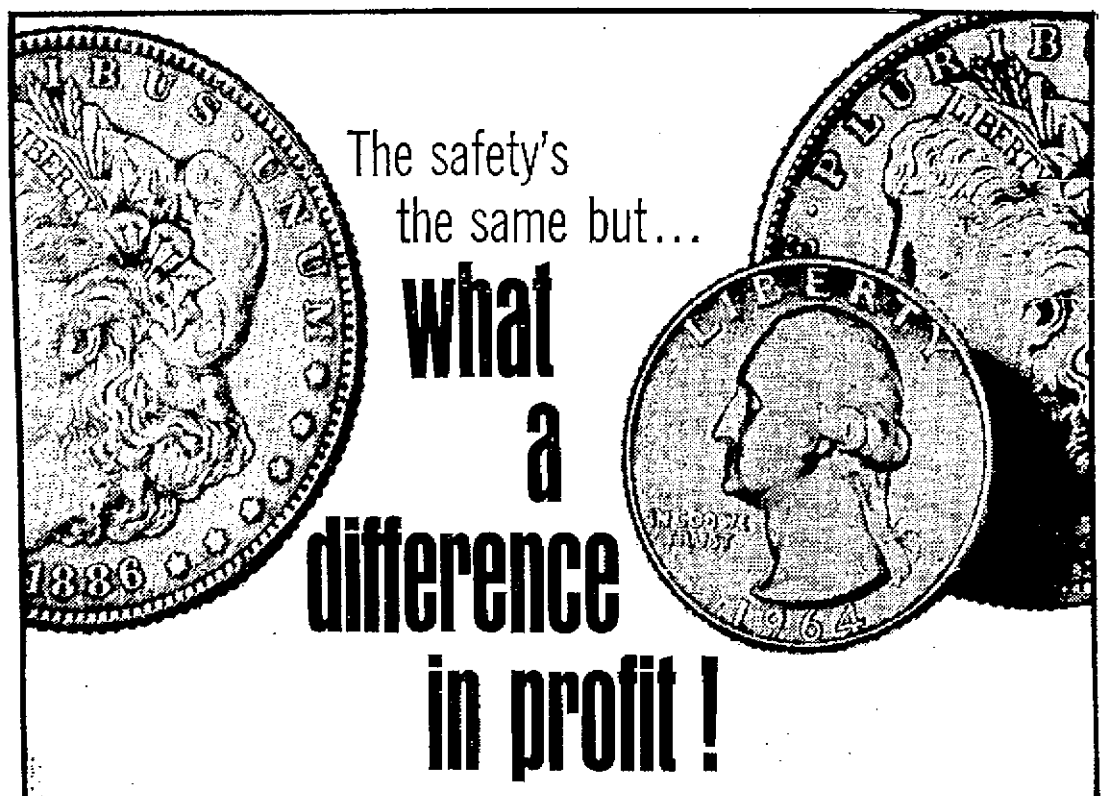

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie's pollution subcommittee will shortly report amendment calling for spending $6 billion over the next six years for pollution abatement. This will be the largest appropriation ever sought for clean water.

* * * *

WITH 48 SPONSORS, the measure is not expected to face much difficulty when it comes to the floor, probably on Tuesday. It does, however, totally disregard President Johnson's fiscal 1967 budget. Johnson sought only an additional $50 million to study proposed creation of a river basin control system.

Muskie's subcommittee also will report an air pollution bill calling for appropriation of $195 million over the next three years. This also is expected to come to the floor Tuesday.

On Wednesday, the House Public Works Committee is scheduled to begin its own pollution abatement hearings on a bill proposed by Rep. John A. Blatnik, D-Minn. This measure is a combination of the Muskie and administration proposals.

2 Klansmen Will Appeal Sentences

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI)—Two Ku Klux Klansmen named as trigger men in the 1964 Lemuel A. Penn nightrider slaying drew maximum 10-year federal prison terms, but said they will appeal at government expense. Conviction of Joseph Howard Sims, 43, and Cecil Myers, 26, marked the first time in modern Georgia history that a white man has been convicted under a federal civil rights statue. Both defendants previously had been acquitted in state courts.

Four others were acquitted Friday but one of them—Herbert Guest, 39—was sentenced Saturday to two years in prison for illegally dispensing "pep pills."

Gandhi-Kosygin Peace Talks

CAIRO (AP)—Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of India affirmed Saturday that she intends to discuss ways to end the war in Viet Nam with Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin when she goes to Moscow next week.

MRS. INDIRA GANDHI
Peace Bid to Kosygin

Mrs. Gandhi, in Cairo for a two-day visit, told a news conference that "I plan to discuss my point of view on Viet Nam with Premier Kosygin." It had been expected that the Viet Nam situation would arise during her talks with Soviet officials, but there had been no official confirmation.

In a television address to her people before she left home Thursday, Mrs. Gandhi urged an immediate reconvening of the 1954 Geneva conference on Viet Nam, to be followed by a cessation of hostilities on both sides, including U.S. bombing of North Viet Nam. She proposed a settlement based on withdrawal of all foreign troops from Viet Nam and guarantees of independence for Viet Nam, Laos and Cambodia.

Mrs. Gandhi said here that President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic was in "broad agreement" with her thinking on Viet Nam.

Communist China Saturday rejected Mrs. Gandhi's call for a Geneva peace conference on Viet Nam. It called for complete withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Viet Nam before holding such a conference.

Antiv-Poverty Report Cheers Johnson

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson got a cheering report on the antipoverty program and helped his prospective son-in-law observe his 23rd birthday. Johnson "expressed great pleasure" over what he heard from Sargent Shriver, overnight guest at the ranch, who urged Johnson to visit projects in urban and rural areas. The observance of Patrick J. Nugent's birthday was characterized as "just a quiet family gathering." Only last Saturday, Luci Johnson, who becomes Nugent's bride Aug. 6, turned 19 years of age.

Twisters, Rain Hit Sticky Midwest

CHICAGO (AP)—Twisters and thunderstorms churned over the hot and sticky Midwest, and heat records toppled in the middle Mississippi Valley. A tornado touched down near Chesterton, Ind., but damage was light. A 46-year-old postman, Walter V. Mellens, was killed by lighting on Chicago's south side. Winds whipped across a subdivision near Chicago's western suburb of Naperville, blowing out windows and damaging TV antennas and roofs. Heavy rain and half-inch hail hit Dubuque, Iowa. Storms also rumbled over lower Michigan and northern Indiana.

Rolvagg to Run—Without Party

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Gov. Rolvagg said he will file in the Minnesota primary in a bid for reelection despite failure to gain his Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party's endorsement. The DFL convention earlier endorsed Lt. Gov. A. M. Keith for the race. "Minnesotans historically have resisted letting any political clique decide who shall or shall not be governor," he said. "In recent weeks, thousands have written, wired, called and sought me out on the streets." He and his wife, Florence, made the decision at 2 a.m. after a telephone chat with Vice President Humphrey, still titutler head of the DFL Party.

Erhard Predicts Election Victory

BONN (UPI) — Chancellor Erhard and his Christian Democrats confidently predicted victory in today's elections in North Rhine-Westphalia, the nation's industrial heart, with 11 million voters. Since 1947 the Christian Democrats have been the largest party in the Landtag (state legislature.)

3 Critically Hurt in Alps Mishap

CHAMONIX, France (AP) — Three of the 18 persons injured when an aerial cableway plunged 30 yards onto a glacier in the Alps were reported in critical condition. Police said 13 of the injured were in the gondola that fell and the other in a gondola which was tossed about in the air but did not fall. Sixty-five other persons were stranded in the gondolas over Mont Blanc, Europe's highest peak.

200 Evacuated from Their Homes

BRAWLEY (UPI) — The first of 200 persons who evacuated their homes began returning Saturday as firemen conferred on how to decontaminate the toxic fumes from fire at a warehouse containing two tons of agricultural insecticide. Firemen said two youngsters playing nearby may have started the blaze. About 100 persons were treated at hospitals and released. The decontaminated insecticide is to be buried in the desert. Total loss could run as high as $209,000, firemen said.

Hoffa Plans 1967 Union Expansions

New York Times Service

MIAMI BEACH — James Hoffa said last week that in 1967 he will demand nationwide labor negotiations with leading grocery store chains and consolidated bargaining on a regional basis with big dairy companies.

The president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters says these will be the initial steps taken under the broad new authority he was given last week by the union's convention to pursue multi-area, companywide and nationwide labor contracts.

* * * *

HOFFA WAS granted the broader authority as part of his program to gather local unions dealing with the same company or industry into one set of negotiations in order to bring more pressure to bear on employers.

The union leader also disclosed that the Teamster exexutive board on Thursday set up a committee to meet with leading civil rights groups that he said have criticized the union for racial discrimination and demanded that it set aside specific quotas of various jobs for Negroes.

Hoffa observed that these committee, denied that the union practiced discrimination and asserted that he would not agree to impose job quotas on a racial basis.

* * * *

HE SAID it would be no more logical to impose job quotas for Negroes than it would be for Italians, or any other ethnic group. Quotas would "create discrimination" by barring qualified people from jobs on racial grounds, he added.

The Teamster president expressed his views in an interview in his office at the Fountainbleau Hotel here the day after he had been re-elected at the convention's closing session to a five-year term as president of the 1.7-million-member union.

Hoffa said that the duties of Frank Fitzsimmons, elected to the new office of Teamster general vice president, would remain unchanged from what they were when he was vice president from Detroit.

Fitzsimmons will be given "authority to sign documents," such as legal and financial papers, on the union's behalf, Hoffa said. But he will remain based in Detroit and use the international office there, the president added.

* * * *

HOFFA WILL make a 1967 drive for broader-based negotiations under a constitutional amendment approved by the convention that gives him authority to set up multi-area, companywide negotiations for national bargaining where he can get a majority of locals to go alog.

He has had some authority in this area for several years and has used it to introduce national negotiations in freight trucking and some other industries.

possible consequences of such actions rests fully with the United States government," the note stated.

From first reports, the tone of the Soviet protest note appeared to be relatively restrained and the least belligerent that Mossow could send under the circumstances. The vague charge of "responsibility" for all "consequences" of an international situation has traditionally been the mildest form of Soviet protest.

* * * *

ACCORDING to the protest, three Soviet merchant ships, the Kuibyshev, Sovietsk and Ustilug, were at Haiphong at noon last Thursday when "strafing of the Haiphong mooring places by American planes" took place.

"Fragments and machine gun fire struck in close proximity to the Soviet merchant ships," the note said.

"Four hours later planes dropped a number of big metal objects around the motorship Komsomol lying at anchor in Ha Long Bay, which had they hit the ship could have seriously damaged it."

The presence of Soviet shipping at Haiphong, the principal port of North Viet Nam, is believed to have been a major inhibiting factor for American military planners considering attack on the city or port installations.

Any direct damage caused to Soviet vessels or injuries to Soviet personnel would, in effect, produce a direct confrontation between the U.S. and the Soviet Union in Viet Nam military action.

* * * *

THE JULY 7 raid referred to in the Soviet note was the second attack in the Haiphong area since the initial bombardment of the fuel depot near the port on June 29.

It was officially stated in Washington that no Soviet ships were moored at Haiphong during the first attack. After last Thursday's raid American pilots reportedly sighted three ships in outer Haiphong Harbor but none along the mooring near the target area, the oil storage depot.

Much of the Soviet materiel and military goods supplied for the North Vietnamese war effort is believed to arrive by Soviet ships through Haiphong. There have been frequent and regular reports, always denied by Communist China, that Soviet attempts to send supplies to Hanoi by rail have been impeded during the transit across Chinese territory.

* * * *

DIPLOMATIC analysts have reasoned that the Chinese would logically wish to encourage the Russians to ship their aid supplies by sea, for the specific reason that an armed confrontation with the U.S. might thereby be provoked.

Earlier in Tokyo, Rusk called the U.S. bombings of Hanoi and Haiphong oil depots a direct response to increased North Vietnamese aggression in South Viet Nam.

The Secretary of State said that in the Far East "the governments out there fully understand what is going on in Southeast Asia."

And throughout Asia he noted "a deep mistrust and fear of Hanoi and Peking."

LT. GEN. THI
Onetime 'Warlord'

Viet Nam Fires 5 Generals

By R. W. APPLE JR.
New York Times Service

SAIGON—A South Vietnamese military tribunal Saturday dismissed from the army five generals who aided the Buddhist-led antigovernment campaign earlier this year.

The generals were also sentenced to 60 days detention each. Two of them—Lt. Gen. Nguyen Chanh Thi and Lt. Gen. Ton That Dinh—were ordered to spend their terms in prison. The others will remain under house arrest.

Four of the officers were former commanders of the I Army Corps, composed of the five northern provinces where Buddhist agitation was most severe. The fifth was a former commander of the 1st Infantry Division, which is based at Hue.

Air Vice Marshal Nguyen Cao Ky, the premier, and Lt. Gen. Nguyen Van Thieu, the chief of state, were members of the tribunal. It met secretly for two days at the general staff headquarters near Tansonnhui Airport outside Saigon.

POLITICAL observers interpreted the action as another indication that the government, having put down dissidence in Da Nang, Hue and Saigon, was growing increasingly sure of itself. The observers said the sentences were relatively lenient.

The generals involved were:

Thi, a 39-year-old paratrooper whose dismissal as I Corps commander on March 10 on charges of "warlordism" started the political crisis.

Brig. Gen. Nguyen Van Chuan, who succeeded Thi, but was himself replaced when he failed to move against the Buddhists in Da Nang as quickly as the government wished.

Dinh, a 37-year-old infantry officer, who led the late Premier Ngo Dinh Diem's raid on Buddhist pagodas in August, 1963. He succeeded Chuan, was relieved when the government sent troops to pacify Da Nang, and fled to Hue to join the dissidents there.

Maj. Gen. Huynh Van Cao, who succeeded Dinh, but took refuge in an American headquarters at Da Nang after a dispute with the government over anti-Buddhist tactics.

U.S. Strikes 4 More Red Fuel Depots

SAIGON (AP) — The United States announced today strikes at four more of North Viet Nam's oil installations in the aerial drive to wipe out enemy fuel reserves.

A fuel tank factory 31 miles north of Saigon was among other targets in 75 missions flown over the Communist north by U.S. jets today.

Briefing officers said one plane, an Air Force F105 Thunderchief, had been shot down. Antiaircraft gunners got it 40 miles north of Hanoi, and the pilot was listed as missing. This was the 283rd plane acknowledged lost in the 17-month-old campaign north of the border.

The Communists were reported dispersing remaining fuel supplies into the middle of villages to give them human shields.

Sources say Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara was told of this development in his Honolulu meeting with the U.S. Pacific high command.

Meanwhile, North Viet Nam's news agency says two more captive U.S. pilots have "admitted their crimes" and asked forgiveness for raiding that country.

A broadcast dispatch identifies them as Lt. Cmdr. Cole Black of Lake City, Minn., and Capt. Bruce Seber of Kansas (no home town given).

Ho Chi Minh's Communist government has been hinting captured fliers may be tried on war crimes charges.

Red China Purges Propaganda Chief

TOKYO, Sunday (AP) — Red China disclosed today the ouster of propaganda chief Lu Ting-I, the second - highest ranking victim of the current purge.

Lu, 62, was replaced as head of the propaganda department of the Communist Party's central committee, the Agency (NCNA) said.

It did not say whether he also lost his other jobs as culture minister and one of China's 16 vice premiers but observers said he was expected to lose these posts as well.

The highest ranking victim of the purge so far was once-powerful Peking Mayor Peng Chen, who was sacked last month as first secretary of the Peking Municipal Communist Party committee.

Observers said Lu was expected to lose his other posts, in view of the recent sacking of two of his chief aides—Vice Ministers of Culture Lin Mo-Han and Chou Yang.

These two and Shao Chuan-Lin, a writer, were accused by the party's theoretical journal, Red Flag, of turning the Culture Ministry into "a ministry of emperors, kings, generals, ministers, scholars and beauties." Red Flag accused it of distributing "reactionary capitalist, feudal and revisionist literature and art."

LBJ Weighing Town, Country Poverty Tour

By AVLIN SPIVAK
United Press International

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI) —President Johnson, who has talked of visiting all 50 states before the November elections, is considering a tour of urban and rural areas as part of his travels.

Sargent Shriver, director of the Office of Economic Opportunity, made the suggestion to Johnson at the President's Texas Ranch Saturday while reporting to him on progress of the war against poverty. Shriver said it was progressing well, the Texas White House announced, and Johnson "expressed his great pleasure."

McNamara War Report

Honolulu saying that the Viet Cong had been kept from mounting a monsoon season offensive while their North Vietnamese allies were suffering weariness and an "erosion of morale."

HOWEVER, neither the secretary nor anyone else here had any sign that North Viet Nam planned soon to sue for peace or negotiations or that it was moving to curb its military activities.

The persistent administration declarations of optimism, therefore, are not based on hopes of an early peace. Rather, they are interpreted here as having a double purpose.

One is to reinforce the psychological pressure upon North Viet Nam in the wake of the bombings of oil depots at Hanoi and Haiphong. The second is to persuade Americans that the war has reached a turning point.

BY BLUNTING the criticism at home officials are said to seek not only political advantage but a further demonstration to Hanoi that it cannot count upon domestic opposition to inhibit the American war effort.

President Johnson has personally led the campaign, forcefully pleading to defend South Viet Nam at any cost and taking heart from reports that Hanoi is having second thoughts about its chances against the American war machine.

Other high officials have reiterated the theme, supplying long lists of reasons why the North Vietnamese ought to feel depressed and discouraged. The officials have pointed to vague diplomatic reports about the mood of gloom in Hanoi. They have pointed to the ineffectiveness of Soviet air defenses against American air raids and to the apparent unwillingness of Communist China to come directly to Hanoi's assistance at this stage.

'Tin Goose' Basis of This Airline

By STEPHEN H. MILLER

PORT CLINTON, Ohio (AP)—While most airlines boast of sleek jetliners, the "tin goose" of the 1920s keeps Port Clinton's Island Airlines aloft and thriving.

The airline's two 1929 Ford tri-motors, with their blunt snouts and corrugated metal skins, are familiar sights in this community, where the planes provide year-round mail and passenger service to nearby islands in Lake Erie.

Airline President Ralph Dietrich, whose planes carried 55,000 passengers last year, is bringing home a third tri-motor next week. It is being refurbished in Tucson, Ariz.

The new plane will make Island Airlines the nation's largest owner of tri-motors. There are only 10 in flyable condition in the country.

* * * *

DIETRICH BOUGHT his latest tri-motor from the San Luis Mining Co., in Mazatlan, Mexico, early this year. He found it while on a trip to hunt parts for the other tri-motors.

"I knew there was a tri-motor in Mexico somewhere," he says, "and just by chance happened to land at the right airport."

His new Ford 5AT-B will be the heaviest, biggest and fastest of the line's tri-motors, carrying 23 passengers at a top speed of 115 mph.

The planes are a big nostalgic attraction, said Dietrich, but that isn't why he uses them.

"They're good short-distance airplanes. They get in short, get out short and carry almost their own weight in payload.

There's never been one cracked up due to structural failure."

Dietrich's airline has flown for 35 years without losing a plane or passenger.

* * * *

DILIGENT SEARCHING over the years has licked the problem of finding parts for the 38-year-old airliners. Dietrich has 50 extra engines, enough corrugated metal to reskin all his planes, and "more spare parts than we'll ever use in my lifetime."

The line's tri-motors, and a 1932 Boeing 247D, fly from Port Clinton to South Bass, Middle Bass, North Bass and Rattlesnake islands. Their longest flight is a nine-mile jump to Put-In-Bay on South Bass.

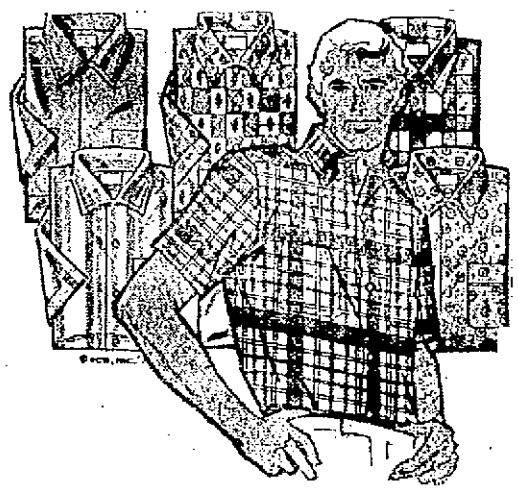

"We could run our whole operation within the hangar line at Kennedy International Airport," says Dietrich.

GOP Unit Asks Social Security Escalation

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Republican Coordinating Committee Saturday proposed automatic cost-of-living increases for Social Security and railroad retirement act pensioners.

In a 10-point program titled "A Republican Approach to the Needs of the Aging," it also called for steps to make Medicare more helpful, to provide jobs for the pensioners, and allow them to ern more than $1,500 a year without forfeiting part or all of their Social Security benefits.

The recommendations were adopted at a committee meeting here as the party prepared to plunge into the 1966 election campaign.

* * * *

"WHY SHOULD aged pensioners continue to suffer while runaway inflation further destroys the purchasing power of the pension dollar?" the committee asked.

It said that despite a 7% raise in Social Security benefits last year, inflation had cut the purchasing power of the pension dollar below 1954-58.

"Inflation has swept in upon us because of the policies of the Johnson-Humphrey administration and its controlled congress," the committee said. "Inflation steals from everyone, young and old alike, but hurts especially those elderly who live on pensions and other fixed incomes."

The committee would tie the pension hikes to the cost of living by amending the Social Security and railroad retirement acts.

As to Medicare, it said existing programs should be supplemented with "services and facilities as may be necessary to care adequately for the health of our elderly citizens."

It proposed construction of new facilities under existing laws and better use of present authority to provide more nurses, physicians, health technicians and other needed manpower.

* * * *

THE COMMITTEE said that although Medicare became law almost a year ago "the administration has failed tragically to prepare for start of the program." It added that "hardly more than 20% of the nursing homes of the country are equipped to care for the elderly under the nursing home feature of Medicare, which goes into effect Jan. 1."

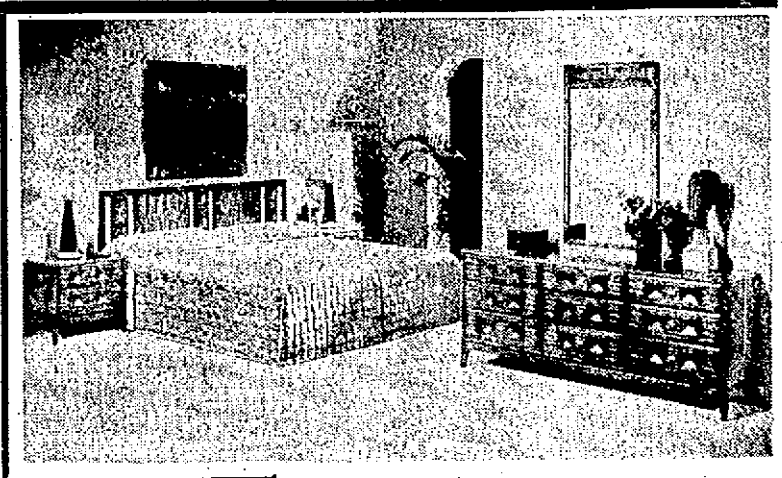

In its other recommendations, the committee called on the states to see that old age assistance grants are enough to meet the basic needs o the elderly; that coverage of private pension plans are encouraged; and the government housing programs for oldsters be reappraised "to assure that they are serving the people they were intended to serve and doing the things they were intended to accomplish."

WITH demonstration marches apparently figured as the best way of expressing sentiment nowadays, a bizarre idea occurs to me.

How come the disappointed bettors at Hollywood Park and other hoss-racing centers haven't taken up this form of showing their displeasure?

After one of those races when the form nags run out and a longshot wins, a majority of the spectators, being on the losing side, are pretty sad if not downright sore.

When people are sad and sore, they're supposed to march in protest. The losers at the park could stage a heckuva demonstration.

They do boo a little at the losing jockeys.

Then they start a march, but it's not a protest. It leads to the seller's windows for tickets on the next race. Hope springs eternal. . .

ALL OF which leads me to a little matter I probably shouldn't mention, and I wouldn't if it weren't a promotion item for our sports dept.

Hosting some out-of-town relatives at Hollywood, I was hopeful I could show off some big-time know-how about the horses. When it came to the seventh race, I looked over our handicap—the one authored by Roy Betz—and noted that he picked an entry named "High Perch" as the longshot.

Nowhere else could I find favorable mention of High Perch, but I decided to risk a $2 bet. High Perch stole the race at the wire and paid $131 for the two. That made me a real smart fella in the eyes of my guests, and for that I must thank, and recommend, Roy Betz.

Note to creditors: Please don't get any ideas. I didn't do well at all on the other races. After them I'd have gladly joined a riot.

WHILE back a reader asked about the initials ACY on a freight car. I guess everybody in town, except he and I, knew they stand for Akron, Canton and Youngstown. Helpful notes have poured in.

Roberta Wakefield adds an interesting touch by saying the letters, for her, stand for nostalgia. "I have walked its rails and picked wild strawberries. . . My first math lesson was counting the cars. . . The whistle always blew opposite our farmhouse. . ." You never know what an item here may develop.

One expert says the ACY is 169 miles long, another avers it's only 17. D.R. Smith says it handles freight only between Mogadore and Delphos, O. Smith's a railroad man and ought to know.

AND ABOUT railroads, Sterling Bemis was up in Mother Lode country and came upon one you may not have heard about.

It's 10 miles long and runs between the pioneer mining town of Jackson, Calif., and the S.P. main line and boasts—or did at one time—the fancy moniker, "Amador Central." It mainly carries lumber.

On Jackson's main drag Bemis struck up a conversation with a thin, aging citizen whose appearance indicated his dreams of gold hadn't panned out.

"Shorty over there," said the oldster, pointing to another man who looked much like him, "helped drive the spikes for the Amador Central half a century ago.

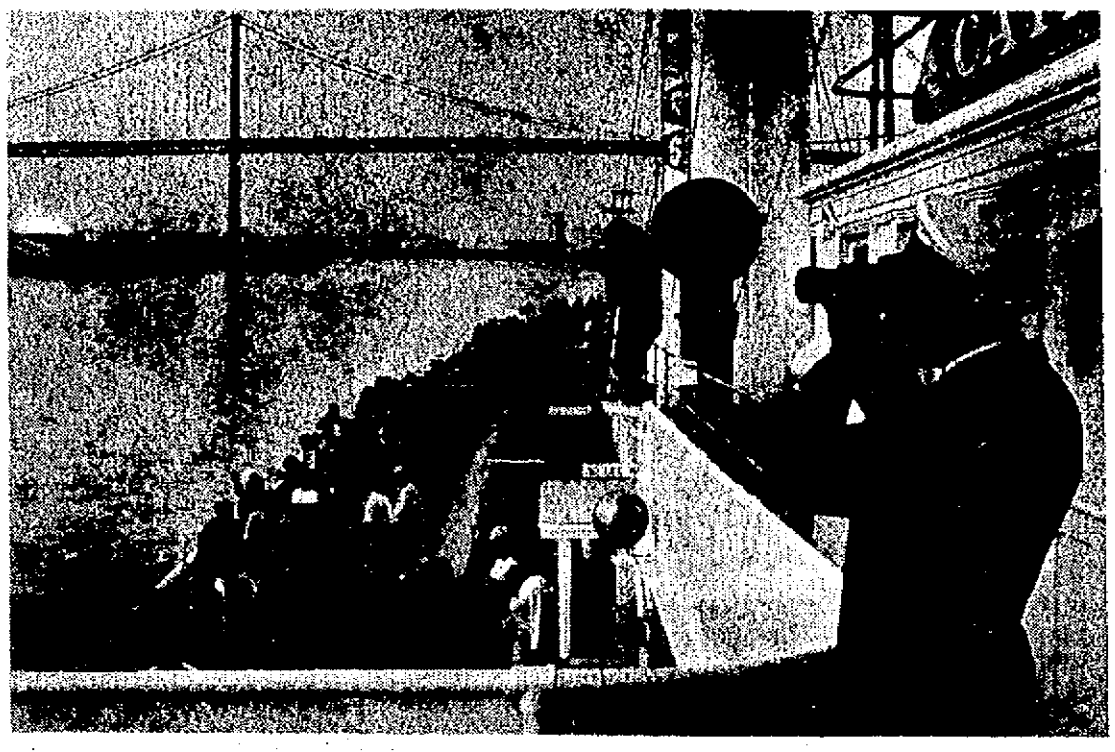

"The fellow who ran the Amador Central in its heyday asked the Southern Pacific to give him pass privileges. The S.P. refused. This made the Amador boss sore and he wrote the S.P. president' "My railroad may not be as long as your railroad, but by gee, it's just as wide."

Atty. Walter Desmond, one of my informants about the ACY, tells me that the same quip was often used in reference to that Ohio line.

Apparently, it's a favorite with short line defenders. But it couldn't be applied to one type of pioneer line—the narrow gaugers. They weren't as wide, either, as main line railroads.

Moonlight Cruises to Catalina Started

Younger Set 'Rolls' Even If Big White Boat Doesn't

SUN SINKS BEHIND TERMINAL AS SS CATALINA PULLS OUT OF HARBOR. CAPTAIN HAS WATCH

Moonlight cruising to Catalina can turn out to be a hard day's night's play.

Everybody on the way over is a' go-go!

On the way back everybody is a' sleep-sleep.

This was the routine when the S.S. Catalina, "the Big White Steamer" made its summertime maiden "Moonlight Cruise" to the offshore vacationland on July 2.

Although the seas were calm, the ship was rockin' and a-rollin' from the first note of the ship's high spirited four-piece combo. Some of the younger set "swimmed" all the way over without getting any closer to the water than the fun deck.

As the more energetic frugged and jerked their way across the channel to Avalon, the older people on board (25 and over) waited for the band to play something a little more sedate.

Popular was "Moonlight on the Wabash" renamed "Moonlight on San Pedro Channel" especially for the occasion.

While operators of the Big White Steamer won't go so far as to promise a full moon every week, they say the hour and forty-five minute moonlight cruises will continue each Saturday night through July and August.

The steamer departs at 7:45 p.m. from the all-new Catalina Terminal located beneath the mainland side of the Vincent Thomas Bridge. It leaves Avalon at 12:45 a.m.

Jordan, in his new position, will serve as personal representative of Grand Exalted Ruler of All Elks, Raymond C. Dodson, who announced the appointment, to the Long Beach, San Pedro, Compton, Downey, Huntington Park, Montebello, Norwalk, Paramount, Lakewood and Bellflower lodges.

Jordan, insurance broker with George A. Richards & Sons, Inc., served as exalted ruler of the Long Beach Elks Lodge in 1960-61, during which time almost 4,000 members were initiated by the lodge.

Also announced were the appointment of Paul Riccobon, past exalted ruler of the Downey lodge, as district grand esquire; and David Cohee of the Long Beach lodge, as district grand auditor.

Church Burglarized

Burglars ransacked offices at the Seventh-day Adventist Church, 1001 E. Third St., early Saturday and took $106 in cash and $4 in postal stamps, Long Beach police reported.

Officer Edwin Free said entry to the building was gained by breaking a window.

Bonus Suit Hearing Slated

A full hearing on a suit by county social workers to force the Board of Supervisors to void a so-called "strikebreakers bonus" has been scheduled in Superior Court for Aug. 12.

The board voted the two-week, 11% temporary pay increase for Bureau of Public Assistance employes who stayed on the job during the recent social workers strike.

Judge Ralph H. Nutter delayed the hearing after Asst. County Counsel Edward H. Gaylord told him the non-strikers should have an opportunity to defend their bonuses.

Local 535 of the Social Workers Union brought the suit, which also asked that the court order supervisors to enter into a collective bargaining contract — a move the county claims is illegal.

* * * *

ATTY. LEO GEFFNER, representing the union, said the striking social workers returned to their jobs after Supt. of Charities William A. Barr wrote a letter promising strikers and non-strikers would be treated equally and "without prejudice."

The county supervisors subsequently enacted the bonus pay raise, which touched off a second, but briefer walkout.

Meanwhile, County Auditor Roscoe Hollinger reported the so-called "bonus" paychecks — averaging $16 to $45 per employe —would not be distributed with today's regular payroll.

Hollinger said his office had been swamped with extra payroll problems because of the social workers' strike and a one-day walkout later in the month by welfare clerks.

As a result, he said, the bonus payments will be processed separately sometime this week.

SALE OF INDUSTRIAL SUBDIVISIONS A BIG SUCCESS

L.B. Water Agency Land-Poor

By GEORGE WEEKS

Long Beach's Municipal Water Department, which 20 years ago controlled some 1,037 acres, is running out of land.

One reason is the strong success of the department's development and sale of industrial subdivisions during the last five years. The program has produced some $2.7 million for department budgeting in lieu of higher water rates.

Of the two principal tracts known collectively as Airport Industrial Park, all 19 lots have been sold in one 30-acre subdivision south of the San Diego Freeway between Redondo and Temple Avenues.

In the second tract, encompassing 34½ acres north of the freeway in the same area, only five of 24 lots remain unsold. Two are within the flight pattern of an airport runway. The three others are occupied by two warehouse buildings soon to be replaced.

* * * *

DEMAND HAS BEEN almost equally strong in five other subdivisions embracing 35 acres with 41 lots, according to Harold C. Levy, the Water Department's land and leases manager.

Only one sizable area is still available for early development, Levy said. It consists of 40 acres on the south side of Spring Street between California and Orange Avenues. Now the site of old oil wells, it is being reclaimed for industrial use.

A three-acre parcel east of the Union Pacific Railroad and south of Wardlow Road is being filled in preparation for development. But current plans, Levy said, call for its use mainly as a rail freight switching center for joint use of many industries.

So-called Water Department land—actually owned by the city but under jurisdiction of the Board of Water Commissioners—began shrinking long before the industrial development program.

* * * *

OF THE ORIGINAL 1,037 acres, various parcels totaling 880 acres were turned over to the general city government for specified municipal uses dating back to the 1940's.

More than half, some 470 acres, is included in the Long Beach Airport. Park purposes now occupy 133 acres, upland oil sites account for 126 acres and recreation uses total 63 acres. The police honor farm encompasses almost 25 acres, and other city uses cover a variety of purposes from a public library to the animal shelter.

Water commissioners established the general policy of selling rather than leasing properties not needed by the city, on the theory that the land should be returned to the tax rolls. But in all cases they retained water and oil rights for the city.

* * * *

LEVY GAVE THIS summary of the five other industrial tracts:

Nine acres with nine lots on the west side of Cherry Avenue at 33rd Street: Five lots sold, three occupied by city facilities, one used by a service station under an old lease.

Twelve acres with 13 lots on the east side of Cherry Avenue from Wardlow Road to 32nd Street: All sold except three, of which one is an oil well drill site, another a water well site and the third leased for an oil well supply service.

Four acres with six lots on north side of Spring Street east of Cherry Avenue: All lots sold.

Two acres with eight lots at southwest corner of Spring Street and Temple Avenue: All lots sold.

Eight acres with five lots north of Spring Street and west of Orange Avenue: Three of lots sold, another is an oil well site and another is encumbered with a pipeline easement now being removed.

L.B. Doctor to Describe 'Anti-Rh Baby' Technique

By BEN ZINSER

Medical-Science Editor

A research project involving more than 250 Long Beach area women, largest scientific study of its kind in the United States, will be described for European physicians in coming weeks by a Long Beach doctor.

Dr. E. R. Jennings, director of the pathology department at Memorial Hospital, will report that research to date indicates injections of a blood product into women may protect subsequent offspring against a dangerous blood disorder.

Dr. Jennings will report to the department of obstetrics at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, July 15, and to hematologists at the University of Munich, Germany, on July 26.

* * * *

HE WILL describe a technique aimed at warding off the possibility of birth of "Rh babies." It calls for injection of a specially-prepared blood factor, gamma globulin, into a mother soon after delivery of her baby.

Doctors hope that this blood product, called anti-Rh serum, will destroy all incompatible fetal red blood cells that may have entered the maternal circulation.

If the method works, it will prevent development of antibodies that could prove potentially lethal to subsequent babies.

The problem arises when a mother has Rh negative blood and the father is Rh positive.

If Rh positive cells, from a fetus, get into the mother's circulation, she may become sensitized, and a second or still-later baby thus becomes vulnerable to a blood-destroying disease. The disorder is known as hemolytic disease of the newborn or erythroblastosis fetalis.

* * * *

PARTICIPATING with Memorial in the project are St. Mary's Hospital and Long Beach Community Hospital.

Similar studies are underway in Baltimore, New York City, Winnipeg, Liverpool and Edinburgh.

The Long Beach study is the largest in the United States, Dr. Jennings said.

Each week, information on inoculated mothers is sent to Prof. Luis F. Nanni, professor of statistics of the department of engineering at Rutgers University, for analysis.

A report on the project for the medical profession in the United States is in the July issue of the American Journal of Clinical Pathology, Dr. Jennings said.

* * * *

FOURTEEN women who were inoculated with anti-Rh serum now are pregnant again, and doctors are anxiously waiting to see if the injections will protect the new offspring against blood disease.

The research in Long Beach is being supported with funds from the Children's Memorial Hospital Auxiliary and the National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Md. The later is the research arm of the U.S. Public Health Service.

Unruh Gives Big Boost to Transit

THANKS MAINLY to Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh the Legislature in its closing hours finally recognized the importance of mass rapid transit in the Los Angeles basin by providing funds to get a system started.

Largely through the persuasive efforts of Unruh, D-Inglewood, $3.9 million in tidelands oil funds was granted to the Southern California Rapid Transit District for planning an $800 million four-corridor transit system running from Long Beach to the San Fernando Valley and from Santa Monica to El Monte.

The grant was passed as an amendment to a bill setting up tidelands funds (mainly from the Long Beach oil fields) for water and education use. Authored by Assemblyman Robert Stevens, R-Santa Monica, the amendment for the first time acknowledges that the state has a financial obligation to assist transit.

IN HIS SUPPORT of the amendment Unruh pressed the argument that transit is a state problem, that much of the economic health of the state—and the state government itself—depends upon good transportation.

The funds are split into two parts. First is a flat $3 million from tidelands oil money available this year. Second is a $900,000 loan from state motor vehicle funds (to be repaid from oil revenue). Of this portion $700,000 already has been appropriated in the budget signed several days ago by Gov. Edmund Brown.

The governor has stated that he will sign the new bill for the whole grant but he added that he didn't want to make any commitments for future use of tidelands oil revenues for transit.

Hopefully, this does not mean that he has taken a hard stand against use of state funds to assist in constructing a transit system in Southern California.

It should be noted, as Unruh did in his arguments to the Legislature, that there is ample precedent for using state money since the state already has given some $160 million in toll bridge money to San Francisco for its transit program.

The signing of the new bill by the governor will speed up transit planning here by at least a year, possibly more. Previously transit district directors have asked and received legislation permitting the County Board of Supervisors to levy a tax to raise the planning funds. The supervisors, however, have been reluctant to do so and indicated they would put the issue on the ballot. If (and it's a big if) voter approval had been forthcoming no funds could have been secured until the 1967-68 budget.

THERE IS STILL one big hurdle to get over before transit can start to become a reality. That is to raise the $800 million for construction.

Unruh took note of this, too, by saying that he feels the state will have to go into major financing problems next year. He indicated that he would not only support construction money for Southern California but is willing to look into additional financing for the San Francisco system.

It should be apparent to any thoughtful student of government and public financing that it would be impossible to get an $800 million bond issue against property approved by voters. However, with adequate state assistance, it would be entirely possible to gain voter approval for a lesser amount—providing the burden is spread over a number of tax sources, not just property.

IN THIS REGARD, it should be remembered that the whole $800 million cost of construction would not have to come from taxes. A large portion of it—considerably more than half—would come from fare box revenues after the system is operating.

There is much work yet to be done. But thanks to the leadership of Speaker Unruh the day when transit can begin to help our area is much closer.

Governors 'Allergic' to Headlines

"HUMAN BEINGS," said Erwin D. Canham, editor in chief of the Christian Science Monitor—and he apparently included newsmen — "can't be totally objective."

But they can be, he continued, honest, fair and detached. He said good news reporting also requires

BOB HOUSER

"analytical perspective," the incorporation of pertinent and relevant auxiliary facts, because "bare facts are often misleading."

Canham said these things while moderating a panel on news media responsibilities at last week's National Governors' Conference in Los Angeles.

Governors burst into applause at another Canham statement, "I think sometimes that headlines ought to be abolished." Later in a question session, several governors complained of the misimpressions created by headlines.

They were critical also of what they considered news pre-occupation with the unusual, the exciting, the dramatic and bizarre stories to the exclusion of "more worthwhile" news.

PANELISTS ARGUED that "good news" is generally no news at all. And Canham said a major problem is "getting entry into the human mind." He agreed that a real challenge to writers is to present less exciting, but important, news in a more interesting manner.

Some of the newsmen insisted the public isn't ready for as much serious news as the governors would prescribe. They pointed out that an interruption of TV's "Batman" program for news of trouble with Gemini 8 brought thousands of howls of protest to ABC.

William H. Lawrence, ABC newsman, pointed out that CBS really caught hell when it canceled one of its "Lost in Space" science fiction shows to tell America about some people who were REALLY lost in space.

Gov. John A. Love, R-Colo., considered headlines to be "more irresponsible than any other form of reporting." Canham admitted that there's little to be said for "headlines" but reminded that head writers are required to present "a striking, arresting fact."

And James Flinchum, of Cheyenne Newspapers, Inc., suggested to governors they might be a little bit more lenient with head writers if they had ever tried to headline a complex story in six words.

REPORTAGE of Barry Goldwater's presidential run was presented as a case in which "analytical perspective" was a real challenge.

Lawrence asserted, answering a challenge, that Goldwater was not badly reported, adding, "Barry Goldwater's trouble was that he was reported too accurately. . . . If he had a bad press, he made it so."

Canham asked if this were not a case in point of bare facts often being misleading. Goldwater was "hard to report," Canham said. "You could take him too literally."

Lawrence agreed that if you could have taken Goldwater aside after one of his "hip-shooting" statements and asked him if he "really wanted to go to war over the water incident at Guantanamo, he would have said no."

Pressure Increasing on Sen. Kuchel That He Back Reagan for Governor

WASHINGTON (NEA)—Even some of his best friends and admirers are telling Republican Sen. Thomas Kuchel of California that he'll be in deep political trouble if he does not endorse Ronald Reagan, the GOP nominee for governor.

Unlike scalp-hunting right-wingers who obviously hope Kuchel's difficulties increase, these people — who include many of the party's seasoned hands — say they want to save him from defeat in his next re-election bid in 1968.

But they do not think he has been pulling his weight as a party man and their patience has worn thin. And they have made endorsement of Reagan a supreme and urgent test of his Republican regularity.

FOR YEARS Kuchel has made almost a specialty of neither endorsing nor working for such Republican nominees as Barry Goldwater, Richard Nixon (for governor), and U.S. Sen. George Murphy. He is charged with ignoring an endless array of party functions (including a big one this June 23), and with generally going it alone.

This time, however, the heat is truly intense. Says a respected northern California Republican hardly wedded to Reagan's conservatism: "Everybody's going with Reagan." Not to go for him, the man indicated, would be to stand out much too sharply as a target for general party wrath.

Almost daily telephone calls from the coast keep the pressure on. Kuchel is known to be thinking hard about the matter. He has told Reagan he wants to sit down and talk. The former actor wrote him a friendly letter in response to a congratulatory telegram the senator sent after Reagan's primary victory.

But finding the proper common ground is not automatic. Says a Kuchel friend: "It's not going to be easy to rush in and throw his arms around a guy who in 1962 called him a socialist and who in 1964 called him a traitor to his party."

Another problem is that Kuchel does not seem to buy the spreading notion that Reagan in 1966 is markedly different from the Goldwaterite he was in 1964. Nor does the senator accept the apparently contradictory argument that Reagan's smashing primary triumph proves that conservatism is on a steeply rising curve in California.

Some sources are betting Kuchel will give Reagan some kind of nod, despite the evident ideological gulf between them. If he does and Reagan beats Democratic Gov. Edmund (Pat) Brown, the senator's 1968 outlook will brighten immeasurably.

It is argued that a Governor Reagan elected after a long campaign of preaching party unity could hardly work to dump an incumbent Republican senator. Without a victorious Reagan's backing, an intra-party move against Kuchel in 1968 would surely be doomed. It would become a narrow right-wing effort. Kuchel won 3 to 1 over a combination of three opponents the last time that was tried.

THE CURRENT FURORE over Kuchel, almost hysterical in its overtones, may simmer down in the months ahead. It is in part the product of the excitement generated in California Republican circles by Reagan's big win. But the pressures are making some Kuchel intimates a little edgy.

Long-distance callers from the coast who warn bluntly that failure to back Reagan may plunge Kuchel into the abyss are reminded just as bluntly that a successful party effort to scuttle the senator in the 1968 primary might be rewarded by victory that November for a very junior Democratic senator who could do virtually nothing helpful for California.

This kind of talk is not exactly idle. In a state with roughly 3 to 2 Democratic registration, Kuchel won re-election in 1962 by 730,000 while Nixon was losing to Brown by 300,000. He gets the Democratic votes any Republican needs to win.

Moreover, independent judgments support the senator's claim to highly valuable service to his state. He has been a tiger in getting aids of all kinds. He is the top Republican on the Senate Interior Committee, crucial to a state deeply involved with water and other resources development.

Yet the key party regulars are less and less convinced that this admittedly faithful service need stand in the way of party good works. They point out that hard-working, liberal New York Sen. Jacob Javits finds plenty of time for major Republican chores in his home state. From Kuchel they want the same—for Ronald Reagan—and soon.

Some Convicts Could Serve

IN SEATTLE a youth stole a car radio in the hope that a conviction would free him from the draft. But many convicts would join the armed forces in a minute —if they could.

America holds that its warriors must be men of untarnished honor. War, the military maintains, is the duty of good citizens.

By and large, the rule is probably right, but everyone makes mistakes and some mistakes land essentially good men in prison. With the psychological screening that exists today it would be possible to find those convicts who would adapt to the discipline and who would be discharged to become good citizens.

The French Foreign Legion was made up mostly of men who "were on the lam" from something. The legion maintained discipline and fought well.

If selected convicts were permitted to volunteer, it should shame the draft-card burners.

Murphy Lends Campaign Expert

From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON—Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., is dispatching his chief political lieutenant to help fellow-actor Ronald Reagan's effort to win the Golden State governorship for the GOP.

CAPITAL CHATTER

Murphy gave a leave of absence to his executive assistant, Richard M. (Sandy) Quinn, to lend his talents to the already smoothly-functioning Reagan-for-governor machine.

Quinn, 31, a bright specialist in public relations and a former campaign aide to Richard Nixon, is regarded as one of the principal architects of Murphy's surprise win over Pierre Salinger during the Democratic sweep of 1964.

Although he'll be working for the statewide Reagan organization, Quinn apparently will concentrate his efforts in Southern California. A native of Los Angeles, Quinn knows the area well and it's also the ground where there are the most political marbles to be picked up.

The dispatching of Quinn to Southern California might be tied to the fact that Reagan's rival, Democratic Gov. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown, is beefing up his forces there.

STATE LEGISLATORS across the country are being questioned on electoral college reform.

Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-N.D., is sending questionnaires to more than 7,800 legislators to determine their feelings on possible constitutional amendments.

Burdick has a bill before Congress that calls for abolition of the electoral college and election of the president and vice president by direct popular vote.

States Moving On Civil Rights Issue

Washington Star Service

AMID ALL the congressional hullabaloo over civil rights legislation, representatives of the 50 state governors quietly have been preparing a packet of suggested state laws to cover much of the same ground.

The difference, of course, is that action by Congress binds all Americans, while recommendations of the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws are only suggestions.

Nevertheless, a stalemate in Congress over, for example, fair housing proposals could leave the state-appointed commissioners with first crack at a consensus on some items the federal legislators are finding hard to handle.

* * *

THE UNIFORM LAW commissioners' annual meeting early next month in Montreal also will give the country a chance to see what happens when lawyers and law reformers tackle the subjects that throw politicians into tailspins.

The sessions in Montreal could whirl the law commissioners into orbit too, but the prospect is otherwise. Civil rights measures before the group won tentative approval at last year's meeting.

Recognizing that all states will not look kindly on their proposals, the commissioners have come up with a novel approach to permit states to go only part way in adopting the measures, if that is all they want to do.

DANA BULLEN

For less eager states, the commissioners are taking the carrot-and-stick approach.

Up for final approval at next month's meeting is a suggested "basic" civil rights law generally harmonizing with provisions of the 1964 Civil Rights Act already adopted by Congress. The focus is on discrimination in public accommodations and employment.

With states already bound by congressional action, the carrot is the provision in the 1964 act that federal enforcement activity can be stayed in some cases if state laws and machinery are available to do the job.

This could pull in states that really do not go for equal rights in a big way but would prefer, if they must bow, to have things handled by their own people.

For states willing to go further, the commissioners also are considering additional "model" law sections covering education and housing, items before Congress in this year's civil rights bill.

THE HOUSING PROVISIONS especially are interesting because of the flack sections on this in the administration's bill have been drawn.

After banning traditional discriminatory practices, as did the administration's bill, the commissioners' version would go on to rule out "blockbusting," the name given the real estate practice of scaring white owners into selling properties cheaply so they can then be resold at much higher prices to Negroes.

A section of the "model" law also would expressly permit plans to reduce racial imbalances in housing. Taken together, this and the "blockbusting" section hint that drafters of the "model" law are pointing more toward northern states than southern ones.

The commissioners have not forgotten "Mrs. Murphy" either. The "model" law would exempt from anti-discrimination provisions the rental of space in rooming houses or duplex structures occupied in part by the owner or a member of his family.

Some 17 states and a number of cities already have fair housing measures on the books, and there will be a big drive to increase the number if Congress fails to act on some version of the administration's bill.

While civil rights is a new field for the uniform law commissioners, it is worth remembering that a commercial code worked up by the conference and the American Law Institute has been adopted in all but three states.

THE LAW GROUP was established 25 years ago to promote uniformity in state laws. One of the oldest of the various units designed to encourage interstate cooperation, it also has been active in property, criminal and family law fields.

The group got into civil rights three years ago, after Gov. Otto Kerner of Illinois, a Democrat, urged the commissioners at that year's meeting in Chicago to help devise peaceful ways for the handling of race problems.

L. A. C. SAYS

Disregarding Integrity Now Way of Life

IT WAS QUITE touching to read of the return to Sheldon, Iowa, of the former bank cashier who had embezzled over $2 million of the bank's funds. The story tells of the town folks' kindly treatment of the woman paroled after serving six years. She is now a member of the city library staff. The kindly attitude is given because it is said "few persons actually lost money, because all deposits up to $10,000 were insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp."

THAT ASSUMPTION is an indication of how people are willing to forget dishonesty unless it directly affects their own pocketbook. In this case the cost of this theft was paid for by everyone who has money in, or borrows money from, a bank. The deposit insurance is paid for by contributions by each bank. That cost is reflected in every charge for interest or other services provided by a bank. It is interesting to wonder what the attitude of the people of Sheldon would be if they had lost money by this theft.

At the time of reading this story Jimmy Hoffa was arrogantly directing the voting of his Teamsters Union. Awaiting his prison term, the whole question seemed to be whether he would continue as president and boss of the union while in prison, or if he would have a self-picked stand-in to run the union with Hoffa resuming the post after serving his prison term. His record of attempted jury-fixing, misuse of union funds and financing of gambling in Las Vegas is disregarded by the 1,700,000 teamsters whom Hoffa controls—and who voted to raise his salary $25,000 a year to $100,000.

WE RARELY hear or read anything these days about Bobby Baker. The fact that he used his position as an aide to the then Sen. Johnson to build a $2 million fortune seems to have lost public interest. The Senate has carefully swept under the carpet the charges that Baker used his influence with its members to gain favors for those he helped get contracts and appointments—and to build his own huge bank account. It leaves the impression that the senators are afraid to hold an open hearing because it would embarrass the President and many of the senators.

Then we still have the fact that the President used his influence as the leader of the Senate to achieve an estimated $14 million fortune through his monopoly of radio and television in his home state capital of Austin, Texas. This was possible only by ruling of the Federal Communications Commission over which he had great influence. No other area of this size has monopoly control of all broadcasts of the major networks of a city.

WHEN SUCH glaring examples of bank thefts, union leadership, misuse of power and the fortunes made by misuse of political power are accepted as "a way of life" we are in a bad way. It may seem tiresome to repeat Bernard Baruch's comment that the American people have "lost their capacity for indignation." But it seems more true today than when he so commented.

Unless we regain that capacity the trend will grow and public confidence in integrity of its government will continue to be apathetic and there will be little incentive for young people to believe in decency and honesty. It is not a nice subject. But it is one we need to understand and demand that the attitude be changed.—L.A.C.

Lodge Due Out of Crucial Post Soon

New York Times Service

PARIS—On July 8, 1965, President Johnson took the unusual step of nominating Henry Cabot Lodge to a second tour as ambassador in Saigon. This crucial job is about as agreeable as vice consul in hell. Now Lodge has finished another year of sweltering, restraining generals, juggling politicians, entertaining V.I.P. tourists and keeping construction workers out of jail.

Although he is in superb health, all this fatigues a man of 64. The time is coming for Lodge to contemplate retirement from Southeast Asia and it would be surprising if he were still at his present post when winter sets in.

* * *

LODGE BEGAN his second lap around the Vietnamese obstacle course when things were looking appallingly grim. Only recently have the military and political situations begun seriously to improve.

Lodge has steadfastly argued that battlefield success was an absolute prerequisite to any permanent settlement. Nevertheless, even then, he acknowledges that while North Viet Nam could perhaps be rendered militarily harmless by next spring, this fact would not necessarily end the South Viet Nam war.

C. L. SULZBERGER

Although a Republican, Lodge is a non-political envoy. He feels the American obligation to keep South Viet Nam from Communist control is imposed by vital national interest and that what the U.S. is doing there now is what it did not do elsewhere in 1936 and 1938 when Hitler could have been kept from militarizing the Rhineland and seizing Sudeten, Czechoslovakia. For Lodge the U.S. must accept a disagreeable limited conflict and, by winning it, avoid World War III.

Lodge believes Washington must give the South Vietnamese a better revolution than that offered by Hanoi but he perceives how Augean (filthy or corrupt) the stable is. He acknowledges that no cement binds South Viet Nam together so that, if any force pushes against the wall, bricks pop out separately.

During the past difficult spring the ambassador insisted U.S. policy must try to keep Marshal Ky's military junta in power until a legal turnover could be arranged. He has no illusions that Ky is a Lincoln or a Bismarck. He simply regards him as an astute, hard worker who has learned a lot and can move things forward whereas any sudden replacement would have to start all over again.

Nor did Lodge ever place much reliance on the Buddhist political faction of venerable Tri Quang who tried so hard to grab power. Lodge actually sheltered Tri Quang in 1963 when the dynamic little Bonze, disguised as a Catholic priest, was dodging the police.

Notwithstanding, the ambassador thinks Tri Quang wants a theocratic state with Buddhism as the official religion, that his Buddhist faction comprises wreckers, not builders, who create opportunities for communism without worrying about it. This hurdle on the obstacle course has now, the U.S. hopes, been crossed. Moreover, Lodge feels the Viet Cong has lost considerable magic in the countryside.

LODGE EVIDENTLY considers it would be a mistake to yield too much in order to entice Hanoi into negotiation. He prefers that we should first be 85% along the way to a satisfactory outcome. He is convinced that more than twice as much of South Viet Nam's population is already under Saigon rather than under Viet Cong control, thanks to governmental hold on the cities and provincial capitals. A sizable floating fraction wavers in the boondocks.

When Lodge eventually leaves Saigon the least he should merit is a well done from the President, and the nation's gratitude. Who will then take over is a matter of speculation.

The remarkable and modest Ellsworth Bunker has been considered but he is really too old for the climate and the task. There is always a possibility that if Dean Rusk resigns as secretary of state he might shoulder the burden, as he has volunteered to do.

WHATEVER HAPPENS, it is desirable that a renowned American assume the job—for prestige reasons obvious in both Saigon and Washington.

Whoever does take it will have the invaluable services of William Porter, the career deputy ambassador whose past guerrilla experience from Palestine to Algeria now stands him in good stead. So there it is. Lodge, an unprecedented two-time ambassador in the same ghastly spot, must inevitably go soon. It will be hard for the President to fill his shoes.

Picnic Table Grievance

EDITOR:

Recently my husband and I went to Houghton Park at 8:30 a. m. to set up four tables for a picnic. There were to be 23 in our party.

At 9 a. m. a park director came through the area posting tables as reserved, including the four we had spread with our food and dishes, without saying anything to us. I read one of the signs and it said: "Reserved—Presbyterian Church—Westminster—12-6."

When I told the director we had been there since 8:30 a. m. and had cleaned up garbage and trash from the tables, benches and asphalt, he said that was too bad—we'd have to move or he would call the police. Later he brought out another man who very politely explained park policy to us and asked us to move, which we did. We then cleaned up more garbage and trash so we could use other tables.

Two other parties were at tables in the same row we chose when we first arrived at the park. These tables were not posted, and the people were not asked to move.

At 1 p. m. some people from the church group (I asked to be sure) covered with paper the tables my husband and I had first. Our party (all taxpayers in Long Beach) were there until 6:30 p. m. These tables were never used by anyone all day long.

There were four more tables reserved in the name of Browson for 1:30 p. m. These tables were not used until 4, when another group came along and took the sign off.

At no time did the director check to see if the people who had made the reservations were using them or remove the signs when their time had passed. Scores of people were forced to sit on the ground to eat, while many tables were empty except for their reserved sign.

It just doesn't seem fair that people can call in from out of town and keep park facilities from being used by the ones who are paying for them. What ever happened to the first come, first served method?

There were three groups in the picnic area drinking beer—but we were the ones threatened with the police, for sitting at the wrong tables.

'Unnecessary Judgeship'

EDITOR:

The paper reported the result of a vote, by 300 Bar Association members, which suggested to Gov. Brown the names of three attorneys, one to fill the vacancy created by the retirement of Martin De Vries from the municipal court bench, a post to which he had been re-elected (for six years) only 19 months ago.

Also before me is a clipping dated four years and 11 months ago which reads in part "the Municipal Court is expected to boast of six judges instead of five through a bill introduced by Assemblyman Joe Kennick which Gov. Brown signed . . . the legislation . . . was unanimously denounced by the L. B. Municipal jurists."

It is to be noted that the municipal judges' opposition was "unanimous"—and who should know the work load best?

A judge has estimated the yearly operation of one court to be $40,000 to $50,000.

There have been 2 or 3 between-election vacancies in municipal court since this unnecessary judgeship was created, but Long Beach attorneys go merrily along, endorsing fellow attorneys to carry on this unnecessary expense. Nothing has been said about an increased load but if there is an added load the court has had an "extra" judge for nearly five years. Further, as younger judges take over more work can be done in less time. The added load question was pretty well answered about two years ago when one judge was on (terminal) sick leave for months; "The cases are up to date."

Now is the time for alert taxpayers, who gripe about taxes, to ask Gov. Brown, right now, not to fill this judgeship vacancy.

"They won't let Bill in the pool—no bathing cap!"

He Wrote LBJ, but Never Got to Read Reply

WASHINGTON — President Johnson gets thousands of letters every week, many of them dealing with the Viet Nam war. He doesn't have time to answer many of them. But he got one from Lt. Michael T. Glynne, Company B of the 35th Infantry in Viet Nam, which he answered.

"I feel it a duty, as well as a privilege," Lt. Glynne wrote the President, "to express not only for myself but for thousands of other American soldiers here in Viet Nam the admiration and pride which you have made us feel in our country by your steadfast leadership in these trying times. I make this statement out of no jingoist sentiment or false pride but in the knowledge which I have gathered firsthand here that this war is one in which every American can take pride."

To this President Johnson wrote a personal reply.

"I have kept your letter before me for some time," he said, "because it has been such a comfort and so very helpful.

"It was in my pocket when I spoke at a large dinner here in Washington several weeks ago. I carried it with me to a similar gathering in Chicago just the other day.

"I spoke frankly and with feeling to both audiences. I told them that, while some Americans are troubled and frustrated about Viet Nam, I have proof that Americans have not lost the spirit or the courage or the wisdom which have kept us a free people.

"The proof, I said, was the thousands of letters I receive from our men in Viet Nam, their families, and countless of their supporters across the land.

"I WANT TO THANK YOU for giving me such magnificent proof that Americans will always stand with patience, determination and honor where they must stand—the guardians at the gates of peace and freedom.

"In return, I give you my assurance that the heart and hope of this nation is with you and your men. Please tell them that."

So wrote the President of the United States. But Lt. Mike Glynne never read the letter. It was returned to the White House unopened. One day before it arrived, Lt. Glynne was killed by a sniper's bullet.

WALTER JETTON, the President's personal barbecuer, is not only a great cook but a very versatile gentleman. He can barbecue for the President, for Parisians, and shortly will officiate at the annual Big Brothers barbecue in nearby Maryland.

Jetton recently returned from opening the Paris Hilton Hotel, where he served good old-fashioned spareribs, fried Texas pies, and his famous barbecue sauce to Parisian guests accustomed to the productions of Cordon Bleu chefs. The Parisians loved it.

Jetton also engaged in a little interior decorating. The managers of the Paris Hilton didn't know too much about the West so Jetton went to Paris loaded with pictures of Diamond Lil, Two-Gun Pete, and the Western bars of frontier days. As a result the motif of the Paris Hilton was live horses, an old country store, tin cups, red-checked tablecloths, Western music, and red bandannas.

Jetton flew his seasonings, his sauces and his beans from Texas to Paris, plus his formulas for fried pies. He relied on the Hilton management to produce the meat. But instead of providing 175 pounds of dressed beef, they provided an 800-pound steer. Jetton operates out of Fort Worth, will truck his cooking equipment all the way across the United States for the Big Brothers barbecue.

ADMITTED SHOOTER, WORKING WITH POLICE, EXONERATED BY GRAND JURY

Strange Case of Motel Double Killing

By BOB DAVIS

A hot-tempered southerner, cooled by an Amish upbringing, is an unlikely undercover agent. Yet car salesman William Wayne Wagner, working with the police, became involved in one of the most unusual murder cases in Orange County history.

In slightly more than one month, Wagner was quizzed about a double shooting in Santa Ana, congratulated, released, arrested for killing two men, released without bail, and finally exonerated when the grand jury failed to indict him for murder.

Now, branded publicly as an informer, Wagner is "apprehensive" about possible retaliation by associates of the ex-convict who was one of two men he shot to death in a Santa Ana motel on May 23.

While the death of one-time New York racketeer Morris Lipsius, 54, has been described by Orange County Dist. Atty. Kenneth Williams as "possibly justified," the death of Donald B. MacMillan, 54, in whose motel room the slayings occurred, has been called accidental by the grand jury.

"I don't regret killing Lipsius," Wagner, 29, said. "I knew what I was doing. But there is no way I can ever make up for shooting MacMillan. That is the real tragedy."

* * * *

WAGNER, a native of Memphis, Tenn., moved to the Amish community of West Alexander, Pa., and grew up in close contact with the rigid religious tenets held by the Amish.

In 1953, he moved to Canton, Ohio, and first met the man he would later slay. Wagner was boxing as a light welterweight in Canton smokers, and knew Lipsius as a gambler.

Wagner said:

"If a gambler bet on you, and you won, he usually showed his appreciation by giving you gifts and favors. While I only had about 18 fights, I attracted the attention of Lipsius, who won some money by betting on me. He paid for my robe, gave me some money, and picked up a couple of food tabs I had run up. I knew Lipsius for less than six months, then I went into the Army."

Wagner said he long has been interested in police work.

He said:

"I'm one of those guys who just has to butt his nose in whereever trouble pops up. I can't back and watch someone break the law, or do harm to someone without interfering, particularly when I might be able to prevent the trouble."

* * * *

THE STAGE for Wagner's experience in police work was set in 1959 when he "bumped into Lipsius in El Monte."

Wagner said:

"I had been keeping some horses in a stable there when I met Lipsius' daughter, Linda, now 19. I didn't associate her with Lipsius until one day when I gave her a ride home. It was a real surprise meeting Lipsius again."

Wagner recounted:

'Lipsius filled me in on what had been happening to him. He told me he had blown all the money he got for serving as a technical adviser on a movie that reportedly was based partially on his life. He said he was a hit man (hired killer), and told me of a number of killings he claimed to have committed."

Wagner said Lipsius began coming around to the house, "but he upset my wife so much, she threw him out one night."

Wagner said:

"This worried me, because he wasn't the kind of person anyone threw out. Besides, he told me he was attempting to set up another Murder, Inc., and, for a guy like this, you go cautiously."

* * * *

WAGNER SAID in the last four years he worked with the Santa Ana police on cases involving illegal sale of machine guns, traffic in stolen property, a bookmaking organization, and even traveled to Pennsylvania on a counterfeiting case which the U.S. Treasury Department was probing.

Earlier this year, he said, he was again contacted by Lipsius, who, he claimed, told him about killing a man in his pastry shop near Western and Melrose Streets in Los Angeles for $160, and dragging the body into an alley.

Wagner said he later took the information on the shooting to Santa Ana police, who passed it on to Los Angeles police. The latter, Wagner said, asked him to help obtain information to aid in the arrest of Lipsius.

"Then, on May 23," Wagner said, "Lipsius showed up at the car agency and told me he needed money. He seemed to need it badly. When I told him I had none I could spare, he got mad. I told him I would meet him at a bar, but first I had to go home to see my wife."

Wagner said, "I really went home to get a gun, and to call the police and tell them Lipsius was in town."

* * * *

HE RECOUNTED:

"I returned to the bar and was having a drink with Lipsius when MacMillan, whom I knew slightly, walked in and joined us. We were drinking, and MacMillan was talking as if he had a lot of money. When he suggested we go to his room in the motel next door, Lipsius reached inside my coat and grabbed my .25-caliber automatic. I felt that Lipsius was going to kill MacMillan for his money, and I tried to talk Lipsus into leaving with me."

Wagner added:

"When he insisted on staying with MacMillan, I really became worried. I said I had to go home again (to get my .45-caliber automatic) and agreed to meet them in MacMillan's room.

"I thought about telling MacMillan of my fears, but he was the kind of person who might make light of it all and tell Lipsius. We both might have been killed."

Wagner said he returned home for his gun, informed police of the situation, but told them "I thought I could handle it." However, Wagner said, a police officer was dispatched to the motel.

Upon rejoining the pair, Wagner said he found "MacMillan sitting in a chair holding papers on his lap and discussing employment opportunities available to Lipsius, who had told MacMillan he needed a job. Lipsius walked behind MacMillan and asked him if he could read the papers over his shoulder. Then he pulled out the automatic pistol and pointed it at MacMillan's head."

* * * *

WAGNER SAID:

"I got scared. I waited for the police to jump in and break it up. I thought they were watching through the window. I didn't know then that they hadn't arrived. Nothing happened, and I pulled my gun and fired. Lipsius was thrown back against the wall. He looked startled and said, 'I thought you were with me, Bill!' He pointed his weapon at me. I fired again and emptied my gun. I didn't even notice MacMillan. I walked over to Lipsius and he was on the floor trying to crawl. I hit him hard over the head with my gun. I didn't see his gun, but then I noticed MacMillan slumped in his chair. Blood was on his temple. I thought Lipsius had shot him."

Wagner said he walked to the bar and asked a waitress to call the police. Wagner said he was taken to the station where he "made out a report on yellow paper," and gave it to Sgt. Rusty Boyd.

Wagner said:

"We discussed the shooting, and then Boyd, Sgt. Ralph Curiale and Detective Dino Gaiazzi told me I had done a good job. We all shook hands, and I gave my gun to Curiale before going to breakfast with Caiazzi. From there, I went to work."

Two hours later, Wagner was arrested and charged with a double murder when an autopsy revealed both Lipsius and MacMillan had died from .45-caliber gunshot wounds. On June 8, Wagner was released from jail without bail. On June 28, the grand jury failed to indict him. The following day, the charges were formally dismissed.

* * * *

IN THE CONFUSION following the shooting, both Los Angeles and Santa Ana police denied that Wagner was working for them. Santa Ana police subsequently conceded Wagner did do some work for them in the capacity of a "volunteer secret associate."

Wagner, who now is unemployed, said:

"I believe Chief Edward J. Allen, Santa Ana, thought I was a secret agent with his department and wanted to keep it that way. But, I was the most un-secret agent in town. I blabbed all over what I was doing for the police."

He added:

"I wish the police would have revealed everything I had been doing for them, and not dismissed me as a mere informer. Now, I'm fair game for anyone who might want to show what happens to informers."

Wagner said, "Even so, if they asked me to help again, I would."

Bellflower Man Shot, Robbed

A Bellflower man who was shot twice and robbed Friday was in satisfactory condition at Bellwood General Hospital in Bellflower Saturday.

William Perry, 23, of 10029 Maple St., told Compton detectives two men forced their way into his car at a stop light in the Gardena area, and forced him to drive them to Compton.

The bandits ordered him to stop in the 1200 block of South Cliveden Avenue, he told detectives. Then they jumped out of the car, and each turned to fire at the victime before fleeing.

STUDENTS LEARN FASTER

Music 'Camps' Pay Off

By DON KIRKLAND

In Bill Vitale's summer music class, there's no homework. There are no grades, either, and Vitale says the result is that the kids learn faster.

Vitale is one of nine directors assigned to junior music camps spread throughout the Southland in a program coordinated by Cerritos College. At casual daily sessions, the youngsters discuss the history of music, learn the fundamentals and then break out the instruments to put their newfound knowledge to work.

"Sure, there are certain fundamentals and disciplines that the kids must learn," says Vitale, "but they do it in a relaxed environment. That way they get a concentrated dose of learning—and it shows."

* * * *

A FULLTIME music instructor at four elementary schools and one junior high school during the rest of the year, Vitale and his teacher counterparts ply their trade under summer contract to Cerritos College. The college, in turn, contracts with school and city recreation departments to provide staff on facilities in Downey, Norwalk, Bellflower and a handful of other communities which have acknowledged that music fills an important niche in the leisure-time lives of today's younger generation.

Now in its second year, the program is available to boys and girls aged 9 through 15. It runs mornings throughout the summer, five days a week. And that's the key, says Vitale.

* * * *

"IN SCHOOL, you can only meet with these youngsters for a few minutes each week," he says. "But here, they study all morning. If they want, they practice at home at night. When the summer is over, and if they've stuck with the program, the results can be amazing."

Nearly all the children bring their own instruments —WHICH run the gamut from brass to percussion— from home. For those not so equipped, instruments are available.

"Our philosophy is music for recreation," says Vitale, "and this is that kind of an outlet in a leisurely atmosphere."

Girl, 17, Is Shot to Death

A 23-year-old Willowbrook laborer was jailed on suspicion of murder Saturday after his 17-year-old girlfriend was shot to death during an argument.

The suspect is James Truman Denson, of 11634½ Bandera St., where the shooting occurred. The victim was Evelyn Louise Allen, who resided with her mother, Mrs. Karen Lee Battle, at 400 E. 120th St.

Firestone sheriff's deputies said Miss Allen was shot once through the head with a sawed-off .22-caliber rifle, and that Denson admitted the shooting.

Denson was quoted as saying the shooting was accidental and that he did not know the weapon was loaded.

L.B. Share of Car Fund $2 Million

Long Beach was allocated nearly $2 million Saturday as its share of funds collected by the state Motor Vehicles Department in auto license fees.

The money, which takes the place of local property taxes on vehicles, will be used by the city for general public purposes. Long Beach received the fourth highest allotment in the state. Only Los Angeles, San Jose and Oakland were allocated more.

Long Beach's funds are part of the $176 million in license fees shared by California's 398 incorporated cities and 58 counties. The allocation amounts to more than five dollars per person in Long Beach.

The money is distributed by the state in three payments—one in December, a second (advance payment) in April and a third and final in June.

Store Health License Deadline Set at Aug. 1

From Our Los Angeles Bureau

All businesses which require a public health license, have been advised that such licenses must be renewed by 5 p.m., Aug. 1, to avoid a 25% delinquent penalty.

Harold J. Ostly, county tax collector, said 91,449 renewal billings were mailed July 1 to businessmen throughout the county.

Any person owning or operating a boarding house or an apartment house of five or more units, or operating any food handling processing or preparation business such as a restaurant or market, should contact the tax collector's office if he has not received a renewal bill.

Ostly emphasized that there are other categories of business which require the public health licenses and advised businessmen who may be in doubt about their obligations to call his office.

Businessmen mailing in their remittances should do so sufficiently early to be sure the payment is postmarked prior to the Aug. 1 deadline.

Thieves Stage Block Party

Two homes in the 100 block of W. Plymouth Street were burgled Saturday, Long Beach police said.

Personal property valued at $164 was stolen from the Robert W. Johnson residence, 162 Plymouth, and household appliances valued at $88 were taken from the Autie Quinn residence, 162½ Plymouth St.

June 17 Crash Claims Man

A Redondo Beach accountant died Saturday morning at UCLA Medical Center as a result of injuries received in an auto accident June 17 in Dominguez, according to the county coroner.

John Gulik, 29, of 1718 Esplanade Ave., was injured when his car struck the rear end of a stopped car at 225th and Main streets, California Highway Patrol officers said.

SCRIPTWRITER ARRESTED

Car Bangs Sailor Wearing 2 Casts

An unemployed scriptwriter was arrested on suspicion of felony hit-run driving Saturday after a Long Beach-based sailor was struck by a car and injured in a crosswalk at Ocean Boulevard and Chestnut Avenue.

Harry A. Reilly, 29, of 1828 Appleton St., was seized about 15 minutes after the accident by Police Officers T. C. Booth and Frank Barcott at Obispo Avenue and Mariquita Street, following a radio broadcast describing the suspect's car.

The victim, Ronald G. Larson, 21, stationed aboard the USS Arnold, who already was wearing casts on his right foot and right arm from a previous accident, suffered abrasions.

Witnesses told police Larson was crossing Ocean Boulevard in a pedestrian zone at 2:40 a.m. when he was hit by a car and hurled 16 feet. Police said witnesses later identified Reilly as the hit-run car's driver.

The sailor was given emergency treatment at St. Mary's Hospital, then transferred to the Navy hospital ship USS Haven.

Skunk Routs Crowd at Fire --Firemen, Too

In Cypress: "The Sweet Smell of Distress"

Firemen Battle to Keep Flames from Felling Utility Pole in Debris-Strewn Field

Staff Photos by BOB SHUMWAY

By DAVID SLAW

Most firemen will tell you they usually have more trouble with people than with flames.

They can turn their hoses on the flames. The people, taxpayers — pushing, pressing, yelling, interfering — require less direct, more time-consuming treatment.

Volunteer firefighters from Cypress and Los Alamitos found a new method of crowd dispersal Saturday when a small skunk strolled by a fire on the 40-acre site of the proposed Cypress Junior College, Lincoln Avenue and Valley View Street.

The skunk chased the spectators away quicker than you could say, "Phew!"

But he also chased the firemen away.

When they regrouped — holding hoses with one hand and noses with the other— it took only 45 minutes to extinguish the blaze. Several sheds, shacks and barns were damaged, and nearby utility poles were burned slightly.

No one was injured.

Even the skunk escaped unscathed.

Now if the fire department could recruit him to show up at fires in the future . . .

APCD Takes Aim on Solvent Smog

From Our Los Angeles Bureau

A proposed new antismog law to regulate the emission of solvents such as carbon tetrachloride, acetone and kerosene will be considered by county supervisors at a public hearing July 28.

Louis J. Fuller, county air pollution control officer, said solvents add about 600 tons of hydrocarbons to the air daily, and that many of them are "even more active than gasoline in causing eye-irritation and other symptoms of smog."

Fuller called the solvents the "last major source of smog-forming hydrocarbons, other than the automobile.

He emphasized the new regulation, Rule 66, is not aimed at, and would not apply, to small users of solvents.

It would affect a broad range of industry, however, as solvents are used in almost all types of painting and surface-coating, as well as in degreasing and dry cleaning and in the manufacture of paints, rubber, plastics, adhesives and pharmaceuticals.

Major contributors to the emission of solvents, Fuller said, are automobile manufacturing plants, aircraft manufacturers, furniture manufacturers, plants making beer cans, and printing industries, particularly lithography.

Processes involving baking of enamel or other finishes would be limited to 15 pounds per day without control methods.

The new rule also would apply to manufacturers of house paint, requiring all finishes sold in Loos Angeles County after July 1, 1967, to contain APCD-approved solvents.

Two LSTs Recommissioned Here for Return to Duty

Two tank landing ships were recommissioned Saturday at Long Beach Naval Shipyard.

They were the USS Hampshire County, commanded by Lt. E. E. White, and the USS Pitkin County, whose captain is Lt. C. E. Quarles.

Capt. J. J. Love Jr., commanding officer of the attack transport USS Navarro, was the speaker at the commissioning ceremony. He represented Vice Adm. Bernard Roeder, commander, Pacific Amphibious Forces.

The tank landing ship (LST) is one of the Navy's "work horses" in the Viet Nam war, constantly carrying troops and supplies.

"Despite advances in new assault concepts there is still need to land and support troops in over-the-beach operations, as has been proven in Viet Nam. This is where the LSTs are invaluable to the Navy," Capt. Love said.

The Pitkin County was commissioned originally in 1945 and participated in the closing months of World War II and also in Korea. She was decommissioned in 1955.

Hampshire County joined the fleet in November 1944, served through Korea and was decommissioned in 1955.

Both were assigned to the Pacific Reserve Fleet in San Diego after decommissioning.

New Principals for 7 Schools in Grove

Seven Garden Grove elementary schools will have new principals when classes resume in the fall.

Dave Weilein, principal at Sunnyside school, will move to Patton School, replacing James Mark who is moving to Fountain Valley School District. Mrs. Peggy McKillip goes to Sunnyside School.

Frank Noe, principal at the Brookhurst School, moves to Paine School to replace William Yoak, new director of the Neighborhood Youth Corps project. Laurence Vike, of the West Covina School district, will replace Noe.

Leroy Morton, principal of the Clinton School, will trade places with Mrs. Helen Kingsbury at Stanley School.

Mrs. Jessie Webster, district elementary coordinator, goes to Morningside School, replacing Glenn Davis who moves to the Paramount School District.

Holiday Toll Low in State

One less person died in California traffic accidents during the Fourth of July holidays than is normally killed in similar mishaps on nonholiday Saturdays, Sundays and Mondays, according to the State Department of Public Works.

The department attributed the low fatality rate largely to heavy use of freeways instead of byways during the critical period.

Figures compiled by the Division of Highways in cooperation with the Highway Patrol showed that only eight of 46 holiday traffic fatalities occurred on freeways.

Ailing Plane Sets Down on Beach

A single-engine airplane stalled over crowded Cabrillo Beach Saturday afternoon and made a forced landing on the strand, Harbor Division police reported.

The pilot, Earl Silvers, 31, of 4703 Pixie Ave., Lakewood, and his passenger, Ron Maurceri, 28, of Santa Monica, were unhurt and the plane was not damaged in the emergency landing.

Lifeguards at the beach said hundreds of bathers watched the small plane take off about four hours later after Silvers was able to restart his stalled engine.

Natural Gas Price Control Relief Sought

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Natural gas producers are gradually perfecting an organization to lead another campaign to ask Congress for relief from federal price controls.

Target dates and specific objectives of the campaign are closely guarded secrets.

The nationwide gas supply committee was organized last October. So far, its objectives have been spelled out only as "an effort to obtain congressional relief to the gas industry."

No further elaboration was made last week when William O. Senter, a retired Air Force general, became the group's executive vice president and chairman of the steering committee.

* * * *

THERE WAS early indication the group planned to place before Congress early next year some form of a bill clarifying the authority of the Federal Power Commission to regulate the wellhead prices of gas sold into interstate commerce.

Since then there has been some speculation the campaign may be delayed until a federal court rules on legality of the FPC's area formula for controlling prices. The case is now before the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals at Denver. The outcome is certain to be appealed and attorneys close to the situation do not believe the Supreme Court can make a final ruling before the spring of 1968.

A final ruling at that time, could inject the matter into the 1698 presidential campaign.

* * * *

PRESIDENT JOHNSON, as a member of Congress, was a prime backer of decontrol bills that were vetoed in 1948 and 1956. He has taken no position on the matter since moving to the White House but the 1964 Democratic platform had words of praise for the FPC while detailing "effective government representation and protection for consumers."

The platform said an upward spiral in natural gas prices had been halted "by vigorous regulatory action of the Federal Power Commission and the nation's 36 million customers of natural gas have benefited from rate reductions and refunds in excess of $600 million.

The 1964 Republican platform called for "an end to power-grabbing regulatory actions" but included no direct reference to gas price controls.

* * * *

GAS PRODUCERS have spearheaded the organization of the nationwide committee but plans call for active participation by pipeliners, distributors and other segments of the energy industry. Spokesmen for the coal industry also have indicated they will lend support.

J. Avery Rush Jr., Amarillo, Tex., told the Independent Petroleum Association of America in May of plans for a 100-member advisory committee that would include coal as well as other segments of the gas industry.

"The main thing now is to get the industry together on the need for congressional relief," Rush said.

"We have available the organization, talent and money to do the job we think must be done."

AIDE SAYS

Dogs Share Blame for Car Accidents

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) While the auto industry and its critics argue whether cars or drivers are mostly responsible for traffic accidents, a state official says dogs must share some of the blame.

Commissioner Joseph N. Gill of agriculture and natural resources has written all dog wardens, prosecutors and police officials that roaming dogs have become a "serious problem" and are causing traffic accidents.

A dog owner who does allow his dog to run wildly may be fined $25, jailed for 30 days, or both.

DISTURBED SLEEP
The hum of activity is heard these days in Uncle Sam's mothball fleet, as ships which have been preserved in various parts of the country are reconditioned. Here sailor Rudy Longoria accents a sign which is going out of date at the Norfolk Navy Yard, Norfolk, Va. In the background is R12, a headquarters ship, with a cocooned gun on the turret still showing its mothball status.

Wake Up! Mothball Fleet Answers Call

Editor's note—Once again the mothball fleet is paying off, this time in Viet Nam. The Navy has called up 24 warships and the maritime Administration is sending 101 cargo ships. It costs $5.5 million a year to maintain the reserve fleets, but it's still a bargain.

By J. W. DAVIS

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—The big black and white sign at dockside admonishes: "Quiet please! Uncle Sam's ships are resting here."

But now, once again, some of these retired warships, after a Rip Van Winkle sleep in one corner of the big Norfolk Navy Yard, are going back to war — Viet Nam.

In more than a dozen anchorages across the country, other ships—both warships and merchant vessels —beginning a new life, with new journeys to war. These ships have been preserved for just such need by the Maritime Administration and the Navy.

These are the "mothball fleets," dating back to the end of World War II, serving even while they stand and wait. The call first came when the Korean War broke out. It came again at the time of the closing of the Suez Canal, and it is being sounded anew from Southeast Asia.

* * * *

THE GHOSTLIKE quiet of peaceful times is broken now by the purposeful noise that reverses the process which put the ships to sleep.

"All we need are men," says Cmdr. Frank Kalasinsky, proud of the condition of the laid-up warships under his command at Norfolk. Most of them are destroyers, but there are some rocket ships, various types of landing craft.

Kalasinksy, 51, is retiring after nearly 31 years in the Navy—"They're putting ME in mothballs." His successor, Cmdr. Cecil Wood, feels the same way he does about the reserve ships.

"They can do a job," says Wood.

There's the same sort of enthusiasm shown by Almon (Al) Briggs, 48, acting fleet superintendent for 300 merchant ships at the Maritime Administration berths in the James River of Virginia.

* * * *

"LOOK AT those ships," Briggs said on a boat ride around the James River reserve fleet. "Some of them have been there 20 years, but they are still good. Some weren't used more than two years, and their machinery is nearly new."

"No one can call them rust buckets," said Charles A. Hurst of the Maritime Administration, making the inspection tour.

Maritime Administration officials and the Navy have learned a lot about better ways to preserve ships since World War II. Now vessels can be kept in such good shape they can be made ready for sea in six to eight weeks.

A year ago the Maritime Administration got its first call for Viet Nam supply ships—a total of 101 ships, a $40 million job. The order is now being filled, in groups of 25.

* * * *

THESE CARGO ships are not fast, they can carry huge amounts of arms, ammunition, medical supplies, food, clothing and other equipment. And 98% of what goes to Viet Nam goes by ship, even in these days of air freight.

Costs have been going up. At the time of the Korean War, 150 merchant ships were taken out of the reserve, and it cost an average of $250,000 to put them into service. Today the figure is $400,000 per ship.

In addition to the 101 merchant ships for Viet Nam, the Navy has pulled 24 warships from its reserve, their guns ready to fire after removal of protective cocoons. Three are rocket ships, one a fire support ship, two are small aircraft carriers for transporting planes, one is a repair ship and 17 are landing ships.

The Navy's mothball fleet numbers approximately 600 ships, mostly destroyers, dispersed in six groups: at Bremerton, Wash., Mare Island and San Diego, Calif.; Norfolk; Orange, Tex.; and Philadelphia.

* * * *

THERE ARE four battleships in reserve — the New Jersey, Iowa and Wisconsin at Philadelphia, and the Missouri at Bremerton. For a time there was talk that one of the battleships might be reactivated for heavy shelling along the Viet Nam coast. However, Adm. David L. McDonald, cheif of naval operations, said in May that it had been decided the idea was "not worthwhile under present circumstances."

The Maritime Administration, a part of the Commerce Department, has charge of the National Defense Reserve Fleet, which keeps its mothballed merchant ships in eight berthing areas. There are a total of 1,365 ships, of which 841 are "preserved" as useful to national defense and 524 are destined for scrap. This is the distribution:

| | Preserved | Scrap |
|---|---|---|
| Hudson River, N.Y. | 99 | 65 |
| James River, Va. | 168 | 145 |
| Wilmington, N.C. | 0 | 69 |
| Mobile, Ala. | 114 | 87 |
| Beaumont, Tex. | 113 | 41 |
| Suisun Bay, Calif. | 185 | 65 |
| Astoria, Ore. | 34 | 52 |
| Olympia, Wash. | 128 | 0 |

* * * *

THE PRESERVED ships include: 366 naval auxiliaries, 341 dry cargo vessels, tankers, refrigerator ships and tugs, and 134 passenger-cargo ships.

The Maritime Administration figures it costs from $1,500 to $5,000 per year to preserve a ship. The hull, decks and superstructures are scaled and then coated with special preservatives once each two years. Cargo holds, living quarters and other inside spaces are cleaned and coated every four years.

Machinery and exposed external surfaces receive a coating of preservatives once each five years. At the same interval electric motors and generators are disassembled, cleaned, treated with coating and reassembled.

Ship bottoms are kept under cathodic protection, a development that borders on the sensational. In this method, electrical currents are used to divert corrosion away from useful metal surfaces and into throw-away blocks of graphite.

* * * *

ONE OF THE latest techniques is the preservation of machinery spaces by dehumidification. This has been applied to the more recent addition to the reserve fleet and probably will be used more and more. If the relative humidity is kept under control, there is little deterioration, rust or oxidation, the ship preservers have found.

The Maritime Administration figures that the cost of the reserve fleet program runs around $5.5 million a year, and points out that this is on an inventory that would cost billions to replace.

Facelifting Due on Papal Palace

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—The Papal Palace, plagued by cracks and old age, is getting a facelifting.

The work, which has been under way for some time, does not affect the wing where the papal apartment is located. Vatican officials and workmen have been unwilling to comment on the purpose and importance of the work, but at least part of it is obviously intended to fix cracks which developed in ceilings and vaults.

A steel tube scaffolding has sprung up on the north side of the Apostolic Palace—facing inside the Vatican and on the opposite side of the building from the papal apartments.

In the courtyard of the Holy Office, inside the palace and near the Pope's private elevator, a few ground floor windows have been bricked up and a door has been reinforced with bricks.

* * * *

WORKERS on another scaffolding are working on the wall overlooking the second flight of the stairs of St. Pius X, which leads from the Via Sant'Anna to the Holy Office courtyard. Cracks are visible in an arch over the stairs, which supports a wing of the Apostolic Palace.

Vatican experts have denied past reports that the Apostolic Palace—a maze of various buildings erected under successive popes between the 13th and 17th centuries—is in danger of coming down. But it has been obvious for some time that some repairs and consolidation work was needed.

The latest strain imposed on the building came from the construction last year of a rooftop garden where Pope Paul VI can spend some time in the rare intervals of his work. The roof garden, with a cement floor, covers most of the building's roof, but is not visible from the ground because the roof edge was left as it was to keep the silhouette of the palace unchanged.

THERE WERE reports a few months ago that the weight of the cement terrace had endangered the stability of the building and that Pope Paul might have to move to the Lateran Palace at the other end of Rome pending reinforcement of the palace in the Vatican. Officials discounted those reports and there has been no recent indication that a move was planned.

THE BUSINESS WEEK

Stock Market Begins to Show Recovery Signs

By JAMES T. McAUSLAND

NEW YORK (UPI)—The stock market began to show signs of recovery in last week and the diehard bulls attributed the comeback to the highly advertised, historical summer rally. Trading was moderately active.

The recovery, slow in starting, reached its peak on Wednesday when the Dow Jones Industrial Average, a closely watched market barometer, scored its second highest advance of the year but then petered out in the last two sessions as traders moved in to take profits.

Brokers have varied reasons for the market's strength but the consensus was that the market was correcting itself. With no real selling pressure behind the decline it stopped short of penetrating the 1966 lows. This in itself attracted support and, additionally the recovery was helped by reports that investment houses were purchasing large blocks of stock at higher prices.

NEWS FROM the Viet Nam front showed a mixed picture. Early in the week investors were cheered when a Washington official hinted that North Viet Nam might be getting "war weary."

These hopes were dimmed by later news that a Warsaw Pact conference would send volunteers to North Viet Nam if the government there requested them.

Great expectations for corporate results began to materialize when RCA announced record sales and ernings both for the second quarter and first half of the year.

Several other companies had improved reports but the bulk of the earnings news is still to come. If this early pace can be maintained brokers feel chances are good a real rise may get under way.

FUNDAMENTAL news such as lagging car sales and the continued decline in steel production were discounted for the most part as seasonal.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average finished the week with a gain of 16.08 at 894.04. This is well above the low for the year, reached in May, but many analysts feel the market must decisively penetrate the 900 level, which has become a major upside resistance area, before a sustained advance can be accomplished.

Rails had a strong week, with their indicator jumping 6.05 to 233.30; the utility average gained 2.97 to 154.63 as that group finally moved out ofthe doldrums.

Standard & Poor's 500 stock index rose 2.00 to 87.61.

TRADING GOT off to a slow post-holiday start but picked up as the week wore on. For the four sessions, volume totaled 24,794,026 shares compared with 30,139,250 shares in the five sessions the week before. In the same week last year turnover totaled 15,622,930 shares.

Of the 1,536 issues to cross the tape, 984 worked higher, 406 declined and 146 remained unchanged, while 46 issues hit new 1966 highs and 146 hit new lows.

A number of large block transactions pushed Ampex into first place on the active list. The issue advanced 2½ to 24 on sales of 503,100 shares. Sperry Rand, the previous week's volume leader, dropped to second place and finished the week unchanged at 27½ on a turnover of 435,000 shares.

Addressograph-Multigraph, which some analysts feel has finally increased its earning potential, advanced 7 points to 69⅝ on 363,300 shares and was third most active.

United Aircraft plunged 6¼ to 78 on 331,000 shares following rumors that the company had been losing money in the second quarter but when officials stoutly denied these reports the stock pared its loss in the final session.

The high-flying glamor issues, once again, reaped the king-size portion of the gain.

* * * *

THE THREAT of the strike by the machinists union against five major domestic airlines gave the lines some trouble early in the week but when the strike was called on Friday, this group gave a good performance recalling the Wall Street adage, "Never sell on strike news."

KLM paced the gainers, jumping 8¾ and National advanced 4¼. Delta, Braniff, Northwest and TWA also made good progress. Several airlines announced record passenger and revenue milage for the month of June.

Fairchild Camera was the feature in the higher electronics, soaring 19¾. Motorola jumped 7¼ and Admiral was up 4⅛. IBM, Honeywell and Texas Instruments also made the plus column.

Steels had a dull week after showing promise on Wednesday. Sharon Steel continued its winning ways, however, climbing 2⅝.

* * * *

MOTORS MADE good progress. Ford and General Motors each rose 2¾ and Chrysler added 1⅞ in active trading. American Motors picked up ¼. DuPont led the way for the higher chemicals, leaping 13 points. Eastman Kodak jumped 3⅛.

American Telephone remained in the limelight, gaining 1¾ in active dealings. Kennecott stood out in a higher metals groups, jumping 3¾. The company announced it might purchase Peabody Coal. Peabody advanced 5½. Xerox climbed 6. Poloroid rose 7. Corning Glass gained 11½.

Griggs Awaits Term in Ex-Wife's Death; Body Found in L.B.

By FRED HAMLIN

DONALD LEE GRIGGS
Awaits Sentencing

Donald Lee Griggs, accused of slaying his ex-wife and hurling her nude bludgeoned body into the Los Angeles River shortly before last New Year's Eve, is in County Jail awaiting sentence for manslaughter.

The 35-year-old self-employed plasterer, confined without bail since his arrest after the body of Kitty Jo Griggs was found in the riverbed at Long Beach Jan. 16, was convicted by a Superior Court jury after a two-week trial.

Date for sentencing has not been set.

Postmortem examination disclosed the victim died of massive head wounds, presumably inflicted with a blunt instrument before her body, stripped of clothing, was thrown into the rain-swollen river.

Long Beach police identified the corpse through fingerprints as a 34-year-old Highland Park divorcee, mother of two young children, who was reported missing New Year's Day and who had last been seen the night of Dec. 29 outside a Highland Park bar with her former husband.

* * * *

HIGHLAND PARK authorities questioned and then arrested Griggs after, officers said, he admitted being with his ex-wife Dec. 29 but told what they called conflicting stories about his whereabouts that night. A complaint of first-degree murder later was filed against him.

Officers said Mrs. Griggs was slain during the night of Dec. 29-30 and her body hurled into the river at Arroyo Seco, about 25 miles upstream from where it was found two weeks later by three teen-age boys.

Court records show Griggs and his wife were divorced twice, the last time in September, 1962, and that he later remarried. The couple's son was living with Griggs at the time of the slaying, and their daughter had been staying with Mrs. Griggs, who shared an apartment in Highland Park with a woman friend.

Suspension on Bar Due to Embrace

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO—An onstage embrace between an exotic dancer and a sailor will cost a San Pedro beer bar a 30-day suspension.

That was the ruling of the state over a three-count complaint filed Nov. 12 against Li'l Farmer's Daughter, 135 W. Sixth St., San Pedro.

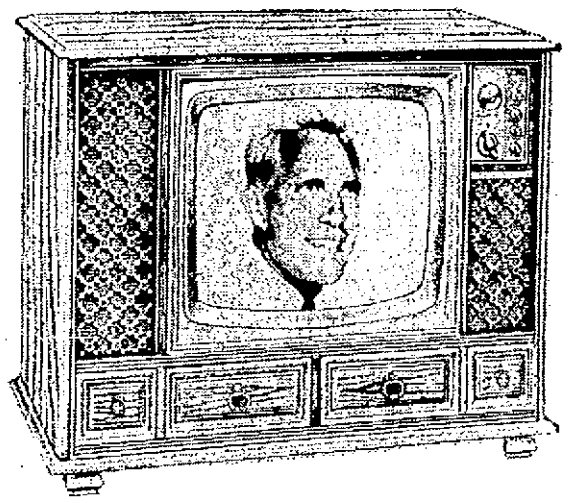

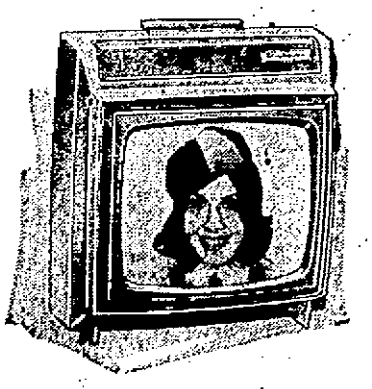

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Department charged that the embrace was "lewd entertainment."

ABC, accepting the recommendation of a hearing officer, ruled that 20 days of the suspension could be stayed provided there is no further penalty decision. Lesser 15-day suspensions, set to run concurrently, also were ordered on two other counts. One count was sales to minors, the other allowing minors to consume beer on the premises.

New Jersey to Test New 'Fog Broom'

NEW YORK (UPI) — New Jersey Highway Commissioner Russell H. Mullen said Saturday that a new device to wipe out fog—called a fog broom—is ready for full-scale outdoor testing.

Laboratory tests have been highly effective, said Mullen. He described the fog broom as a "wooden frame with thin strands of nylon on it, mounted on a road, and we rotate it."

The fog then condenses on the nylon string and the moisture drains to the ground, Mullen said. "Our next step now will be to find some foggy outdoors area and have a test to determine how we can install these on the highway system to help alleviate the fog problem."

Mullen said the highway department had received inquiries about the fog broom from other states, other countries and many commercial firms.

Foundation Aiding Press Scholarships

The James Irvine Foundation will again post $1,500 to help the Orange County Press Club underwrite scholarships it grants anually to student journalists in the county's high schools, junior colleges, colleges and universities.

The foundation granted $1,500 last year when it first joined the Press Club's effort to upgrade professional journalism and encourage promising young people to make journalism their careers.

The club has underwritten scholarships on its own for nine years, President Jerome Collins reminded. He announced the competitions will be in October, with selections to be announced in November, under chairmanship of Vi Ehinger.

Dial a Disc

LEEDS, England (UPI) — A new telephone service called "dial a disc" is being tried here. For the price of a local call, residents can hear the latest hit record.

R. L. Poper Joins Architect Group

Richard L. Poper has been named to the architectural board of the Los Altos Association, it was announced today by the board of directors.

Poper, of the Long Beach firm of Jones and Poper, was the architect for many residences in the association including several custom designs in Park Estates.

"We feel the addition of Dick Poper to our architectural board is another major step in our continuing effort to provide the best possible services to our Los Altos community," said association president Stephen J. Harney.

The architectural board of the Los Altos Association maintains the design standards for homes of the 5,300 members.

The award-winning architect is a graduate of the University of Southern California school of architecture. He grew up in Long Beach and attended both Wilson High and Long Beach City College.

Poper is active in professional and civic affairs including the American Institute of Architects, the Chamber of Commerce, the Century Club and the St. Mary's Hospital advisory board. He and his wife, Phyllis, were founding members of the Los Altos Methodist Church.

The Popers live at 2288 Albury Avenue with their children, Roy, Penny Lee and James.

Sub Duty to Torpedo Film Career

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Submarine duty will torpedo Anthony Teague's movie career just as he gets up a full head of steam.

Teague, 26, a tall, toothily handsome singer-dancer-actor, starts two years' active service in the Naval Reserve as soon as he finishes as the villain in "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying."

He chose submarines for "the adventure. They're something not too many people have experienced."

Juvenile Officer Gives Parents 'Tip'

Sgt. Andrew B. Pearson, who has retired after 23 years as a Long Beach Juvenile Officer, is returning to his old vocation, farming, but it will be a "leisurely avocation" this time.

In addition, Pearson will travel, fish and pursue his long time hobby of accordion playing with the farm at Wall Lake, Iowa, as his permanent residence.

Thinking back over the years and the number of children he has seen in trouble, Pearson has a few tips to offer parents.

1. Make it your business to know where your child is, who he is with and what they are doing.

2. Promote closer family relationships. Do things together. Don't let today's fast pace break down close family ties.

3. See to it that your child gets a good religious education. It will stand them in good stead all their lives.

4. Don't encourage your children to grow up too fast, or to become too sophisticated at an early age. They lack the necessary experience and are a cinch to get into trouble.

On the whole, Pearson said, he has found the great majority of parents are conscientious in trying to raise their children properly and that most children are good young citizens.

Pearson played with Violet Berggren's orchestra at the old Cinderella Ballroom on East Seaside Blvd. for 14 years and for many years with the police department's quartet, the Beat Men. He also appeared at many civic functions and on television.

Now Assures Service of Equal Excellence From TWO Locations

The Dilday Family has risen to a position of leadership among Long Beach-area funeral firms through service . . . friendly, high quality, dignified service. Some families have had to go out of their way to be served here, but evidently they've felt that the excellence of the assistance they received was worth any added inconvenience.

Now — we have taken a momentous stride in assuring both excellence and convenience for families throughout this area by assuming ownership and management of Lakewood Mortuary. You may choose whichever location is more convenient to you with equal confidence, for the Dilday Family of funeral directors is available to serve at both.

Beautiful Facilities

The Dilday Family Lakewood Mortuary is modern and spacious, and is decorated to provide truly tasteful surroundings for visitations and funerals. Perhaps the most impressive feature of the building is the Chapel of Prayer, with an arched, wood-beam ceiling and pews which will accommodate over 250 people.

Personal Attention

Members of the Dilday Family and staff, the same personnel whose skill and understanding have merited your confidence at our Pacific Avenue Mortuary, will also serve at our Lakewood Mortuary. In fact, the only difference having two locations will make in our service is that it will be easily accessible to twice as many families!

Bradley, Merrins Ousted

By DOUG IVES

Steel-nerved Bob McCallister watched his opponent sink four consecutive birdie putts of over 22 feet and then fought back for an amazing 19th hole victory Saturday to become the sentimental as well as odds-on favorite today in the Southern California championship finals at Recreation Park.

His opposition in the 36-hole finale, to begin at 9:30 a.m., will be Bud Holscher, who has been in the title match four times in the last six years and who, like McCallister, did a lot of coming from behind to be in a position for the $3,000 top prize.

Scrambling all the way, Holscher outlasted sweet-swinging Eddie Merrins 1 up in the afternoon after rallying three times to beat Paul McGuire 2 up in the morning contest.

Still, it was the McCallister-Wally Bradley afternoon match that must rank with one of the greatest ever in this 42-year-old event. Certainly McCallister's comeback and Bradley's string of birdie putts left the large gallery oohing and aahing.

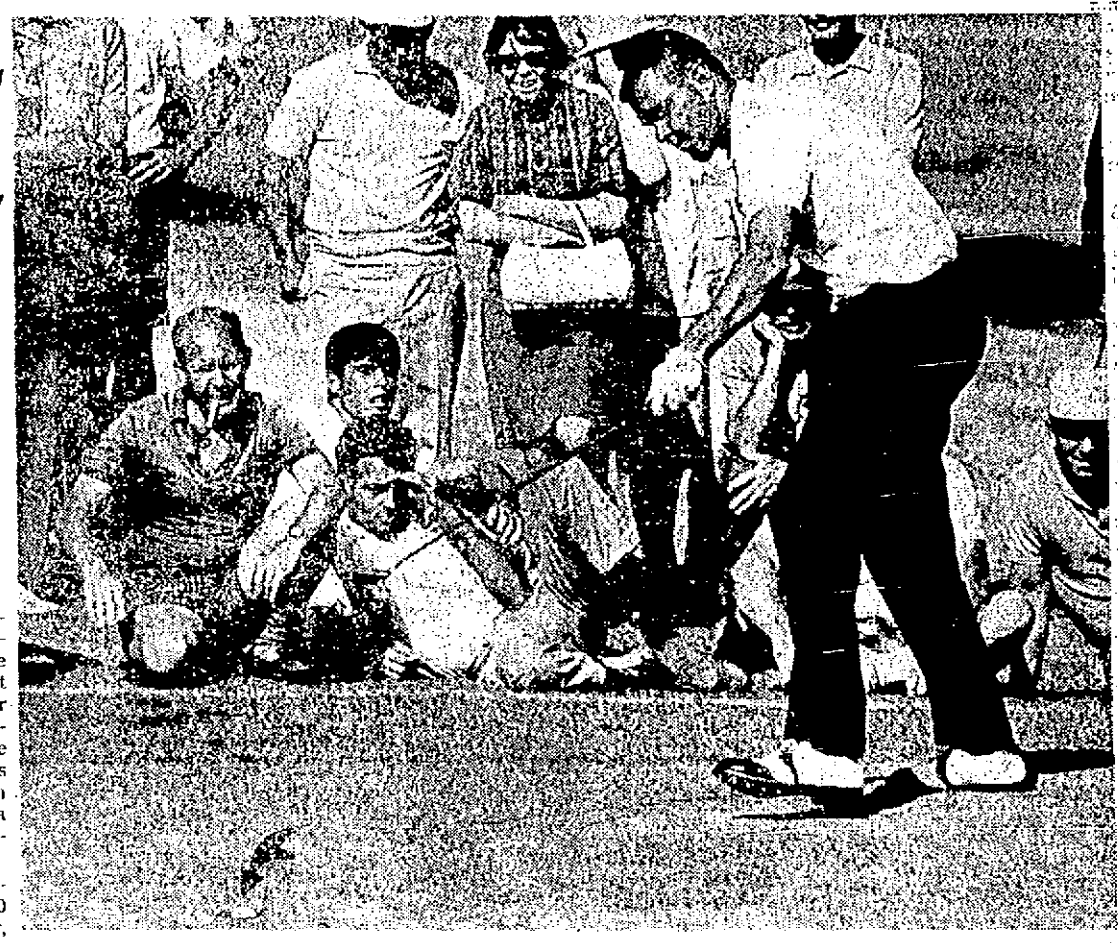

Both players shot 6-under par 66s for the 18 holes, with McCallister never leading and trailing from the 11th hole until he canned a 7-foot birdie putt on the 18th to even the match.

Then on the first extra hole it appeared all of the Corona strongboy's comeback efforts would go up in smoke as he left his second shot 25 feet short and Bradley chipped to within 4 feet.

Showing virtually no emotion prior to this time, even though he had plenty of reason to, McCallister danced a jig and flipped his putter two feet in the air when he rammed home his putt to switch the pressure onto Bradley.

BOB McCALLISTER (above) sinks 7-foot birdie putt on 18th hole to catch Wally Bradley (below), shown considering one of his many sensational taps. Bradley sank from 25, 22, 35 and 25 feet but missed 2½-footer that would have won semifinal on 17th. McCallister won on 19th.

Holy Jack! Halos Split

By ROSS NEWHAN
Staff Writer

BALTIMORE — Jackie Warner, who issued the Angels a play me or trade me prerogative earlier this week, delivered the Wright answer himself Saturday night.

Warner's two-run homer converted the resolute pitching of Clyde Wright and Minnie Rojas into a 2-1 nightcap victory over the awesome Birds.

Earlier, an Angel losing streak here reached 10 as the Big O's zeroed in on Dean Chance, Jack Sanford and Bob Lee for 15 hits and a 10-2 landslide.

Given a second chance, the Big A's held their ground, turned half of four hits into runs while Baltimore wasted 10 hits and assured themselves of a second consecutive successful safari.

While expanding their fourth place advantage over Minnesota to six games, the Angels lifted the record for this trip to 6-4 while achieving only their second win in 10 nightmares with the Orioles this season.

Through the opener, the Birds had feasted on 118 hits, including 16 homers, while scoring 63 runs in nine games with the Angels.

This was the magnitude of Wright's assignment.

And the 23-year-old lefty could do no wrong. He was racked for eight hits and a run through four rounds, but then regained the touch which produced an 8-1 decision in his major league debut and a heartbreaking 1-0 set-back in his ensuing start.

Inspired by the presence of his father, three brothers, one sister and "several kinfolk" who drove the 600 miles from his Jefferson City, Tenn., home, Wright did not allow a hit during the three crucial middle innings.

Then, "very tired," he retired and Rojas (1.22 ERA) preserved the thin margin with his fourth save. Ironically, manager Bill Rigney has special plans for Wright (3-2) following the All-Star break.

"We desperately need a lefthander in the bullpen and I think Wright would do a great job in relief," said Rigney. "From now on, Jack Sanford will be my spot starter."

Much to Warner's dissatisfaction, Rigney's platooning plans remain the same, Jackie will be in the lineup against lefty Steve Barber today, but righthanders will lodge Warner on the bench.

Warner splintered a Dave McNally (7-3) fast ball into the rightfield seats in the second after Bobby Knoop had singled up the middle.

Knoop had stranded seven runners in the opener, but Warner's seventh homer stranded the Orioles,

West Reigns --Fleet Host Derby Victor

By ERNIE MASON

While the three top choices staged a furious come-from-behind battle for runner-up honors, Fletcher Jones' lightly-regarded Fleet Host turned the 26th running of the $120,500 Hollywood Derby into a solo performance at Hollywood Park Saturday as he romped to a 2½ length win in the mile and one-quarter classic.

Perfectly rated by Jerry Lambert, who has had plenty of front-running experience on Native Diver, Fleet Host ran his early rivals into the ground with an opening mile in 1.35⅕ and then had enough speed in reserve to charge home with a final clocking of 2.00⅖.

It was the first stakes victory for Jones, a youthful Southern California electronics magnate who has invested heavily in yearling sales the past three years. But Fleet Host became a "bargain buy." The colt was purchased for $9,000 at the 1964 Del Mar sales and pumped $75,500 into the stable coffers with his win.

For his backers in the crowd of 48,084, it was a "bargain win," Fleet Host returning $39.20 for $2 on

Revival of Blades Puts Cooke on Spot

By RICH ROBERTS

We're being watched, quietly and from afar, as Jack Kent Cooke worries to resolve his hockey war with the Blades.

Officially, the National Hockey League takes no position in the dispute that could wreck its plans for expanding in 1967.

Without Los Angeles, expansion is doubtful. It's the keystone of national television plans already under way.

Statements emanating from Montreal merely back up the original grant of the franchise to Cooke, in that "there's no problem. He's our man until he fails to fulfill his commitments."

Ah, but there's the key to the Blades' case ". . . until he fails to fulfill his commitments."

The Independent, Press-Telegram is informed by a source close to NHL policy that the league's attitude is this:

"In the event that there shall be any valid claims by existing professional leagues or teams for territorial rights in the city of any new conditional franchise, such franchise shall not become final unless the new franchise holder has presented to the National Hockey League evidence satisfactory to the NHL of the satisfaction in full of such claims."

So, as far as the NHL is concerned, it's strictly between Cooke and the Blades.

Cooke, then, is on the spot to settle with the Blades, who have no intention of settling for anything short of the franchise itself.

"We made overtures to Dan Reeves some three weeks ago," Cooke says. "An intermediary informed our attorney, Deane Johnson, that the Blades were willing to talk. But when our attorney contacted their attorney, Mr. (Alfred) Marshall, he knew nothing about it. We haven't done anything since."

Obviously, Cooke would like to talk to the Blades about indemnities, the payoff customarily awarded to displaced teams.

But the Blades don't want Cooke's money. They want his franchise.

This opinion disputes the consensus view that Reeves is just looking for a fat payoff for not dragging expansion into the courts.

However, it's illogical that Reeves would have cut in Tony Owen, another unsuccessful bidder, for 50% of the action if he was just out for indemnities.

Reeves cut in Owen, who in turn cut in some associates of his own, as a fresh supply of capital to operate a successful minor league club — the Blades — this season.

In their first five years in Los Angeles, the Blades underestimated the importance of success in the minors, financially and artistically, and it cost them dearly in NHL prestige. They don't intend to repeat the error.

Executive director Jack Geyer says, "We'll spend

Home Runs of Braves Rip Dodgers

By GEORGE LEDERER

Sandy Koufax allowed three home runs for the first time in three years as the Dodgers' winning streak ended at five games Saturday night.

The Atlanta Braves handed Koufax his fourth defeat, 5-2, before a ladies night turnout of 55,170. Ken Johnson (8-6) was the winner.

The loss knocked the Dodgers five games behind the league-leading Giants.

Felipe Alou homered twice and Hank Aaron once for the four runs charged to Koufax.

Willie Davis' eight-inning homer, his third, produced the Dodger runs.

Johnson retired the side in order for the first time in the fifth inning and the Braves came out swinging in the sixth.

Alou hit his 19th home run and, one out later, Aaron belted No. 26 for a 2-0 lead.

There were two oddities on Alou's homer. The run was unearned because Roseboro dropped his four popup two pitches previously. Also, it was Alou's 18th homer with the bases empty.

Aaron's homer was his third at Dodger Stadium this year. He is the only opposing player with more than one here this season.

The last time Koufax allowed two homers in a game also was against the Braves. Bolling hit a grand slam and Jones a solo at Milwaukee last Sept. 22. The Dodgers came back to win 7-6 in 11 innings for the sixth win of their 13-game streak.

The two-homers-in-one-game statistic lasted only an inning. Alou homered again in the seventh, this time with a man on to make it 4-0. Woody Woodward had singled ahead of Alou's 20th.

Koufax also was taken off the hook the last time he allowed three homers in a game. Ernie Banks hit a pair and Ron Santo one against Koufax at Chicago, June 9, 1963, but the Dodgers won 11-8 and Koufax was not involved in the decision.

Koufax left for a hitter in the seventh, Dick Stuart grounding into an inning-ending force after Lefebvre

ARTHUR DALEY

Those N.Y. Giants Have Kick Coming

New York Times Service

NEW YORK—"The entire strategic approach to a football game," said Allie Sherman, "can be seriously affected by the lack of a reliable field goal kicker. The addition of Pete Gogolak should make life a lot easier for us."

Allie should know. The boy optimist who coaches the New York football Giants will preside at the opening of pre-season training camp at Fairfield University Monday, buoyed up by the knowledge that he no longer will have to contend with one major problem which bedeviled him at this time a year ago.

Then he had no experienced placement booter, only a slew of distressingly inaccurate feet. So the Giants kicked only four field goals in 25 attempts, and that doesn't count the number of times when they might ordinarily have tried but didn't bother because it was hopeless.

When Gogolak played out his option with the Buffalo Bills of the Other League and thus became a free agent, the Yankee Stadium tenants welcomed him to their midst because this soccer-type booter is an expert at his trade.

IN LIGHT OF THE GRAVITY of the handicap imposed on them by the unproductivity of their placements kickers a year ago, it's remarkable that the Giants rebounded with such violence from their collapse to last place the previous season. They tied for second with Dallas at 7-7. Certainly it isn't gaudy, but it is unmistakable progress.

"There are two ways of looking at a 7-7 record," said the realistic Allie. "It can be dismissed as .500 ball, or it can be regarded as I regard our showing, a strong 7-7. We gambled with rookies and the kids improved so fast over the second half of the season that they were saying near the end, "Gee, if we only had a few more games, we would win the championship.' I couldn't go that far, but I had to admire their spirit.

"Because those kids matured so fast, we've rebuilt both our offensive and defensive backfields. This year we'll try to rebuild our lines with special emphasis on our pass rush. Last year it was nondescript to say the least. But we've made trades, have key men returning from the injured list, and should get help from a great crop of rookies, especially Francis Peay and Don Davis.

"FURTHERMORE, WE NOW HAVE Earl Morrall, fifth leading passer in the league, settled into our system instead of being tossed unprepared among us just before the next-to-last exhibition game. He did a fine job and should do better because Gogolak will make such a tremendous difference in all strategic concepts.

"No longer will the quarterback be under the pressure of having to mount long drives. He can play his control percentages better, and once he gets inside the 30 where the defenses mass against him, he won't be forced to the utter necessity of having to hammer away for a first down. He can settle for a field goal.

"This makes the entire ball club more relaxed because they show tension when they know they don't have a reliable field goal kicker. A field goal still isn't as good as a touchdown, but it's better than no points at all and the empty, despairing feeling a team gets when a scoring drive ends in total frustration.

"I'd guess that we could have won a couple or three more games last year with a solid field goal kicker. But it's the timing of those three points that's so important, and the values can't always be measured in the final score.

"SOMETIMES THE PRESSURES created on the other fellow are more important than the points. Maybe he can be pressured into going for seven instead of three. Maybe his game plan can be disrupted by a succession of threes and a close one blown wide open. A Lou Groza, for instance, gives the defense the jitters once Cleveland gets much past midfield. Perhaps Gogolak can do the same for us.

"Since I'm speaking of kicking, I'd advise you to keep an eye on Ernie Koy. That boy is about to bring back the lost art of coffin-corner punting. Those kicks that go out of bounds inside the five. He also can quick-kick, although the modern tendency is to get away from yielding the ball.

"The older I get the more I think back to Slingin' Sammy Baugh. As far as kicking is concerned, Sammy was a victim of his own great passing. What a kicker he was! But his passing obscured his real craftsmanship as a punter, especially as a quick-kicker from the old single wing formation.

"I've seen him on third down not only boot those line drives over the head of the safety man, but angle them so artfully the ball would go out of bounds on the six-yard line. Don't forget that he holds the playoff record fore the longest punt, 85 yards."

Allie now can discuss all phases of kicking with a bubbling confidence. He couldn't last year.

Phils Survive 3 Cub HRs for 11-6 Win

CHICAGO (UPI) — Pitcher Larry Jackson hit a two-run homer and the Philadelphia Phillies survived three Chicago home runs Saturday to gain their 10th victory in 11 games this season with the Cubs, 11-6.

Jackson's blast and a squeeze bunt by Dick Groat gave the Phillies three runs in the sixth inning and they added two more in the seventh

Reds' Loss Skein Soars to 11, 8-7

Combined News Services

SAN FRANCISCO — Tom Haller hit a two-out, two-run homer in the 12th inning, giving the San Francisco Giants an 8-7 victory over Cincinnati Saturday and extending the Reds' losing streak to 11.

The victory enabled the Giants to maintain their two-game National League lead over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Reds, who have the longest losing streak in the majors this season, went ahead 7-6 with an unearned run in the top of the 12th on Tito Fuentes' error.

But with two out in the Giants' half of the inning Fuentes hit a trickler toward the mound. Pitcher Joe Nuxhall picked up the ball and fired to first. The ball, however, sailed into right field, and Fuentes reached second on the hit and error.

Haller then came up and hit his 19th homer.

The runs were the first of the game for the Giants that Willie McCovey did not drive in.

McCovey, having one of his great afternoons, sent the game into overtime by belting his second two-run homer of the contest in the bottom of the ninth to tie the score at 6-6. Southpaw Bill McCool, who had taken over for the injured Jim Maloney in the seventh, served up the home run ball.

McCovey, who now has 17 homers this year, smashed a two-run shot in the first inning, drove across another tally in the fifth with a 400-foot double, then hit a single off Maloney's knee in the seventh to drive in his fourth run. The hit sent Maloney to the hospital for X-rays.

The Reds, with the aid of a bases-empty homer by Art Shamsky, held a 6-3 lead when the Giants came to bat in the seventh.

DODGERS--

and Kennedy had singled. Sandy allowed four runs on seven hits, walked one and struck out three.

Bob Miller became the Dodger pitcher in the eighth, making his first appearance since June 25.

The home stand ends today with Claude Osteen (11-6) opposing Denny Lemaster (6-5).

It was almost 9 when the last of the capacity crowd was seated, but the stragglers didn't miss much.

Koufax labored through the first inning, making 25 pitches, although only lead-off batter Felipe Alou hit the ball out of the infield. Alou doubled sharply down the left field line and remained at second while Mack Jones fanned, Hank Aaron fouled out, Rico Carty walked and Torre popped up.

The Braves managed only one more base runner through the fifth inning. Carty was safe on a rare John Kennedy error in the fourth and reached second on the same play when rookie left fielder Jim Barbieri's throw was wild.

Johnson had trouble in each of the first four innings, although only one Dodger reached third base.

Barbieri led off with a bunt single, but was out at third after Frank Bolling muffed Maury Wills' grounder. Johnson balked Wills to second, but got Willie Davis on strikes and Ron Fairly on a pop to end the inning.

A threat in the second inning ended as only the Dodgers can end one. Johnson walked John Roseboro to start it and gave up singles to Wes Parker and Jim Lefebvre, but there were two out when Lefebvre made his turn at first.

Lefebvre actually singled into a double play. Aaron threw out Roseboro at the plate and Torre nailed Parker, attempting to take third. Kennedy hit into a force to end it.

Wills bounced into a double play after Barbieri walked in the third and Lefebvre flied out after Roseboro singled and Parker walked in the fourth. Johnson caught W. Davis' liner in self-defense to start the inning.

Fryman's Scoreless String Broken, But Pirates Win

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Rookie Woody Fryman had his consecutive scoreless inning streak snapped at 31⅓ Saturday but pitched the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 6-3 victory over the New York Mets with the help of Willie Stargell's three runs-batted-in.

Fryman, who won his fourth straight game while raising his record to 8-3 scattered eight hits as he lost his bid for a fourth straight shutout in the fifth inning. Ron Hunt singled in Billly Murphy, who singled and went to second on a sacrifice, to snap Fryman's string.

The Mets added a run in the eighth when Cleon Jones tripled and scored on Roy McMillan's sacrifice fly and in the ninth when Chuck Hiller hit a pinch triple and scored on a passed ball.

Stargell singled in a first-inning run and hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning, his 22nd of the season, to lead the Pirate attack.

The Pirates also scored two in the fifth when Jose Pagan doubled in two runs after Manny Mota beat out a bunt and took third on Roberto Clemente's double.

McLain's 13th Tops Twins, 8-1

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL (UPI)—Al Kaline drove in four runs with two homers and a sacrifice fly Saturday to combine with Denny McLain in leading the Detroit Tigers to a 8-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

McLain held the Tigers to two hits in registering his 13th victory. One of the hits was a home run by Tony Oliva, in the seventh, which not only broke up McLain's shutout bid but also snapped his string of scoreless innings against the Twins at 22.

Zoilo Versalles led off for the Twins in the first inning with a clean single and from that point until Oliva stroked his 17th homer, McLain had allowed only one man to reach first.

Holy Homer! Angels Stop Baltimore to Gain Split

whose record since June 1 is indeed something to crow about.

The first game was indicative of the destruction Baltimore is showing throughout the junior circuit, which is growing old in a hurry under the Orioles' runaway feet.

They were leading only 2-1 after six when the roof descended and Baltimore shingled seven runs to the scoreboard in the seventh and eighth.

Brooks (No. 17) and Frank (No. 21) Robinson each slugged two-run homers while Luis Aparicio collected three singles and equalled two Oriole records by scoring four times and stealing three bases.

Robinson thus regained his league RBI lead from Boog Powell, 70-67, while F. Robinson (56) ranks third.

This made it easy for Jim Palmer (9-4) and Eddie Fisher while Dean Chance (7-10) absorbed his eighth defeat in 14 career decisions with Baltimore.

The American League race reminds you of the television commercial in which the young boy runs through the woods crying, "Oriole, Oriole, Oriole."

It is doubtful this cookie will crumble.

ANGEL ANGLES: Victory in opener was 1,000th by Baltimore since re-joining the American League in 1954 . . . While breaking up a double play in seventh inning of first game, Jose Cardenal was hit on the right forearm by Aparicio's throw and could not play the nightcap . . . Ice treatments are expected to have him ready for today's action . . . Baltimore catcher Vic Roznovsky split the middle finger of his right hand and left after the second inning . . . This was fourth time Aparicio has stolen three bases . . . Ed Kirkpatrick made his initial start of season at first base in second game . . . Joe Adcock left Saturday morning for his Coushatta, La., ranch to attend to an illness in the family . . . A pulled groin muscle restricted Norm Siebern's activity to one game.

Los Angeles baseball writers have contributed $100 to Baltimore ball boy Jay Mazzone's All-Star trip . . . A satisfied lad, Mazzone lost both hands in a fire when he was 2½ . . . Brooks Robinson has hit in 25 of the last 27 games and Aparicio 38 of the last 42 . . . Barber (10-7), with an eight-game winning streak, faces George Brunet (8-5) in today's twilight tussle which will be televised on KTLA (5) at 2:30 . . . Angels resume action Thursday night, opening three-game series with Boston at the Big A . . . It's a brief five-game stand which includes only Sunday doubleheader against Washington, following the Red Sox.

Largest Card Turnout Sees 7-1 Triumph

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ray Washburn pitched St. Louis to its first victory over Houston in five games this season as the Cardinals whipped the Astros 7-1 Saturday night before a capacity crowd of 47,650.

The crowd, attracted by a bat night promotion, was the largest ever to see a sports event in St. Louis.

Washburn, who had a six-hit shutout until the Astros pushed across their run in the eighth inning, was supported by a 13-hit attack that included a key double by Charley Smith in a three-run second inning and a two-run homer by Jerry Buchek in the fourth.

The Cardinals collected the five runs off 19-year-old Larry Dierker, who had a 3-0 record against St. Louis over two seasons.

In the second inning, Mike Shannon singled, Smith doubled and one run scored on a fielder's choice and Sonny Jackson's error.

RICH ROBERTS

The Fervor of Lefebvre

"I think the hardest part is living the life of a ballplayer. . . being in public all the time. The easiest part is playing the game."—Jim Lefebvre of the Dodgers.

The National League's All-Star second baseman leaned into his lunchtime breakfast like a hanging curve ball and probed the ironies of baseball.

A week ago Jim Lefebvre and Bart Shirley were Dodger roommates at a downtown Los Angeles hotel. Tuesday Shirley will be in Spokane and Lefebvre will be in St. Louis, putting them at the opposite poles of baseball.

"I really did think a little bit about that, taking Bart to the airport," Lefebvre says, gulping down his orange juice and carving a clean slice in half a cantaloupe.

"You realize that this is a game where people forget real easy. You can be a star one day and the next day you're a bum. You see a guy like this, who came up but really didn't have much of a chance to play because . . . we had Maury Wills and John Kennedy, so he really didn't have a position to play.

"But he wasn't bitter at all. He could have been. He told me, 'You have to be lucky in this game. I sure hope I'm lucky now'."

LEFEBVRE IS PLAYING only his second season of major league ball himself, and in other circumstances it might have been Shirley driving him to the airport. However, Jim is intelligent enough to realize that even rookies of the year aren't that far from the farm.

"I always felt the sophomore jinx was more of a mental thing than anything else," he says, shoving aside the hollow cantaloupe skin. "A player goes out his first year and has a good year, makes the ball club and feels he's got it made and doesn't have to work hard anymore.

"Then he goes out and has a bad year and they call it the 'sophomore jinx.' I just watched other guys and could see their attitudes, and decided it wasn't going to happen to me."

For his budding 23 years, Jim is not embarrassed when asked for an estimate of his own abilities.

"I feel I'm the best second baseman in the league," he says without bravado. "Of course, (Houston's Joe) Morgan won the vote, and it's a shame he's hurt and can't play because I know what kind of ballplayer he is. He's a real hard worker and it probably means a lot to him. He's a great guy.

"I don't think it's positive thinking when you go around saying, 'I'm the best . . . I'm the best.' If you really don't believe you're the best it's just false confidence.

"But if a guy really feels that he is the best player out there then I feel that he can play much better. It's a matter of relaxing. He knows he's a good ballplayer. He doesn't have to go out there and show everybody. He just goes out there and plays good baseball."

LEFEBVRE, IGNORING the poached eggs for the moment, slops catsup on his hashed browns and attacks the steak.

"Last year I lived down at the beach with my folks. It took me about 45 minutes to drive to the ballpark. I was fighting the traffic, and by the time I got to the park I was a nervous wreck.

"So now I'm in the hotel here where I can have my meals, have somebody make my bed, somebody else take care of my clothes . . . don't have to worry about driving here and driving back.

"My parents . . . well, when I'd come home from a game sometimes I'd just want to be left alone. But the main reason is that it's more convenient."

Lefebvre took a long swig of milk and pondered the price of fame.

"Signing autographs and talking to people . . . you're obligated to do this. I think it's great, but sometimes it gets a little too personal and takes a lot away from your private life.

"You repeat yourself all the time, because reporters have the same ideas in what they want to know. I just tell 'em exactly the way I feel. At first it put me on the spot. I didn't know exactly what to say. I was afraid I'd make a mistake or couldn't express myself. But I'm not nervous at all anymore."

With fame, of course, comes sophistication, which hasn't had time to creep up on Lefebvre.

"Gee, I hope not," he says, turning to the eggs at last. "I really hadn't thought about that too much . . . how to act. I've just lived my life. I just try to be nice to people."

WITH HIS GROWING affluence, Lefebvre has turned over all of his personal and financial affairs to a business advisor "so that I have only one job to do—play baseball."

He laughs when asked about his car washing business in Long Beach.

"That's not me at all. It's my cousin. His name's Lefebvre, too. He was opening up this car wash a couple of weeks ago, so he asked me to come down. So I said 'fine.' If people assume it's my car wash, let 'em assume. I hope he does well."

However, Jim does admit to another sideline—a boys summer baseball camp on Catalina.

"Before when the family was doing it, it was just called the Catalina Baseball Camp. Now we call it Jim Lefebvre's Catalina Baseball Camp, for publicity and stuff like that. We've gone a little more elaborate, too."

Jim's twin brother Tippy runs the camp, assisted by a staff of counselors, and Jim says, "I try to get over once every two weeks just to talk to the boys."

Swabbing up the last of the eggs with a slice of toast, he says he tells them things like this:

"Everybody has certain limitations. I can't steal 104 bases or I can't hit 60 home runs. But there's one thing I can do just as well as those guys, and that's give 100%."

BASEBALL'S GUIDED TOUR

All-Star Game a 'Busch' Affair

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

ST. LOUIS — This is where they're interrupting the baseball season to put on the largest guided stadium tour in history.

It's called the 37th annual All-Star Game, but it's really an excuse to introduce the players of both leagues, and assorted fans, to the architectural joys of new Busch Stadium.

Next year, it's Anaheim, and then we can look forward to the Astrodome, Atlanta and Chavez Ravine; by which time they should also have a major league team in Oakland.

There's a game played, too, but it has become incidental to the pension plan and the real reason they have the All-Star break—so that 450 of the 500 players in the American and National Leagues can enjoy a brief, three-day, midsummer vacation.

The All-Star Game used to be a fiesta that grabbed the imagination because of the spectacle of the game's greatest stars joined in action on a single field. The cult of the hero was still in existence, and Babe Ruth hit a home run in the very first game in 1933 to win it for the American League.

Then in 1934 Carl Hubbell, the old Meal Ticket of the New York Giants, struck out Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx, Al Simmons and Joe Cronin in order.

But I had to stretch my memory even to remember that Johnny Callison won the 1964 game in Shea Stadium with a ninth-inning, three-run swat off Dick Radatz.

* * * *

THE GAME started to go downhill when the players, eager to fill their pension bags, prodded baseball into playing two All-Star Games in 1959. And soon they all became a mish-mash of tawdry, sloppy contests—e.g., seven errors in the 1961 butchery at Candlestick Park.

That's the year they start to cash in on the novelty of new stadia. So it was Washington in '62 and Shea in '64 and Bloomington, Minn., last summer.

"Anywhere," said the players, "we can pack 'em in."

A couple of weeks before the teams for this year's game were announced, an American League star—one who had played in nine previous All-Star spectacles—was asked if he thought he had a chance to make this year's team.

"I hope not," he said. "I'd rather have the three days off."

And that feeling is not unusual. Sometimes, they play like it too. The American League, which won eight of the first 11 games played, now has won only one of the last nine.

It's one symptom of the change in baseball. Another is the fact that Ebbets Field and the Polo Grounds are no longer eligible All-Star sites.

BUSCH MEMORIAL STADIUM, brand new this year, is site of the 37th All-Star game. It is expected to draw more than 50,000 fans, largest crowd ever to see a sport event in Missouri.

A.L., MELE DETERMINED TO WIN

Special From a Staff Writer

MINNEAPOLIS-ST. PAUL —American Leaguers are fed up with National League successes in All-Star games and World Series in recent years and are on the verge of turning the tide, Minnesota manager Sam Mele says.

"The players we've got on this team," said Mele, who will manage the American League against the National League All-Stars Tuesday in St. Louis, "realize they've been beaten pretty regularly by the National League.

"I think it's getting to be a little embarrassing, and they want to stop it."

For that reason, Mele said he plans to all-out in a bid to end NL domination of the All-Star game, including the playing of his eight regulars all the way if necessary.

"I'm going to win this one," said Mele resolutely. "If it means playing a lot of guys, fine. If it doesn't mean playing a lot, that's fine, too. We'll play to win."

A Latvian From Whitewater--Ram Scouting Triumph

By AL LARSON

If you were a football scout, would you sign a native Latvian boy who played for Whitewater State, Wisc.? The Rams did.

The name Vilnis Ezerins won't ring a bell with Southland grid connoisseurs, but to fans at such college outposts as Stout, Stevens Point, Platteville, Eau Claire and Oshkosh, they're only too happy the 217-pound fullback has departed the scene.

The 21-year-old war refugee from the small Baltic nation, now a Soviet satellite, is one of six rookie halfbacks bidding for a job at the Rams' summer camp in Orange.

Vilnis, who goes by the name "Ezz" because "it's short and easier to say," came to this country at age five.

"My parents escaped from Latvia in 1944 when the Communists took over. I was only three months at the time, and for the next five years we lived in Germany," Vilnis related.

"Then in 1949 our family was sponsored to come to this country. We settled in Albany, N.Y., for two years, then moved to Union Grove, Wisc., when I was about eight.

"After high school I received some financial aid and was able to attend Whitewater State, which is about 45 miles from Milwaukee.

"I'd always had an interest in animals and plants, so I majored in biology with a physical education minor.

"My brother had played end for the University of Wisconsin and he's the one that got me interested in football. I played defense part of my freshman year, then shifted to offense the middle of the season. I've played offense ever since."

The big 6-1½ blond runner, who hits with a wallop, had his finest season as a senior last year. He gained 1,073 yards on 171 carries for a 6.2 average.

The heart of the Warhearts' team was rewarded with small college all-America recognition as well as being plucked by the Rams on the eighth round of last year's draft.

What are Ezerins' chances of sticking with the Rams?

"He has fine natural running ability," backfield coach Ted Marchibroda said following a 20-minute scrimmage Saturday. "He has quickness. He can stop on a dime and pick up speed in a hurry."

"He's a quick learner, which is so important here since we throw a lot of new material at them right at the start. It's still too early to tell what kind of a receiver he is. We feel halfback is the best possible spot for him," Marchibroda added.

Vilnis, who speaks in a shy manner, said at home when he was away from the football field he found enjoyment in painting.

"I picked this up from my brother, Elmars, too. I like to do oils. I did one of Jackie Kennedy a couple of years ago which I think is the nicest painting I've done."

Asked to name Latvia's greatest sports hero, Vilnis admitted he couldn't think of any one individual. But he quickly added, "Actually, my brother was one of the better Latvian athletes. He played in the 1963 Rose Bowl game against USC. He also was Big Ten shotput and discus champ in '62."

If there are any native Latvians living in Long Beach, let's hear it for Vilnis Ezerins. And if you send telegrams, don't forget to sign it "Laba Laime --Good Luck."

Falcons Pick Sparks West

ATLANTA (UPI) — Unheralded Randy Johnson staged his third amazing all-star performance with a record passing show Saturday night to lead the West to a 24-7 victory over the East in the sixth annual Coaches All-America football game.

Johnson, the former Texas A. and I. quarterback who was a surprise high draft choice by the new Atlanta Falcons, passed for two touchdowns and ran for a third in the first college all-star game ever played in Atlanta.

Throwing short, dead-eye tosses, Johnson completed 24 of 38 passes for 237 yards. This was two more completions than the previous record for this game set by George Mira of Miami for the East in 1964.

Johnson was an overwhelming choice in balloting by newsmen as the most valuable player in the game.

The underdog East took a 7-0 lead early in the first period when a pass interference call gave it the ball at the West one yard line. Fullback Jim Grabowski of Illinois went across on the next play and Charles Gogolak of Princeton kicked the extra point.

But Johnson took control of the game in the second period.

Fullback Walt Garrison of Oklahoma State went over from 11 yards out after Johnson's passes got the West in scoring position and Johnson passed five yards to Jim Lindsey of Arkansas for another tally with a minute left in the first half.

In the fourth period, Johnson ran over from three yards out and five minutes later passed 15 yards to Donnie Anderson of Texas Tech for the West's final touchdown.

Steve Sloan of Alabama, the East quarterback who will be battling Johnson for the Falcons' post, was completely overshadowed by his future teammate as he was constantly harassed by the hard-rushing West defense.

The game, played the first five years in Buffalo, N.Y., was switched this year to Atlanta. The crowd of 38,236, although some 12,000 below capacity, was nearly 13,000 larger than the biggest crowd at Buffalo.

|---|---|---|---|---|
| West | 0 | 12 | 8 | 12—32 |
| East | 7 | 0 | 0 | 0—7 |

Scoring:
East—Grabowski 1 run (Gogolak kick).
West—Garrison 11 run (pass failed).
West—Lindsey 5 pass from Johnson (run failed).
West—Johnson 3 run (pass failed).
West—Anderson 15 pass from Johnson (run failed).

Easy Victory for Grelle in 'Tuneup'

Jim Grelle won the 3,000 meters in leisurely time of 8:03.8 Saturday as a group of top athletes turned up in the Santa Monica Invitational track meet for meets with Poland and Russia.

The 29-year-old Grelle put on his familiar burst of speed in the last 200 yards to beat out Pat Traynor of the 49er Track Club, who was timed in 8:04.4, and George Young of Casa Grande, Ariz., 8:05.0.

Oregon's Neil Steinhauser was the lone double winner. He won the shotput at 63-4 and the discus at 170-11.

The No. 1 U.S. sprint team of Charlie Greene, George Anderson, Tom Jones and Jim Hines won the 400-meter relay in 39.6.

The No. 2 sprint team was disqualified for dropping the baton on the handoff from John Moon to Adolph Plummer.

So they ran the relay again and the No. 2 team of Bill Gaines, Harold Busy, Moon and Plummer was the winner in 39.7 and the No. 1 team was disqualified for passing the baton out of the zone, Jones to Hines.

John Pennel won the pole vault at 17-¼ with fewer misses at the height, with Paul Wilson second.

Both Pennel and Wilson tried for a world record at 17-6, but failed.

Whether it would have been a record was debated by officials. The standards had been illegally placed 15 feet apart instead of the regulation 13-1. After the two cleared 17-¼ the cross bar was sawed shorter and the standards moved in to the required width.

The Polish meet is next weekend at Berkeley and the Russians appear at the Coliseum July 23-24.

The squad will assemble in Berkeley Monday.

DOWNEY LOSES AGAIN

Nu-Pike Routs Commerce

LOS ALTOS HILLS (UPI) — Three California teams — Foothill, El Segundo and Long Beach — each won a third straight game Saturday for a three-way tie in the Senior Men's National AAU outdoor water polo championships at Foothill College.

The competition continues today.

Foothill Aquatic Club's A team, the defending champion, beat San Francisco's Olympic Club, 10-2. Bill Birch, defending his title as the champion scorer, tossed in three goals.

The El Segundo Swim Club defeated the San Mateo Bulldogs, 11-4, with Bob Saari scoring three times.

The Inland Nu-Pike Club of Long Beach defeated City of Commerce, 12-6. Stanley Cole of the winners scored four times and raised his tourney-leading total to 14.

Foothill Aquatic Club's B team upset the Downey Aquatic Club, 7-5. It was Downey's second loss.

Color Doug Sanders a Dollar Bill Green

Newspaper Enterprise Association

NEW YORK (NEA) — The British gentleman—"a tweedy type" — kept ogling Doug Sanders' green shoes and insisting he must have them. They were just the right size —9½-C.

"I'm sorry, old chap," drawled Doug. "You can't have 'em."

"I'll give you 100 pounds for them." That's $240 American folding money.

"But my whole outfit would outfit would be ruined," Doug be ruined," Doug shook his head and went back to playing golf, with green turtleneck shirt, green sweater and green slacks to match. When the tournament, the British Open, was over, Sanders went looking for the tweedy chap.

"I was going to give him the shoes for nothing," mused Doug, "but I couldn't find him."

Sanders has left a trail of "old" golf shoes all around the world, in pastel shades ranging from pink to purple.

Every three months a manufacturer in Brockton, Mass., sends Sanders 20 pairs of golf shoes, with color swatches to match. Doug then sends the samples to his shirt manufacturer who passes them on to his sweater manufacturer who ships them on to his slacks manufacturer.

"Sometimes," said Doug, "the colors are hard to match. I'm lucky if I come out of it with 10 different outfits."

So one day he shows up on the course all in canary yellow, shoulders to shoes, and the next day in cerise, then maybe in mauve. And along the tour he discards his old outfits, giving them to the clubhouse boys or any golf nut who approximates his size.

I mean, where do you find shoe polish in such hues as ultramarine blue, viridian or fuchsia?

"I use the greasy kid stuff on them," grinned Doug. But when they get scuffed, he goes looking for another size 9½-C. That way he keeps his closets roomy. He goes through 50 outfits a year.

Doug's affinity for multicolored ensembles has become his identification tag. He has even tried to spread it to his buddies. He has an exhibition match scheduled for Pensacola, Fla., in which one of his playing partners will be Chuck Connors, the old first baseman turned movie star. Doug was going to surprise him with a pair of exotic shoes — in fact, leathers to match the rainbow for the whole foursome.

"Had a devil of a time, though, with Connors," he grimaced. "You know, all of these have to be made special. And he wears a 14-C."

Sanders would have color on a course even if he wore only Gary Players blacks. ("I told Gary the only reason he wears black," grinned Doug, "is because it saves him cleaning bills.")

With his inimical short backswing, his crackling personality and Georgia twang, Doug's a natural gallery draw. And this year he has complemented the picture by being one of the leading money-makers on the PGA tour while winning three tournaments.

All that has kept him from creeping into the Arnie Palmer-Jack Nicklaus class is his failure to win the really big major tournament — like, for instance, the U. S. Open.

"I'm really trying very hard," he said. "In the past I've finished second in the Open, second in the PGA. And this year I was two shots behind in the Masters and had a good chance until I put the ball in the water at the 16th hole the third day and made a double bogey."

At that moment, Doug didn't especially want the crimson of his face to match his shoes.

Holscher, McAllister PGA Finalists

assistant, who spent long, agonizing seconds over all his putts, rimmed this one and his giant-killing antics were finally over. Only 24 hours earlier, he had ousted Charlie Sifford, 5-3.

Bradley had a phenomenal stroke on the ninth through the 12th holes, canning birdie putts from 25, 22, 35 and 25 feet.

Coming up the 13th fairway, McCallister said to himself, "Don't change; just keep doing the same things." Hardened by several years on the tour, he knew that hot putters eventually cool off . . . and so right he was.

Bradley canned another 12-footer to match McCallister's birdie on the 14th, but then the former Houston hotshot came back to reality and 3-putted the 16th to be only 1 up.

With a chance to win on 17, Bradley missed from 3½ feet, and McCallister made the most of his opportunity with his clutch putt on the 18th after a 7-iron shot left him 7 feet away.

In the six rounds McCallister has played, the 32-year-old shotmaker is 23 under par. His was 5-under in routing Bill Nary 5-4 in the morning round Saturday. Bradley, incidentally, was 11 under Saturday and 18 under in his last four rounds. He clobbered Babe Lazane in his Saturday opener 6-5.

The 35-year-old Lakeshore CC pro missed four greens and hit three drives in the wrong fairway, but the 1960 SoCal PGA champ made some great recovery shots to pull out the win. Holscher shot 70, Merrins 71 over the par-72 course.

Holscher went 1 up when Merrins three-putted No. 8 and 2 up when he got a birdie on No. 14. Then on the 16th, a bad drive and poor chip shot left Bud's lead at one again.

On the 17th, Holscher pushed his drive to the right. But he then followed with perhaps his finest shot of the day, a 4-iron that carried a tall tree and reached the green 180 yards away. Both players birdied the hole.

Merrins, who beat Dale Andreason 3-2 in the morning, had no chance to tie when he left his second shot 55 feet away on the 18th. He did get down in two, however, and Holscher had to sink a 3½-footer to clinch it.

An 18-hole medal play sweepstakes among non-money winners preceeds the title match at 9:37 a.m. Trophy presentation for the Holscher-McCallister marathon is slated for 3:30.

IN THE HOLE, SURE

Bud Holscher can't bear to watch, but his short putt dropped for par-3 on 12th hole during semi-final win over Ed Merrins, 1-up. Holscher plays Bob McCallister for PGA title today.

Narragansett Loses, Finals on Tap Today

By DAVE TAYLOR

The fourth California Cup sailing classic got all tied up Saturday as the 62-foot sloop Narragansett, winner of Friday's opening race of the series, was beaten by both her opponent Chubasco and dame fortune in gusty 10-16-knot winds off Marina del Rey.

Arnold D. Haskell's Chubasco, the 67-foot West Coast racing veteran out of Newport Harbor Yacht Club, was leading Narragansett by an 80-second margin on the seventh leg of a nine-leg course in Saturday's second heat of the three-race match racing series when Narragansett's Genoa jib rose and then failed.

"Chubby," skippered by Don Haskell, seemed to have a clear lead at the time, however, and was well on the way to avenging her Friday defeat by Narragansett.

The Saturday win by Chubasco made it a wide open series for today's third and final race for the prestige California Cup.

Narragansett, making her second racing appearance in Western waters after losing to Chubasco in this year's Ensenada race, will be repaired and ready to give full battle in today's 1 p.m. final.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Casey Stengel and Ted Williams, soon to be formally inducted into baseball's Hall of Fame, will be the honorary coaches at Tuesday's All-Star game.

Stengel and Williams will be in uniform and will accompany managers Walter Alston of the National League and Sam Mele of the American League when they take the line-ups to the plate.

British Open to Nicklaus

Combined Wire Services

MUIRFIELD, Scotland—Jack Nicklaus won the British Open Saturday by one stroke from Doug Sanders and Dave Thomas of Britain with a four-round total of 70-67-75-70—282. He has now taken all the major titles in golf.

Nicklaus gained a bonus of almost $1,000 for this victory since the championship committee announced earlier in the day it was boosting first-place money from $4,900 to $5,880.

Nicklaus, tamed Muirfield's narrow fairways, deep rough and hard, fast greens with deft irons and confident putting most of the way.

"It's impossible to overpower this course," said Nicklaus. "I used my driver only 17 times in the whole tournament."

Arnold Palmer of Latrobe, Pa., challenged for a while but faded.

Nicklaus had his rocky moments. After an outgoing nine of 33, he was four under par for the tourney, three under par for the day and two strokes ahead of Sanders and the third-round leader, Phil Rodgers.

Then he bogeyed the 11th, 13th and 14th holes and his lead had vanished. However, it was only a temporary lapse, for Nicklaus parred 15 and 16 and birdied the 528-yard 17th with a 3-iron, 5-iron and two putts to regain the lead.

A crowd of 12,000 was massed around the 18th fairway which ribbons between knee-high rough 429 yards to the green.

Nicklaus laced a 1-iron down the narrow patch and then held a 3-iron into the wind, 20 feet to the right of the pin as an enormous cheer rang out. He then rolled the putt 10 inches away and tapped it in for the title.

So Nicklaus has now won the four top professional tournaments — the U.S. Open, the PGA, the Masters and the British Open—to join Gene Sarazen, Ben Hogan and Gary Player among the golfing immortals. Twice he was the U.S. Amateur champion.

"Now I can set about trying to win them all again," he said.

'Logical' Leo Balks, Says Protest Ruling Illogical

CHICAGO (AP)—Manager Leo Durocher of the Chicago Cubs considers himself a logical man who doesn't like illogical rulings.

That's why he is protesting Friday's 5-4 loss to the Philadelphia Phillies. Deep in his heart, though, Leo knows the protest will not stand.

There are three reasons why the National League office is expected to reject it. First, rule 7:11 in the official baseball rules; second, a protest on a similar play several years ago did not stand, and the third reason is the umpires' instructional book.

In the third inning Friday the Cubs had runners on second and third with two out. Billy Williams hit a pop fly toward third base.

Philadelphia third baseman Richie Allen tried to shove Ron Campbell off third to get to the ball. Campbell refused to move, the ball dropped and the umpires ruled intereference on Campbell.

Leo protested on the ground, "There is no rule in the book which says my man has to leave his base to allow a fielder to make a play."

Right. But rule 7:11 states "The players or coaches of an offensive team shall vacate any space needed by a fielder who is attempting to field a batted or thrown ball."

"Then they don't say anything about the base," argued Durocher. "Let's say there are less than two outs: is a man supposed to get off the base, let a runner catch a pop fly then turn it into a double play by tagging the base or the runner.

"It's illogical to leave yourself open to be put out deliberately."

Augie Donatelli, who was in the crew with plate umpire Al Barlick, Stan Landes and Mel Steiner, cited a case at Pittsburgh several years ago when St. Louis' Bill White scrambled back to third base and prevented Don Hoak from fielding the ball.

"We called White out and the Cardinals protested, but the protest did not stand. We know the rule isn't explicit but it is in our instructional book," Donatelli said.

Merger May Not Halt Grid Raids

HITTIN' THE HIGH SPOTS: Now that the NFL and AFL have merged and will operate a common draft starting with this year's crop of college seniors, they can move the draft session back to late January.

"Secret drafts" by the AFL, in particular, have been held as early as the first of November.

An unexpected threat by Frank Leahy's proposed U.S. Football League will be reason enough for an early draft.

The way some professional football people talk, the merger will not stop "raiding."

The common talk is that certain clubs may adopt desperate sub-rosa shenanigans to obtain personnel.

Many speculate that the common draft will not allow teams to improve quickly because they simply won't have the chance to sign high-level men. The talent will be spread too thin, thus the clubs with fairly young players in key positions will remain at the top longer than what has been normal.

Only one major rules change is anticipated by the merger, and that will eliminate the AFL's two-point conversion option. It probably will be eliminated by next year. The two-pointer was tried 17 times last season and was successful on only eight occasions.

FRIENDS OF JOHNNY KEANE are pointing to the present standing of the Yankees in an attempt to prove their man wasn't such a bad manager after all. Following a brief spurt when Ralph Houk replaced Keane, the Yanks have been floundering around even though Mickey Mantle's bat has come alive.

Eddie Stanky, skipper of the Chicago White Sox, is said to be on extremely shaky ground due to his increasingly bitter feud with newspapermen . . . a situation he created himself.

Other managers reported to be "borderline cases" at present are Billy Herman of the Boston Red Sox, Sam Mele of Minnesota and Bobby Bragan of the Braves. There also is some grumbling over Gene Mauch at Philadelphia.

ONE OF THE STRANGE DEVELOPMENTS in the Lee Meyers-Mamie Van Doren marriage is the fact the Cubs had two deals on fire for the 19-year-old pitcher—one in each league—that would keep him in the majors . . . but when the wedding was announced, both clubs called off negotiations.

Formation of the North American Soccer League, with Jack Kent Cooke among the leading organizers, was spurred by the interest shown by one of the TV networks in airing the games nationally on Sundays.

Play is slated to start in May, 1968, with franchises in Los Angeles, San Francisco, New York, Boston, Chicago, Washington, D.C., and two Canadian cities—Toronto and Vancouver.

Doug Jones has finally admitted that Cassius Clay is a much better fighter than Ernie Terrell. Jones is disgusted with his fight against Terrell recently. "They talk about his great left jab, but he never hurt me with it," Doug says. "And what's more, he held me every time I moved in under the jab. Clay will beat him easy."

THE HOUSTON ASTRODOME'S outfield has become so dangerous that it will be covered with the plastic synthetic grass which has been used in the infield this season. Several players have suffered leg and ankle injuries in recent weeks.

The "Astroturf," which will be installed in time for the Astros' next home stand later this month, is now being zippered together. It will take 90,000 square feet. The infield required 30,000.

The latest pitch in baseball? The "Pine-tar ball." That's what the Phils' Jim Bunning is being accused of using . . . but frequent inspections thus far by the umpires have failed to produce any foreign substance.

National League leaders are alarmed over the attendance in Cincinnati. The Reds may not reach 600,000 this season.

As if they weren't having enough trouble winning, the Reds are plagued by lack of cooperation by city officials in planning a new park. Even though the city doesn't have a football franchise, the city planners voted for a circular stadium which suits football . . . over-ruling the club's suggestion of a horseshoe-shaped structure favoring baseball.

GEORGE SELKIRK, GENERAL MANAGER of the Washington Senators, says one of the cardinal sins in baseball is for a batter to take a called third strike. "And it seems to be becoming more and more common," he points out.

"I remember one incident vividly that occurred when I was with the Yankees under Joe McCarthy," George recalled recently. "I needed some new bats, but I approached Joe at the wrong time—the day after I took a third strike in a crucial situation.

"'More bats?' he exploded. 'What for? I'm not getting you any new bats to park on your shoulder.'

"After that I never took a third strike unless I was absolutely fooled. I learned that when I had two strikes, I had to guard the plate, no matter what. Too few players do that today."

Incidentally, one of baseball's great records, which may never be broken, is the one the Yankees compiled from Aug. 3, 1931, to the same date in 1933. In that stretch, they played 308 consecutive games without being shut out. The remarkable streak finally ended when Lefty Grove blanked them on five hits.

CREME DELA CREME UPSET

Buckpasser Chicagoan Victor

Combined News Services

Odds-on favorite Buckpasser, so heavily bet he created a minus place pool, won his fifth stake victory in seven starts Saturday with a convincing ¾-length triumph over Whisper Jet in the $103,000 Chicagoan at Arlington Park.

Elsewhere on the Saturday racing scene, in the Lamplighter Handicap at Monmouth Park heavily favored Creme Dela Creme suffered the third loss of his career being upset by Jolly Jet, a 25-1 shot.

Despite the five pounds or more Buckpasser gave all of his rivals, he was bet down to the 3-10 favorite on the mutuel board by the crowd of 25,295.

Buckpasser never was far off the pace in the mile and one-eighth dash, and finished in 1:49 1/5, two seconds slower than the track record and almost three seconds slower than the world mark.

Buckpasser set a world record in his last start, 1:32-3/5 for the mile in winning the Arlington Classic June 26.

Buckpasser returned 2.60, and $2.20 with no show betting permitted because of only five entires.

Abe's Hope, who lost to Buckpasser in the Flamingo, never held the lead and took third place, a neck behind Whisper Jet, but seven lengths ahead of Better Sea. Crown Land was fifth.

The win paid Buckpasser $68,000 and increased his 3-year-old earnings to $262,868 with six victories and one second in seven starts. His lifetime earnings are $830,964.

Jolly Jet, paying $53.50, $9.60 and $4.80, took the lead from Creme Dela Creme shortly after the final turn and romped to victory.

Creme Dela Creme had won 7 of 9 previous starts.

At Delaware Park in the Diamond State Handicap, Tetanus, after four years of racing, finally won his first stakes race, romping over Knightly Manner.

The winner paid $10.20, $5.40 and $3.60. First Family, the favorite, finished out of the money.

Straight Deal, surviving a furious stretch battle, won the Sheepshead Bay Handicap by half a length at Aqueduct in New York.

The 4-year-old filly took the lead with an eighth of a mile left and then had to hold off the closing challenges of Mount Regina and running mate Treachery to gain her third stakes victory of the season.

Straight Deal paid $8.80, $4 and $4.40.

Man O'War's mile and ⅜ record was smashed by Winfreux Saturday as the 4-year-old gedling won the Doomben Cup in Brisbane, Australia.

Winfreux took two-fifths of a second off the mark covering the distance in 2.13.8.

Blades' Revival Has Cooke on Spot

the money necessary to get the best club we can get. If Chicago gives us guys with big contracts, okay."

The Blades will be in the third year of an agreement with the NHL's Black Hawks, whose Buffalo farm club has asked permission to fold from the American League.

"The agreement says they'll give us four or more players every year," Geyer says, "and they'll have to put those Buffalo players somewhere."

Also, the Blades will receive two outstanding rookies from Toronto, which backed out of an offer to sell the Blades their strong Victoria roster for $400,000 during the recent Western League meeting in San Diego.

Panged by conscience, Toronto general manager Punch Imlach told the Blades, "We owe you that much."

Every other WHL club also will give the Blades a player. They didn't want Reeves to fold, telling him at San Diego, "If you go, we'll help you."

Meanwhile, the Blades must hire a coach, since Lynn Patrick jumped at St. Louis' offer for general manager in the new NHL division when the Blades' demise seemed imminent.

A good bet would be Marc Boileau, veteran forward and last season's captain, a man respected by his teammates for his hard play and knowledge of the game.

And the Blades might have trouble finding anybody else for what could be a one-year job. Boileau, 34 in September, probably would not try to be a playing coach.

Cooke apparently has won one battle, cutting the Coliseum Commission off short by starting construction on his own arena, the Forum.

It's only incidental that he will have to use the Long Beach Arena temporarily, and according to an aide has received permission from the NHL to do so.

However, Southland sports fans with good memories wondered why the artist's conception of Cooke's arena published last February when he received the franchise looked like a fruit basket and the one they're building at Inglewood is to be flat on top surrounded by columns.

The truth is that the plans Cooke showed the NHL to strengthen his bid were the same plans rejected earlier by San Diego because they were too expensive.

But Cooke denies that he misrepresented his presentation to the NHL.

"It was rejected by San Diego because it was too expensive for them," Cooke explains. "It fit our pocketbook nicely. But when we decided to go for the floating roof it changed the exterior design. It's basically the same arena."

Architect Charles Luckman says that with the "floating roof" concept it is necessary to have pillars supporting it.

"Those pillars are functional," Cooke says. "They aren't there just to look pretty."

The Independent, Press-Telegram was told that Cooke will visit San Diego shortly to inspect the arena that city finally decided to build, which is nearing completion.

Back in Montreal, the NHL is taking in all of this, pondering the critical status of its expansion program, and possibly wondering:

Would it rather have the Blades than trouble?

EXHIBITIONIST was eased out of a pocket on the first turn, made up ground on the far turn then weakened in the final stages. ## Mulkey Captures Federation Decathlon

the front end with a $12.20 place payoff and $5.40 to show.

In the scramble for second Drin finished second, three lengths in front of two of the three Eastern invaders, Rehabilitate and Exhibitionist. The latter trailed Rehabilitate by a length and one-quarter in the battle for third.

Trailing in the eight-horse field were Hill Clown, Aqua Vite, Flame Tree and Tragniew.

Lambert sent Fleet Host to the front at the break, breaking out slightly as the eight 3-year-olds started the run from the end of the stretch in the mile and one-quarter chute. For a moment it appeared that none of the eight wanted the lead and that a leisurely pace was in the offering.

Lambert, however, let out on Fleet Host and the colt grabbed a clean-cut advantage from Aqua Vite with Hill Clown and Tragniew next.

It was all Fleet Host from there. Lambert allowed him to knock out quarters of :23, :23⅕, :24⅕ and :24½ to reach the mile marker and at that point Exhibitionist, Rehabilitate and Drin were churning from far back, attempting to close the gap on the winging leader.

Drin, the Cinema Handicap winner with Bill Shoemaker at the controls, made a move with a quarter of a mile to go and it appeared for a moment he was en route to emulating the 1959 Derby win of his sire, Bagdad.

As Shoemaker explained it—"in the middle of the turn I felt pretty good. But that other horse never stopped running."

Lambert, who missed a ride on Native Diver last Monday in the American Handicap because of a five-day suspension, was an excited winner. "Ray (Priddy) and I talked it over in the paddock and we decided if the pace was too fast I'd be on the lead, and that's the way it worked out.

"Through the lane the first time he wasn't running smoothly. I turned him loose to let him change leads into the turn and he leveled off. Around the turn I was looking for something from behind. My horse was getting tired but he was doing his best and I didn't hit him.

Flyers Out to Break Open Legion Title Chase Today

The Flyers look for a Harbor League "lockup" today when they meet second-place Peterson Post in the second game of a doubleheader at Blair Field.

A victory for the Flyers, who have won their last seven, including an 8-4 victory over Samuel Thomas Saturday, would mean a two-game lead in the standings with but three games remaining.

Peterson, which also won Saturday, 6-4 over Lakewood, obviously needs the decision to move back into a tie for first place.

In the last meeting, the Flyers prevailed, 3-2, on the three-hit pitching of Mike Coble. Coble will start today, seeking his seventh win in as many decisions, against the man he beat last time, Randy Moffitt.

Moffitt, All-City player of year, is the last pitcher to beat the Flyers, stopping them 3-2 the first time the two teams met.

The Peterson-Flyer contest begins at 2:30, following the 11:30 a.m. opener which pits Shua against Samuel Thomas.

Saturday, Shua shut out Alamitos Bay, 5-0, on the four-hit pitching of Ray McElhenney, who threw only 96 pitches while walking one and striking out five.

Todd Collins, who filled in for injured catcher Al Moore, smacked three singles, driving in two runs and scoring another. Dave Bisso added a single and double, also scoring once and driving in one.

Jim Sturgeon remained unbeaten in five starts by surviving a three-run rally by Lakewood in the ninth. The Peterson fireballer struck out 10, walked seven and allowed eight hits, two of those doubles by Carl Meeks.

Ray Colin, Ken Alverson and Ron Henkel all contributed a pair of hits to Peterson's total of 10 and each had an rbi.

Phil Keller was the Flyers' winning pitcher in its game with Samuel Thomas. Terry DeKraai led the victor's offense with two hits in four trips.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

Family Fishing —Fun For All

By LEW ALLISON

Fishin' Around for Donnell Culpepper, Who Is on Vacation

This season has been developing all kinds of excellent sport. But one of the highlights of the year has been the fishing to be had on the barges which lie in local waters. The best aspect of good barge fishing is that it invites the entire family—Mom, Dad and all the little kids can have fun and they can catch fish.

And when we talk about catching fish, that doesn't mean an occasional tom cod, bonito or mackerel, always in abundance. There are lots of other sports fish, too.

Ray Chency, bargemaster of the Alaska, off Seal Beach, is piling up one of the best records of many years, particularly with bass and barracuda. The bass catch has run into the hundreds many days, and sometimes has topped 1,000. Barracuda, too—some of them real tackle busters—have been listed in the hundreds during the hot weeks. An occasional oddity turns up—a 6-pound baby black sea bass and a 5-pound white sea bass among last week's bags.

THE ISLANDER listed 100 barracuda a day often and post, too. Fred Austin, skipper, likes to tell of the complaint an Alhambra couple had after an all-night stay on the barge: We couldn't get any sleep—the barracuda kept boiling around the barge all night long."

The Islander listed 100 barracuda a day often and some days has gone over 200. Bonito catches run 300 a day and up.

Halibut this year have been running generally larger, and the count may go anywhere between 25 and 75 a day on the Alaska. Cheney says there have been at least 20 caught recently that would run in the 15-25-pound class.

The Alaska has been moved this year to a rocky bottom about 2¾ miles off the pier, or a 20-minute boat ride. Taxis run hourly on the half-hour, beginning at 6:30 a.m. The barge closes at 4:30.

Cleanliness has been made a hallmark of this barge. The all-electric galley is stocked with everything from steak and eggs to hot dogs, and everything's newly painted.

The Islander offers night-long fishing on Friday and Saturday nights, with handsome breakfasts in the galley after a night of high fun. On the other days, the taxis run on the hour, hourly from 6 a.m. until 5. There's an upper deck for sightseers, television for the kids, and the loudspeakers relay the baseball games to those on deck. The Islander is anchored near the breakwater, where perch fishing is an added attraction.

Both skippers of the two barges agree on one point: Here's a family recreation, and a social event as well as sport. You can stay all day for your taxi fare. People who go out to the barge find the same acquaintances are back from the last trip, and it's time to get acquainted all over again.

Barge fishing is an ideal opportunity for the youngster or beginning fisherman—he has lots of room to work, lots of time to try any experiments, and there are lots of deckhands around who are anxious to help him.

A WELCOME ADDITION to the port's facilities is the three-quarter-day boat at Belmont Pier. The Hurricane, with Don Jasiewicz as skipper, takes off daily at 5:30, returning at 2:30, and has been chalking up some admirable scores. Jasiewicz is a working skipper. His runs may extend to Rocky Point one day, Huntington Beach the next. He has taken yellowtail on the Horseshoe Kelp as well as big barracuda and bass catches. Neither Don nor his boat is new in these parts—both have operated out of Long Beach landings in seasons past, and both are popular.

The Hurricane operates a twilight special Friday and Saturday nights from Belmont between 5:30 and 10:30, and this run in the warm summer evening, when the late bite can be expected and the crowds are not heavy, is one of the most enjoyable fishing expeditions to be had.

Cordobes Out to Vindicate Self

TIJUANA, Mex. — Vowing to vindicate himself after last Monday's unfortunate showing, Spain's world famed matador Manuel (El Cordobes) Benitez makes his final appearance of the season at El Toreo de Tijauna today at 4.

"No, I am not bitter because they threw cushions and yelled all kinds of things at me," he said. "They paid to see me triumph. All I can do now is vindicate myself before the same fans who booed me."

DOKKA FACES NEW FIELD IN PUBLINKS

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Arne Dokka of Studio City, Calif., faces a virtually new field in defending his title in the U.S. Public Links Assn. Golf Championships.

The tournament opens with 18 holes of qualifying play Monday and Tuesday. Match play begins Wednesday after the 150 member field is trimmed to 64.

Dokka and Leo Zampedro of Warren, Ohio, last year's runner-up, are back. But only nine others in the 1965 match play field succeeded in qualifying. Dokka was an automatic entry as defending champion.

The tournament will be played at Brown Deer, a tough 6,727-yard layout with a par 71.

5 Quit in Hospital Pay Dispute

By STEVE STOWE

A campaign for higher pay by nursing aides at the Bellflower rest home bogged down Saturday after some of the protesting aides quit their jobs.

Nursing aides at Bellflower Convalescent Hospital, 9710 Artesia Blvd., said their demands for a 5-cent-per-hour increase in their current pay schedule have not been met.

According to aide Dorothy Lamp, a few of the staff members picketed the hospital Saturday during their lunch hours. The two-day protest resulted in the resignation of five nursing aides and the hospital's registered nurse, Mrs. Thelma Ulrich.

Mrs. Ulrich, who resigned Friday, said the $1.30-per-hour pay rate is too low for the work performed. "I tried my best to help the aides," Mrs. Ulrich said. "Maybe we got the ball rolling, even though we didn't get the raise." Many of the aides praised Mrs. Ulrich for her leadership.

The 15 to 20 employes at the hospital did not participate in group demonstrations, and the hospital's patients did not lack care during the protest, Mrs. Ulrich said.

Mrs. Caryl Atwood, nursing coordinator for the hospital, hired aides from other hospitals Friday in case the protest turned into a strike. However, she said the regular aides did not walk off their jobs and picketed only during their free hours.

However, Mrs. Atwood said there would be no pay raises for aides who participated in the protest. "Although I am dedicated to nursing, I cannot help the aides as long as they picket. There must be reasonable talk and not demands," she said.

The hospital is owned by Sunrise Hospitals Corp., of Norwalk, a firm that operates seven other convalescent facilities. A corporation spokesman declined to comment on whether a pay raise is planned for the remaining staff members.

WEEK IN REVIEW

Airline Strike Grounds 150,000 Daily

By DON HASTINGS

THE NATION

One hundred and fifty thousand air travelers failed to get off the ground Friday as the biggest strike in airline history got under way.

The walkout by 35,000 members of the International Association of Machinists in a contract dispute with five major airlines resulted in chaos at terminals from coast to coast. As machinists picketed, tourists, businessmen and conventioneers scrambled for other transportation—trains, buses, cars and planes operated by other carriers. Among the stranded were thousands of servicemen, on leave or on orders, and foreign visitors arriving by foreign airlines.

On President Lyndon B. Johnson's orders, the government took steps to make certain the mails go through and that the flow of military men and supplies to Viet Nam is uninterrupted.

Negotiations between the machinists and the airlines —United, Eastern, Trans World, Eastern and Northwest —resumed Saturday in Washington with Assistant Secretary of Labor James P. Reynolds mediating. At issue in the talks, which were broken off Thursday, are wages, vacations and other fringe benefits.

The deadlock appeared no nearer to solution Saturday than it had Thursday when the union's chief negotiator, Joseph W. Ramsey, said the two sides were "poles apart."

In terms of passengers affected — 150,000 a day — the strike is the biggest ever in the airline industry. The five carriers' flights in 231 cities are grounded and 68 smaller cities are without trunkline service. In addition, the flights of Eastern, Trans World and Northwest to 21 foreign cities are grounded.

HORNS BLEW AND FIRECRACKERS echoed through Municipal Auditorium in Miami Beach, Fla., as delegates to the Teamsters Union convention re-elected James R. Hoffa by acclamation to athird five-year term as president. Hoffa, facing a possible 13 years in prison on jury tampering and mail fraud convictions, was hailed as the union's "champion of champions."

Hoffa's re-election was only part of his victory. His hand-picked candidate, Frank Fitzsimmons of Detroit, also was elected by acclamation to a new union executive position that makes him heir apparent to the Teamsters presidency if Hoffa has to serve time. The convention delegates also raised their leader's annual salary $25,000 to $100,000 and agreed to pay the costs of legal defenses for him and other officials of the 1.7 million-member union.

TWO KU KLUX KLANSMEN conspired to violate the civil rights of Washington educator Lemuel Penn, when he was shot to death near Athens, Ga., in 1964, a federal jury decided. Four other Klansmen were acquitted.

The decision came in two verdicts — one of them sealed since it was returned the previous week in back-to-back trials.

Convicted were Joseph Howard Sims, 41, and Cecil Meyers, 26, identified by another Klansman as the men who fired shotguns into Penn's car.

Acquitted were Herbert Guest, 39; James Lackey, 30; Denver Willis Phillips, 26, and George Turner, 33.

A DESTRUCTIVE RIOT in the Maryland Penitentiary in Baltimore was with tear gas Friday, but not before 1,000 rampaging inmates set fire to four buildings, threw rocks, bricks and clubs and looted the commissary.

An assistant warden, three inmates and several firemen were overcome by smoke and 50 felons and officers suffered cuts and bruises.

A member of the Committee on Prisons of the Maryland House of Delegates, Joseph Bullock, said the riot had racial overtones. "It stems from people on the outside. If they don't stop telling these prisoners about their rights it is going to get worse," Bullock said.

About two-thirds of the 1,461 inmates at the penitentiary are Negroes.

THE BIGGEST PIECE of hardware ever orbited was lofted into space last week, from Cape Kennedy. The United States launched a 29-ton Saturn upper stage rocket into orbit in a key test that proved the vehicle can restart in space to send Apollo spacecraft to the moon.

The Saturn was deliberately blown up in space the following day when National Aeronautics and Space Administration scientists permitted pressure to build up in a liquid hydrogen fuel tank to measure the rate of increase.

On the same day, the Soviet Union orbited a 27,000-pound Proton "scientific space station." The Russians said the object was to measure radiation belts in space. NASA officials believe the Proton to be the forerunner of a manned, orbiting space station.

AMERICA'S SURVEYOR spacecraft that soft-landed on the moon June 1 revived last week after hibernating through a two-week lunar night during which the temperature plunged to 260 degrees Fahrenheit below zero.

Scientists had feared that the extreme cold would damage Surveyor's batteries and instruments, but after a week of sending radio signals, the craft responded and began transmitting photographs equal to the quality of the 10,000 it had taken after it first landed.

Friday the scientists' fears were realized when Surveyor's batteries began overheating, probably due to a short circuit induced by the cold. Death of the spacecraft—actually its inability to communicate with earth—may come within hours, the experts said, but they added, "It's done its job so well that it almost doesn't matter."

THAT WAS THE WEEK THAT WAS in Argyle, Minn., population 800.

A crop-dusting plane crashed Monday. The pilot was uninjured.

Farm hands got into a shooting scrape Tuesday. Two were killed and another wounded.

Then came Wednesday. Gerald Clausen took off in his plane in the evening to spray the town against mosquitoes, which are pretty bad this time of year. The spray he used turned out to be a lethal chemical ordinarily used only on remote fields.

No one knows how the wrong chemical got into the plane's tanks, but when Clausen discovered the mistake and warned the townspeople, they first scrubbed, then evacuated children, old folks and pets.

Houses, walks, lawns and streets were washed down and by Friday almost everyone was home again, none the worse for the exposure to the spray, but hoping this week will be a little calmer.

THE WEST

The governors of the 50 states gathered in Los Angeles last week for their annual conference, but state business took a back seat to international affairs as they debated support of President Johnson's global policies, including Viet Nam.

A so-called "Viet Nam resolution" was drafted, considered too weak, amended to include stronger pro-administration language, and passed, 49-1. The dissenter was Oregon's Republican Gov. Mark. O. Hatfield, a Senate candidate, who called the resolution clearly an endorsement of the President's escalation of the Viet Nam war.

WILLIAM L. GUY
Heads Governors

Hatfield said he was concerned over America's foreign policy becoming a "one-man affair" and giving one man a blank check who could commit the nation to a potential third world war. He had tried to get the resolution reduced to a single paragraph supporting the nation's fighting men and was temporarily backed by Gov. George Romney, R-Mich., but Romney voted with the majority on the resolution.

Romney said he deplored the conference's preoccupation with the Viet Nam theme because it is an issue beyond the control of the governors.

The issue was hard to avoid, however, because the state leaders were briefed on the subject by White House advisers Walt Rostow, Averill Harriman and Lt. Gen. Andrew J. Goodpaster and they were addressed by Vice President Hubert Humphrey.

Before adjourning, the governors elected Gov. William L. Guy, D-N.D., chairman of the conference for the coming year.

BLACK POWER split the civil rights movement down the middle last week.

This development became apparent at the 53rd annual convention of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in Los Angeles. Roy Wilkins, executive director, denounced the leaders of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee an dthe Congress of Racial Equality for espousing the new militancy.

Wilkins repeatedly attacked the concept of black power during the convention and on Thursday he openly criticized the two groups by name. By implication he attacked the leading exponents of black power, Stokeley Carmichael, head of SNCC, and Floyd McKissick, national director of CORE.

The black power controversy flared early in the week when delegates to the CORE national convention in Baltimore adopted resolutions to make the concept a factor in their civil rights campaign. The CORE delegates also voted to oppose the war in Viet Nam and support those who resist military service.

Vice President Humphrey addressed the NAACP convention Wednesday and warned that Americans "must reject calls for racism, whether they come from a throat that is white or one that is black."

Throwing his support behind Wilkins, the vice president said, "We must strive to create a society in which the aims of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the civil rights movement can be achieved."

Dr. Martin Luther King, a leader in the nonviolent philosophy, said he opposes the black power term because "it connotates black supremacy and an antiwhite feeling that does not or should not prevail." King said black supremacy is "as evil as white supremacy."

McKissick and Carmichael contended the emphasis on black power has been grossly misinterpreted. Denying it is a racist philosophy, they maintained its main purpose is to instill in American Negroes a sense of racial pride and to provide leadership in their drive for greater influence in politics and economics. They said it expresses nothing more than an assertion that Negroes have a right to retaliate if attacked, a right to self defense.

Said Wilkins, "Black power can lead only to black death."

CALIFORNIA'S LEGISLATORS ended a five-month session Thursday by voting themselves a pay increase and approving a bill outlawing action to incite a riot.

The Senate voted, 28-8, a compromise bill to boost legislative salaries from $6,000 to $16,000 annually while creating a conflict-of-interest code for the lawmakers.

The bill, approved, 66-1, in the Assembly earlier, will become effective only if voters approve a major revision of the state's constitution in November.

The pay-and-ethics bill would make California legislators the highest paid in the nation. It would also impose restrictions on outside conflicts of interest which backers said would be the toughest in the country.

Final action on the antiriot bill came in the Senate where members voted, 33-0, for legislation urged by Los Angeles Mayor Samuel W. Yorty and supported by Gov. Edmund G. Brown. Mayor Yorty said the measure was necessary to prevent "urban guerrilla warfare."

The bill would make it a misdemeanor to incite a riot in conditions where a clear, present and immediate danger exists.

Strong opposition to the legislation had been encountered in the Assembly, mostly from Negro members, but there was no debate in the Senate. The bill was authored by Assemblyman Robert Moretti, D-Pacoima.

The last-minute adjournment flurry also included Senate and assembly approval of a measure to aid low income school districts by $40.2 million annually.

UNITY WAS THE THEME Friday as Gov. Brown and Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh appeared at a Los Angeles press conference with Senate President pro tempore Hugh M. Burns, D-Fresno.

The governor said the legislature had established "a record of progress . . . a record of problems met and boldy solved."

Unruh, D-Inglewood, said he could not recall any "major piece of legislation" backed by Brown which had failed to win approval at the special session.

Brown said he planned to base his campaign for a third term on the accomplishments of the legislature and said he expects Unruh to play an active part in his race with Republican gubernatorial candidate Ronald Reagan.

"I've told the governor since the primary that I'd do anything he wanted me to," Unruh replied.

SOME THOUGHT HE SPOKE with forked tongue, but others believed every word.

The speaker was Frank Standing Horse, of Perris, Calif., who addressed the Amalgamated Flying Saucer Clubs of America convention in Reno, Nev. Dressed in full Indian chief regalia, Frank told Friday how a space ship took him on a four-year flight to the edge of the galaxy.

He said he touched on the moon, Mars, Clarion and Venus, but spent most of his time on Oreon, which he described as a planet on the outer edge of our galaxy inhabited by a super-modernistic society.

The only place Frank saw another earth man was on Venus where he said the driver of a car powered by electromagnetic force was driven by a man from North Platte, Neb. He didn't get his name.

About 1,000 persons are attending the three-day convention. They have been hearing talks by "space voyagers" and viewing pictures purporting to show flying saucers and even more sophisticated craft for getting way out.

SALARY INCREASES for the presidents, faculty and staff of California State College at Long Beach and 17 other state colleges were approved by the State Board of Trustees. The pay boosts will come from a $6.9 million appropriation made by the legislature.

Professors' pay scales now will range from $7,140 to $16,212 a year, compared with the old scale of $6,700 to $15,192.

Salaries of college presidents were boosted to a new scale of $27,324 to $28,680 from the old scale of $25,020 to $26,268.

Clerical workers and other staff members received an across-the-board increase of 4%.

THE WORLD

PRESIDENT FOR LIFE SUKARNO of Indonesia appeared to be at the end of his political life last week as his nation's congress virtually deposed him by stripping him of the last of his power, reversing his policies and reducing his prestige.

Apparently heading the government now is Lt. Gen. Suharto, who has been quietly controlling the nation's affairs since Sukarno was gradually reduced to a figurehead in the wake of an abortive, pro-Communist coup in October.

Sukarno, "god-head" of Indonesia for more than 20 years, appeared before the congress to charge the constitution had been violated. No one paid much attention.

The invitation did not spell out what the meeting would seek to accomplish.

Earlier, the Communist conferees denounced U.S. "aggression" in Viet Nam and promised to send volunteers to fight if asked by Hanoi.

PUSHED AND SHOVED by angry Filipinos at Manila's airport after allegedly snubbing President Ferdinand Marcos by failing to appear at a children's party at the presidential palace, the Beatles flew to India where they were mobbed by thousands of adoring fans.

When the musicians returned to their home town, London, Friday, they said they would never return to The Philippines—not even fly over it.

"We were terrified," said Beatle George Harrison.

"I didn't even know they had a president," said Beatle John Lennon.

"SOME PERCEPTIBLE PROGRESS" at the 17-nation Geneva disarmament conference is expected soon, by United Nations Secretary General U Thant.

At a Geneva press conference Thant said he had no knowledge of any new development likely to lead to a Viet Nam peace conference.

Thant also said he may announce at the end of August whether he is prepared to remain as secretary general after the end of his present term in November. He has hinted he will not.

Also at Geneva, the United States announced it will sign the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination, a United Nations General Assembly measure adopted in December.

THE WAR

The United States was pouring it on.

Ground forces in Viet Nam were engaged in powerful offensive sweeps, pushing back the Viet Cong, capturing their rice and rifles, collapsing their tunnels, blasting their bunkers.

In the air, Navy, Air Force and South Vietnamese aircraft flew record numbers of sorties over South and North Viet Nam. The planes hit Hanoi and Haiphong several times, bombing the remaining oil storage facilities at those vital bases. Two pumping stations in Haiphong Harbor, used to unload tankers, also were blasted.

On the psychological front, Undersecretary of State George W. Ball told a news conference he detected a new note of gloom in Hanoi. He said he wasn't surprised.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk conferred with Japanese leaders in Kyoto and left with new assurances of friendship. Rusk then flew to South Korea where he found the Koreans eager for even stronger war measures and demanding complete victory before peace talks.

Diplomatically, India's Prime Minister Indira Gandhi called for Britain and Russia to convene a Geneva conference to end the war. Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain will fly to Moscow this week for a three-day meeting with Russian officials. Viet Nam is expected to be a top item on the agenda.

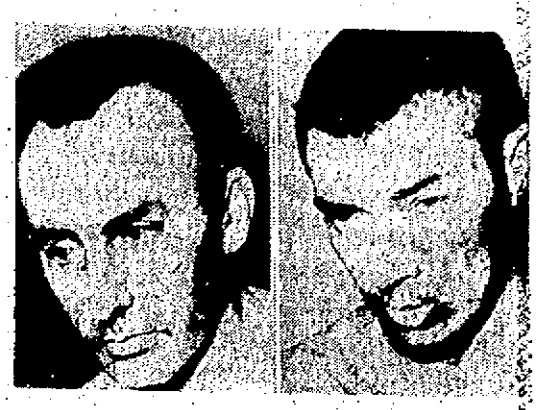

From Hong Kong came reports the United States might make a new peace overture when the furor over the Hanoi-Haiphong bombings subsides.

REUNION NEAR

Four-year-old Peggy Yue-se Yuan, in the arms of Dr. Philip Pyles, Boulder, Colo., dentist, arrived at Chicago's O'Hare Airport Friday after flight from Formosa. Peggy lacked immigration clearance when her parents left Formosa in 1962, when she was 20 days old. She has lived in an orphanage since. She will be reunited today with her mother, who is flying to Chicago from Tulsa, Okla. Dr. Pyles volunteered to take Peggy home when he heard of her plight while visiting the Orient.

N. L. B. Banjo Maker Known Nationally

To a select group of musicians across the United States, a small store building in North Long Beach is all important.

The musicians? Banjo masters.

The store building? Gariepy Banjos, at 46 E. Market St., with its diminutive back room carefully converted into factory quarters.

The reason the masters speak so respectfully of this little Southland business is that Art Gariepy has built a name for himself that other banjo makers envy.

* * * *

THE INSTRUMENTS manufactured in this small shop have been ordered by top entertainers from Florida to New York and all major points westward.

Eleven years ago, the Long Beach area boasted a booming industrial picture—but no banjo maker.

A woodworking class in Jordan High School's

By ROBERT BECKMAN
Progress Editor

adult evening division changed that.

Gariepy, interested only in acquiring a hobby, signed for the class and a latent interest and talent in woodworking became evident.

* * * *

SWIFTLY THE WORD went through the Southland as time and again Gariepy's beautiful workings in exotic woods and in tastefully laminated combinations were placed on display.

A member of the Van Eps Banjo Co. family, who had transferred the Van Eps manufacturing operation from New Jersey to Glendale, heard of Gariepy's artistry in wood and chose him to direct the continuation of the firm's label.

Working at first in his garage, Gariepy — closely following the Van Eps models — produced the first banjo in the Long Beach area; then another, and another.

* * * *

IT WAS ONLY a short time before the slightly-built man with twinkling blue eyes came up with his own model with "a different feel."

It, too, captured the interest of banjo masters nationwide and Gariepy Banjos was to quickly outgrow its garage quarters.

At the Market Street address, Gariepy has two part-time helpers and a niece "who helps me keep up with all the correspondence."

On a "rush" order, Gariepy can produce a finished banjo in 40 hours, but he likes to take longer.

"Every instrument," he says, "is a challenge. I like to think each one comes closer to perfection."

* * * *

GARIEPY laminates his own all-maple rings of seven pieces; makes necks with up to five pieces of maple and ebony or rosewood, sometimes employing pieces of walnut or mahogany, centered with steel cores for strength.

Fingerboards of rosewood and ebony are exotic Gariepy creations, as are the alluring designs of inlaid mother of pearl.

"On special orders," he laughed, "I even hand-carve the designs they want in the wood."

* * * *

IN STUDYING Gariepy's shop, only one piece of equipment indicates this instrument maker sometimes runs short of time. It is a machine which carves necks four-at-a-time, following a master pattern.

But a closer look at the four laminations about to be speed-carved shows each has an individual pattern.

The delicate hand-rubbing and finishing that follows is a tedious job.

"Sure, it is tedious, but it is a rewarding thing," Gariepy says.

* * * *

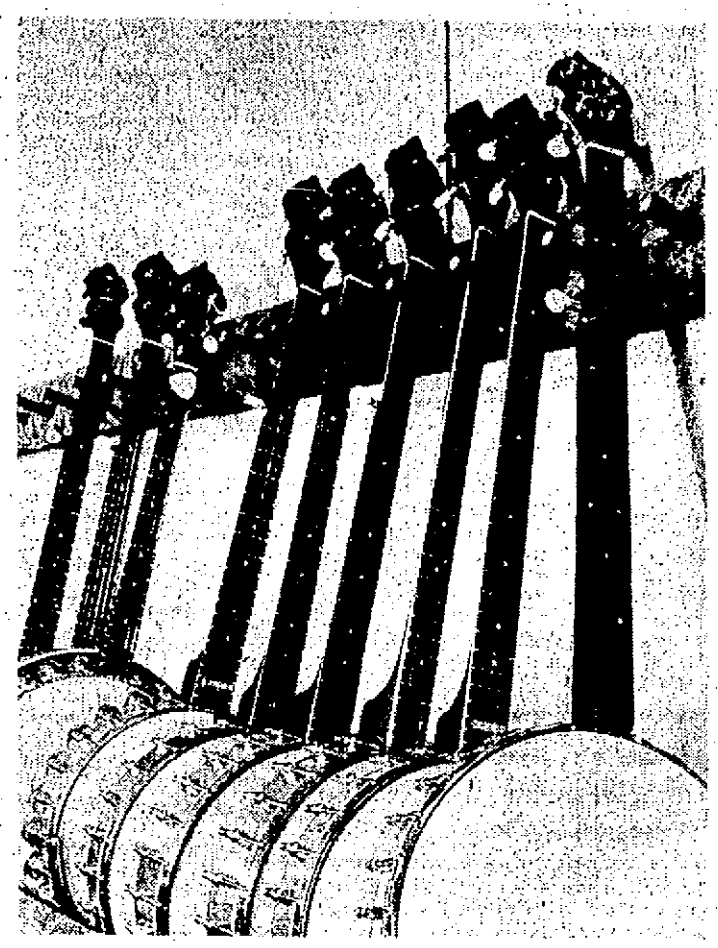

HE STRETCHES calfskin or plastic, depending upon the customer's wishes, over the finished rings and, after installing the strings, the instrument is put to its first test.

Gariepy hops onto a stool and 46 E. Market St. reverberates with sweet medley of his favorite songs.

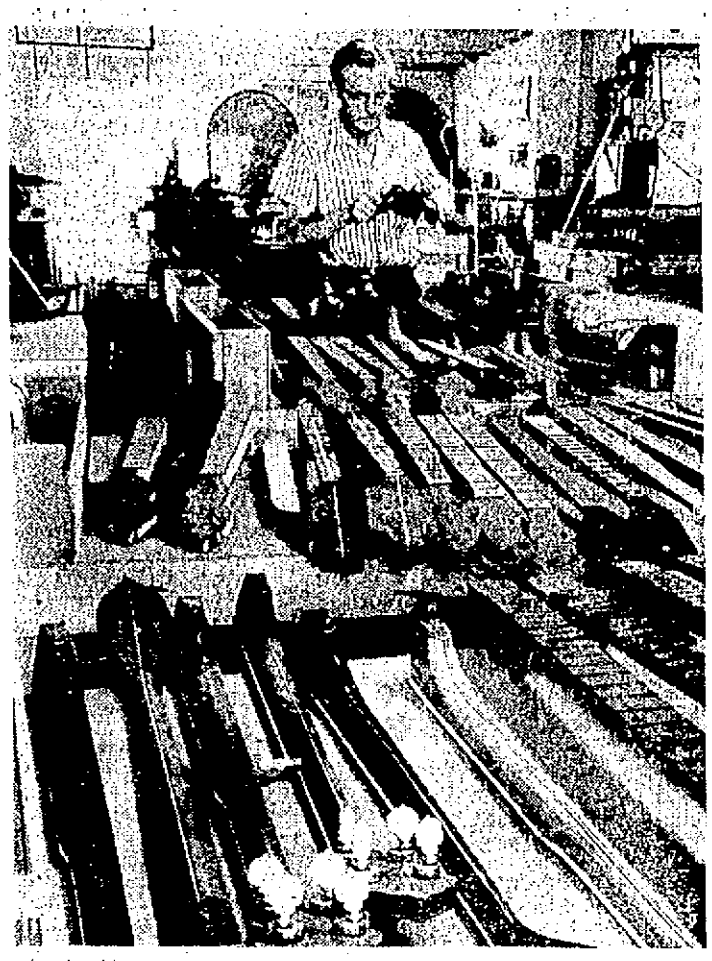

The test is an exacting one.

Gariepy, you see, has played a banjo for 41 years and studied under two such widely known masters as the late Fred Bacon and Joe Pizzitola.

Aluminum Production in West Increasing

By KEN CHILCOTE
Business Editor

West Coast aluminum production seems headed into one of the brightest spots for economic progress on view today.

Western consumption of alumninum has doubled since 1958, largely due to the increased use in aircraft construction. Now motor cars assembled in this area are using more aluminum and production of truck trailers and mobile homes both are using increased amounts.

Prospects for increased consumption of aluminum in electrical uses, including wire, cable, transmission towers and electronic devices are quite favorable, reports a report from the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco.

The container and packaging market in the West has been tapped only slightly and the Pacific Coast's massive food canning industry renders this an important potential outlet.

WHEN MISSILES are fired down the Western Test Range from Vandenberg Air Force Base in the future, pin-point accuracy on the impact area will be possible by an electronic system which will be completed in the fall in the 20-mile-wide lagoon of Eniwetok Atoll outpost of the Marshall Islands in the Pacific. This has been the favored target area, but it has been difficult to know the exact area hit by the missiles.

Pacific Division of Bendix Corp., North Hollywood, is designing and will install an advanced electronic system to provide needed information. Seven hydrophones, instruments to listen to sounds transmitted through the water, form the core of the system. Six will be placed in a wide ring on the bottom of the lagoon and the seventh, located in the center, will house a calibration projector.

When a missile nose cone splashes down the sound it generates hitting the water will be received by the hydrophones and transmitted to the main building on the Eniwetok shore.

The exact point of impact will be determined by plotting difference in the time the sound is received at each hydrophone which will be buoyed 10 feet above the ocean floor.

Called the BMILS (bottom-mounted impact location system) the project will include 49 miles of special cables. Each hydrophone will have its own cable leading to headquarters, insuring continued operation of the range even if one cable is damaged.

The addition of these lines will provide Purex with opportunities for growth in the new areas of household cleaning products.

The Vano brands, liquid and spray starch and fabric finish, have a strong franchise in the West. Babo 4-in-1 Fabric Finish, a new entry in the aerosol ironing aid field is sold over the balance of the U.S. Cameo's copper, aluminum and stainless steel cleaner is sold throughout the country.

A RECORD in market value and share volume was established by the Pacific Coast Stock Exchange in the first half of 1966. Market value of over $1.8 billion for over 45 million shares traded resulted in gains of 80% in dollar value and 48% in shares compared for the first six months in 1965. June scored gains of 89% and 53% from last June.

HERE AND THERE—American Airlines flew more than 1 billion revenue passenger miles in June, the highest monthly total in the line's history, which included a single-day record of 44 million revenue miles on June 30. This was immediately topped on July 1 when they flew 47 million revenue passenger miles . . . Hewlett-Packard Co. plans to buy a 55-acre site at Santa Clara for a $4.5 million plant which eventually may employ 4,000 workers. SOME FIRMS which had concentrated on new home construction for business have taken it on the chin in recent months. But not NuTone Inc. Cincinnati-based manufacturer of built-in appliances, lighting fixtures and cabinets. The company reported net sales for the fiscal year, ended June 1, were $58,733,109 compared to $50,319,998 the previous year. Earnings were $2.52 per common share compared to $2.06 last year.

How did they do is? The firm turned to the remodeling industry and presented such attractive new products that sales really zoomed when individuals who were upgrading their homes bought the new products.

WESTATES PETROLEUM has completed two wells in the Sespe Field in Ventura County with combined potential production of 2,300 barrels daily. One completed at 5,265 feet has indicated production of 1,100 barrels and the other completed at 4,607 feet has indicated at least 1,200 barrels daily. And, the company announced it will build two of the world's largest chemical plants on a 100-acre site on Alaska's Kenai Peninsula, 75 miles southwest of Anchorage. The two plants will cost $50 million.

Both will be operated by Collier Carbon and Chemical Corp., a wholly owned Union Oil subsidiary. The ammonia plant will produce 530,000 tons per year and will be the largest such West Coast facility. The other will be a Urea production plant. Both products are used mostly in fertilizers.

The ammonia plant will use about 60 million cubic feet of natural gas per day from Union's gas reserves on the Kenai. A portion of the ammonia will be raw material from the Urea plant.

Healthy Index Rise Since Jan. 1

Again this week, the Index touches a new high—the fourth in a row. The second quarter of 1966 had its share of business worries. But economic indicators tell a truer story of the nation's basic health. At the mid-point of 1966, the Index stood 4% above its level at the start of the year. Yet a year-ago comparison shows that the mid-1965 Index—after a period relatively untroubled by fears of inflation and a flagging auto market—had managed just about a 3.8% rise for the first half of the year.

Auto production is the only real soft spot among the components this week. It is down 6% from the previous week, and is 5% lower for the first half of the year. And it will drop severely during the rest of July, as production stops earlier this year to allow dealers to cope with swollen inventories of 1966 cars.

BUT OTHER COMPONENTS—even those affected by auto output levels—are still making progress. Steel production held its own this week on a seasonally-adjusted basis, as orders from other sectors in the economy made up for the drop in auto plant orders due to the early model changeover.

Carloadings also continued at a high level. And paperboard production, another sign of a high rate of goods shipped, rose 4% above a week ago and 21% above its year-ago level.

Trade Tips ON THE WORLD MARKET

Whether you sell acid-resisting cloth for refinery workers' pants or the scissors to cut them out, there are overseas customers waiting to hear from you.

A firm in Zambia wants to buy the cloth and a Japanese importer wants to buy scissors for tailors.

These are only two out of hundreds of sales opportunities for American businessmen in markets around the world. A Swedish manufacturer is seeking 4,000 lawn mower engines; a Chilean doctor wants machinery for a sterilized bandage factory; there is a demand for vitamins in Togo; and a market for playground equipment in Japan.

Businessmen everywhere are potential buyers of made-in-U.S.A. products. Because overseas sales mean added profits and employment in the United States, the Department of Commerce each week publishes a series of Trade Tips gathered by the government's worldwide commercial listening posts.

Mission Viejo: a brand new 200-year old idea

On this outpost of early Spain a way of life started with a dream...a dream of casual yet elegant living. This land which has retained all of its beauty and charm is Mission Viejo. Since Mission days this has remained virgin land. Now, with the initial development, the men of vision at Mission Viejo are planning another 200 years ahead.

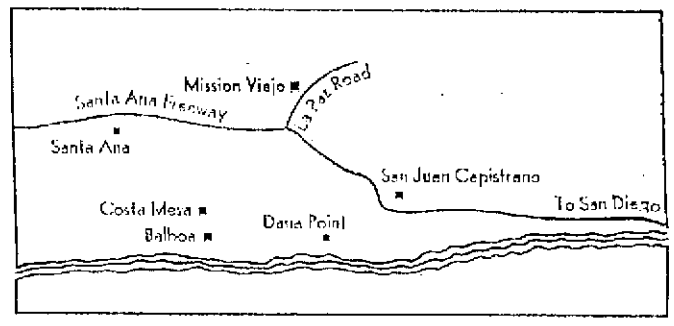

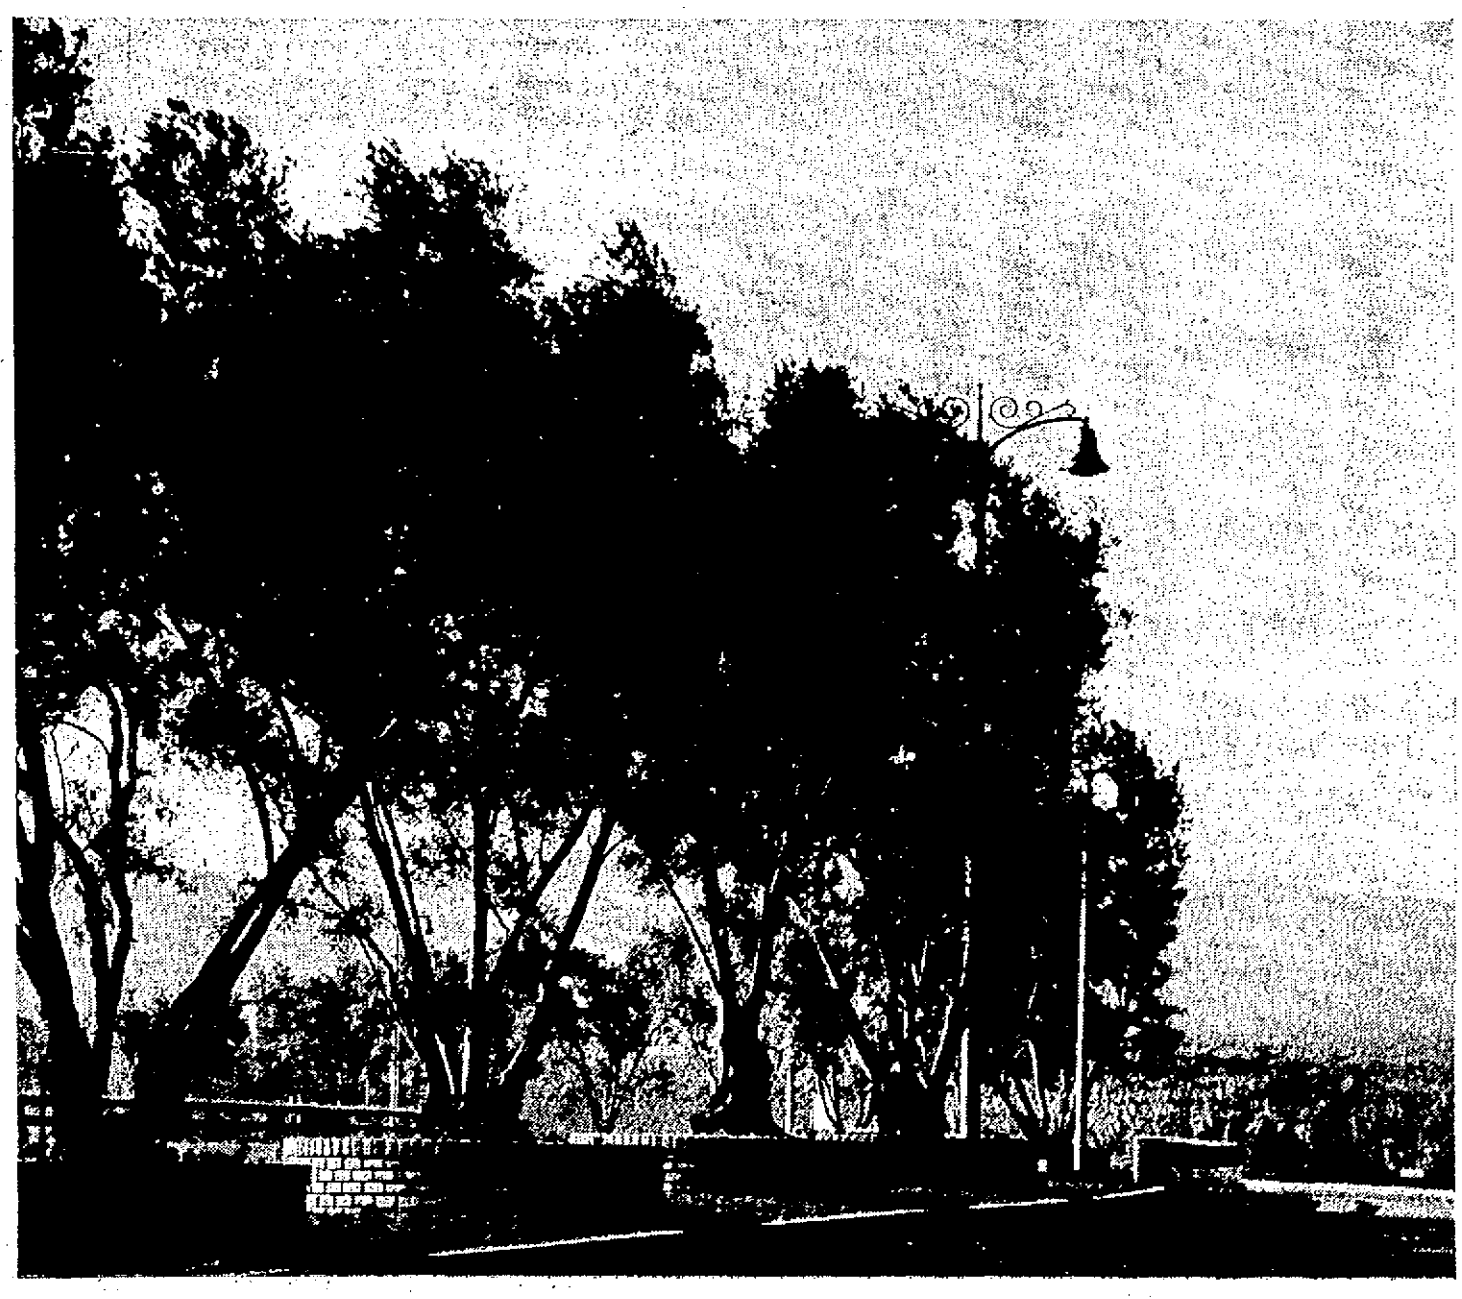

The gently rolling terrain which adds so much to the character of this land is being utilized to take full advantage of spectacular views. Here you'll find ideal homesites. Spanish red tile roofs grace all public buildings. There are parks and riding trails and wide tree-lined avenues. Even the "mission-bell" lamp posts reflect the El Camino Real. Under construction is the 2,000 student high school which will open this September. Also being built are a Lutheran Church, shopping plaza and the Mission Viejo Country Club with a challenging 18-hole course designed by Robert Trent Jones. A delightful blend of Spanish and contemporary architecture is carried out through each public building.

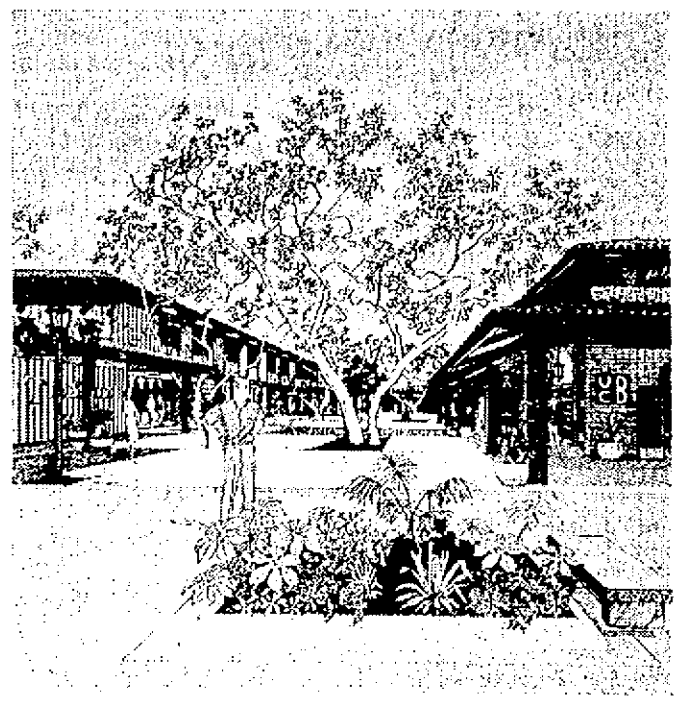

The first families of Mission Viejo have already arrived. Three of California's most experienced and respected builders have fifteen model homes on display. The prices range from $20,950 to $39,950. Every home meets our strict architectural standards: they compliment the beauty of the land.

Come to Mission Viejo today. Take the Santa Ana Freeway south to La Paz Road turnoff. Cross the bridge and enter Mission Viejo. You'll find yourself in a land of ageless and living beauty surrounded by homes of charm and character.

Fete Admiral Sprow at Martime Lunch

By JACK O. BALDWIN

Rear Admiral Ned W. Sprow showed up at the Maritime Industry Luncheon wearing strange attire—civilian clothes.

The admiral, who retired June 30 after serving as commanding officer of the 11th Coast Guard District, was an honored guest at the affair. Bell Donohugh, master of ceremonies, presented the retired admiral a plaque in recognition of his support of the organization's program.

Sprow has received many similar honors during the weeks preceeding and following his retirement, but this one caught the admiral off guard and left him moved emotionally.

Five Appraisal Groups Hit Federal Licensing Plan

Unanimous opposition to current proposals for government licensing or certification of real estate appraisers was registered last week in a joint statement by representatives of the five principal United States and Canadian organizations associated with the appraisal profession.

The less than professional standards in draft legislation for licensing or certification now being proposed in several quarters would give unjustified or misleading implications of state sanction or state approval to the work of many appraisers who lack genuine professional qualifications, the joint statement declared.

The organizations represented at a meeting in Chicago at which the statement was drafted were: The American Society of Appraisers, which acted as host for this informal conference of national appraisal organization officers and administrators; the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers of the National Association of Real Estates Boards; the American Society of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers; the Society of Real Estate Appraisers, and the Appraisal Institute of Canada.

* * * *

PRESIDENTS OF three of these organizations who participated in the conference were David P. Bishop Jr., of Miami (ASA), who presided; Edward B. Horton Jr., of Denver (SREA); Harry R. Fenton, of Seattle (AIREA). First vice president Marvin B. Clark of Paola, Kan., represented (ASFMRA).

Former national President Roy Strobeck and Harry W. Gahagan, former Illinois chapter president, both of Chicago, attended the conference as observers for the American Right of Way Association.

Conscientious enforcement of their own organization's Codes of Ethics and standards of professional conduct already provide the public greater assurance of competent and ethical real estate appraisal service from their accredited members than any presently proposed licensing or certification laws would provide, according to the participants in this conference.

* * * *

EACH ORGANIZATION has formally registered its own opposition to licensing and certification proposals on previous occasions. In reaffirming their joint disapproval of such proposals at their Chicago meeting, however, those present agreed that their general position was probably expressed best in the following statement by conference participant Alexander P. Grice III, of Norfolk, Va., 1963 president of ASA and also an M.A.I. (Member of the Appraisal Institute):

"Unless the professional requirements for a licensed or certified appraiser are as high or higher than those now required by the various recognized appraisal societies, the profession will have received a severe setback in its efforts to see that only fully qualified appraisers are given the responsibility for properly representing the interest of the general public."

* * * *

CONFERENCE participants pointed out that their organizations already exchange information with each other about disciplinary measures each one may be required to take against any member, in the event he also may hold membership in one of the other groups.

In general, they observed, their separate Codes of Ethics are all very similar in their provisions requiring members to render their clients only objective and impartial service of a professional caliber and to refuse any assignments for which they are not fully qualified.

A scholarship program has been developed for students at Long Beach State College wishing to work part-time in helping in the organization of Boy Scout troops.

LATEST TO BE organized under the scholarship program was one at St. Vestal Church, with Henry G. Robinson as scoutmaster over 23 boys.

Arnold said there is good interest in organizing Cub Packs and Scout Troops for other sponsoring institutions.

"The organizing program," he said, "is off to a good start."

Orange Co. HBA Group in Meeting

"The Money Situation" will be the major topic discussed by a panel of nationally recognized authorities at the annual Orange County general membership meeting of the Home Builders Association of Los Angeles, Orange and Ventura Counties at 7 p.m. Monday at the Disneyland Hotel Anaheim.

William Lyon, HBA president, said panel members will be Saul B. Klaman, director of research, National Association of Mutual Savings Banks; Raymond J. Lapin, president of Bankers Mortgage Co., and Charles A. Wellman, consultant to the Federal Home Loan Bank board and new president of the Equitable Savings & Loan Association of Long Beach.

Soot Problems to Go Up in Smoke

Outdoor cooking brought indoors via kitchen barbecue equipment can result in tasty meals and sooty walls. Solve the problem by paneling the barbecue corner with plastic-coated, wood-grained hardboard. Any smoke smudges or grease will sponge off with a damp cloth.

CLUBHOUSE FOR HOMEOWNERS . . . At Cape Huntington

Cape Huntington's Clubhomes in Heart of Recreation Area

Cape Huntington, the newest condominium clubhome community in Huntington Beach, is located in the center of a booming recreation area, reports Swen Brockman and Mike Baltes, community managers for S. V. Hunsaker & Sons Inc.

"Within three miles of the project is Huntington Beach State Beach Park and Bolsa Chica State Beach, whose facilities include fire rings, food and rental concessions and sport fishing," said Brockman. "This is also the site of the U.S. Surfboard Championships."

The Huntington Beach Recreation Department offers a variety of sports activities at 20 playgrounds. The city has five developed and three partially developed parks. Four park sites have been leased and six sites acquired.

* * * *

FOR ADDITIONAL recreation facilities, the city encompasses three public golf courses: Huntington Beach Country Club, Meadowlark Country Club and Driftwood Beach Club.

Within easy commuting distance are California Angels Stadium, Capistrano Mission, Disneyland, Knott's Berry Farm, Melodyland Theater, Los Alamitos Race Track and Movieland Was Museum, noted Baltes.

At Cape Huntington, two-story Hunsaker-designed clubhomes are available in four floor plans and 12 elevations with up to four bedrooms.

* * * *

PRICED FROM $19,995, homes include built-in appliances, automatic dishwashers, pass-through service bars to patio area, front yard landscaping and underground sprinklers, and wall-to-wall nylon carpeting.

Some models include built-in wet bars, master suites with private sundecks, sliding glass walls to private patio terraces and Jack 'n Jill convertible bedroom/study.

Recreation facilities include a Mariner's clubhouse, a heated swimming pool, a putting green and barbecue pits.

Furnished models are open daily from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. They may be reached from the Santa Ana Freeway, Beach Boulevard (Hwy. 39) off-ramp south to Adams, east to Cannery Street, and south to the models.

You Sleep Less, You Rest More

We soon may be sleeping less and enjoying it more.

A mattress manufacturer is devising a "sleep capsule" bed which cuts down the effects of gravity during sleep and eliminates noise, light, cold or overheating. Modeled after the astronauts' capsule "beds," the mattress would permit greater rest and relaxation during shorter periods of sleep.

What's in a Name? Ask the Builder

Home builders often seek immortality by naming streets or entire communities after themselves. If the main street in Jones Village is called Jones Boulevard, Jones is likely to have directed construction, and the first streets in the development were probably named for his wife and children.

But a builder in Clinton, Conn., would rather be honest than immortal. He named a major street High Taxes Road after "a little trouble with local politicians."

Elegance Theme in Big Premier Homes

One of the most popular plans in the Premier Homes development in Stanton features the dramatic use of double iron gate with Atrium entry. Wide double-doors and covered porch with planter space offer a truly elegant entrance to a home that is designed for gracious living.

The master suite with tiled Roman bath is separated from the additional three bedrooms and sectional bath-powder room by the wide entry hall which leads back to the spacious living room. Sliding glass doors beside the hearth open into the patio area.

Family room and dining area adjoin the all-electric kitchen, designed for indoor and outdoor serving convenience.

* * * *

OF GREAT interest to buyers is the ample storage and closet space. The three-car garage offers 200 cubic feet for storage, as well as rough-in for washer and dryer.

Frank McFarland, sales manager, reminds prospective buyers that they may choose from several optional room arrangements as well as select their own colors for walls, counters and trim, if they purchase their new home before completion. Builder William Rousey guarantees quality of construction throughout.

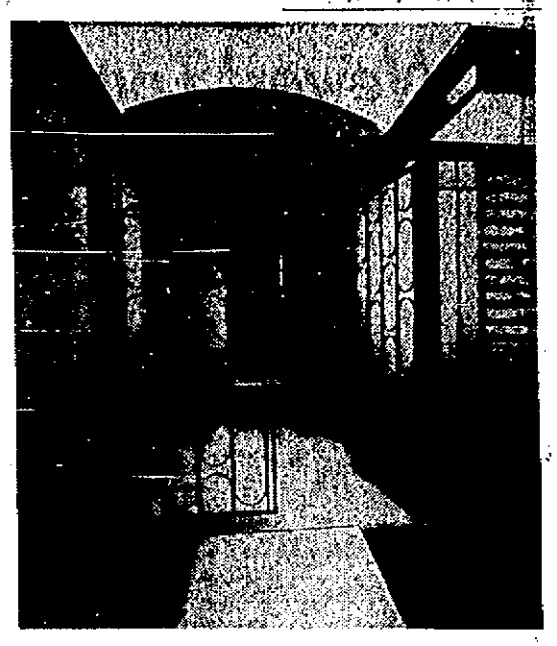

Premier Homes are located near Beach Boulevard on Chapman Avenue in Stanton. Prices range from $24,500 to $27,900. VA and FHA financing as well as conventional loan financing.

The homes may be reached by taking the Beach Boulevard (Hwy. 39) turn-off from the Santa Ana Freeway south to Chapman Avenue. Turn left on Chapman. From the Garden Grove or San Diego freeways take the Beach Boulevard turn-off north to Chapman and right to Premier.

Home's Good Looks

Roofs play an important role in architectural design.

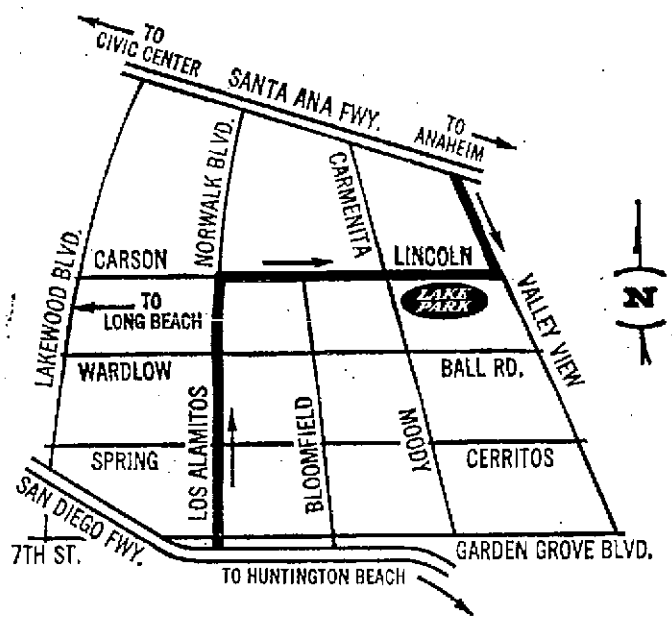

According to a national roofing magazine, architects consider a roof's shape, color and texture to be "critical" to the over-all design of residences and other buildings.

Newest Tourist Attraction: Anaheim's Unfinished Convention Center

Anaheim's $16 million convention center already is a traffic snarler as passersby—tourists and local folks alike—slow their pace to admire the massive skeleton of concrete and steel on the south side of Katella Avenue, between West Street and Harbor Boulevard.

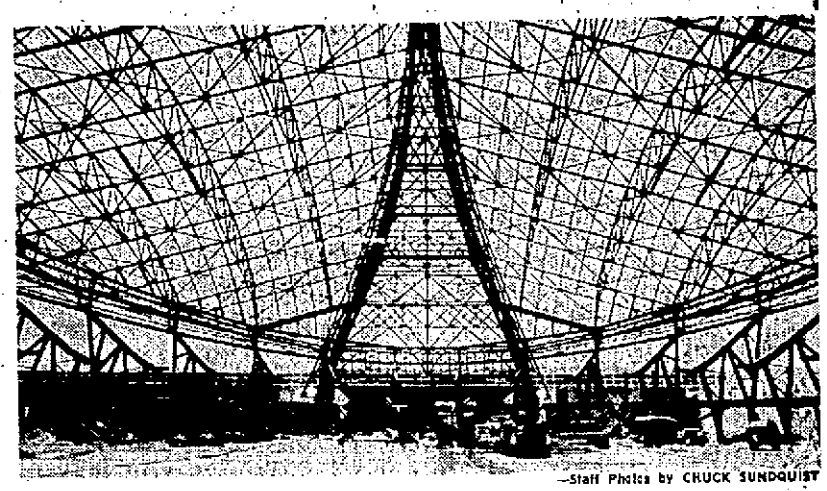

Not since the superstructure for Anaheim Stadium went up last year has there been such an impressive construction program in the area.

Currently, the skeletal mammoth resembles in shape (at left) a gigantic denuded flying saucer. Workmen (at right) are dwarfed as they labor about mid-floor beneath the open framework.

The building is due for completion late this year and will provide an arena seating 9,000 (5,500 permanent seats), 28 meeting rooms and banquet facilities for 3,000.

The ultramodern center is going up on a 55-acre parcel, chosen by the Anaheim City Council from six possible sites two years ago.

Builder is the Del Webb Corp., the company which also erected modernistic Anaheim Stadium, home of the California Angels.

Personality Trend Studied

MADISON (UPI)—"If a little girl is to become a feminie woman, it's more important that she has a warm and masculine father rather than a very feminine mother," says a University of Wisconsin psychologist.

Prof. E. Marvis Hetherington said it is also important that the little girl's father is affectionate with her mother. For little boys, she indicated it is best that the father be the dominant person in the family. The conclusions were based on studies into children's personality development and sex-role preference.

Big La Palma Homes Now Closing Sales

Casa La Palma Homes, located just east of Lakewood in the fast growing La Palma area, announced closing out sales are under way.

Offering 2,280 square feet for $29,850, the Casa La Palma development has seen a strong sales rush since opening. The homes are offered on FHA terms or VA terms of no down for veterans and 5¾% loans for 30 years.

The four-bedroom, three-bath homes include formal dining room and family room. The master bedroom is large enough for king-size Hollywood beds. Each bedroom has huge walk-in closets. There is a fireplace in the family room.

* * * *

KITCHENS contain built-in range and oven, dishwasher, disposal and ceramic tile kitchen counters. Other features include cast iron tubs, custom light fixtures, generous use of mirrors, fenced yards and shake roofs. The homes are within walking distance of schools and shopping.

To see the homes, drive east on Del Amo Boulevard to Casa La Palma, just east of Carmenita Road.

Los Angeles Realtor to Be REC Speaker

"A New Challenge" will be the topic discussed by Tommy Francis, Los Angeles Realtor, before members of the North Long Beach Real Estate Club at their 8 a.m. meeting Thursday at the Park Pantry, 17511 S. Susana Road.

Publicity chairman Lela F. Starr said Francis, owner of a firm by the same name, will explain how the present loan market can be considered a challenge.

Window Location Aids Ventilation

Window location has a lot to do with the comfortable ventilation of your house.

Windows placed toward the center of the room afford a freer circulation of air than those placed in the corner. And windows placed in the lower part of the wall direct air through the room level at which occupants sit and stand.

OLA SUITT'S RAGS-TO-RICHES STORY

10-Year-Old Trade School Spreads Across Four Counties

By EARL GRISWOLD

Ola Suitt, 54-year-old Lynwood businesswoman, believes there is a lot of sense in the old-fashioned Horatio Alger stories of rags-to-riches success through individualism and faith.

She is the founder of West Coast Trade and Business Schools, a $6 million-a-year business.

Ten years ago, Mrs. Suitt wasn't so sure about the Horatio Alger-type of thinking.

Indeed, her record wasn't impressive. She was a high school dropout, had failed in a restaurant business, was about to become a divorcee and was on the relief rolls.

* * * *

SHE ENROLLED in a trade school to learn grocery checking. But her counselor frankly told her she was "too old, too fat, and the union didn't recognize private trade school graduates," she recalls.

The negative advice sparked her into a positive program of action. She got jobs at two grocery stores—both union stores—before her graduation from the trade school—because she needed the money and to prove she could do it.

Upon graduation she was hired by the school as an instructor in grocery checking. But after six months, she found she had no voice in the policy of the school.

* * * *

SHE QUIT and opened her own grocery-checking school in Compton on Oct. 15, 1956, with a $1,000 personal loan from a friend. The $1,000 was quickly diluted with a down payment on a cash register, purchase of a scale, and rental and refurbishing of office-school quarters.

She recruited a class of 10 students. Upon graduation, eight found jobs. Today, one is manager of a Compton supermarket. Another is manager of a Los Angeles drug store and owns his own neighborhood market.

More students enrolled, and industry showed interest in her graduates. West Coast Trade and Business began to grow.

* * * *

NOW WEST COAST has schools in Long Beach, Anaheim and 16 other cities of Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside and San Bernardino Counties. It is the largest private school in the state, Mrs. Suitt proudly notes.

By 1959 expansion pains were creating an executive work load too burdensome for the founder to carry alone. She persuaded her son, Tom, of Santa Ana, to give up his job as an auto parts manager for a Huntington Park car dealer and join West Coast as a partner. Tom, now 29, is president of West Coast, and Mrs. Suitt is chairman of the board of the family-owned corporation.

* * * *

ADMINISTRATIVE offices of West Coast occupy the entire second floor of the Security First National Bank building at 11301 S. Long Beach Blvd., Lynwood.

Both Mrs. Suitt and Tom maintain close personal touch with their schools which offer a curriculum of 37 courses, ranging from a four-week PBX class to an 18-month class in electronics and color television maintenance. The school, with a staff of 275 employes, operates on a year-round basis.

Tom, who has statistics of the school at his fingertips, says average daily attendance is 1,800 students, with a seasonal fluctuation in enrollment. Last year, 7,500 students completed training courses at West Coast schools.

* * * *

ABOUT 40% of the students are women.

Today's students range in age from 17 to 80. The typical student is 33 years old.

"You've got to realize the average person will change jobs — to jobs requiring training—at least four times in his lifetime," he said. "There is a real need for more training programs as technology advances."

Tom was appointed last year by Dr. Max Rafferty to the statewide Advisory Committee on Private Education. He is also vice president of the California Association of Private Schools and Colleges.

* * * *

UNDER HIS direction, West Coast operates a two-week program for the National Aeronautical and Space Administration, training about 600 supervisory persons of NASA-connected firms each year.

The school also has a contract with the Bureau of Indian Affairs, training about 100 students a year who emigrate from the reservations.

This spring, West Coast opened the Watts Community Skill Center with 360 students enrolling the first day under a contract with the State Department of Vocational Education.

The Watts project, financed by funds from the Manpower Development Training Act, "is the most exciting and challenging undertaking of West Coast since I joined the firm," Tom said.

Last month (June) the San Lorenzo won the Award of Merit for its "quality of exterior and interior design and floor plan." It was chosen from 116 entries from the Western United States in the Pacific Coast Builders Conference-American Builder Magazine Gold Nugget Contest.

* * * *

ONE UNUSUAL CUSTOM feature that caught the attention of the contest judges was the living room, which has nearly an entire wall of glass. The award-winning San Lorenzo model home also has an elevated brick fireplace and hearth, and a beamed ceiling with indirect lighting. It's spacious breakfast area, contiguous to the kitchen, provides seating space for eight people, and its oversized windows add to the cheerfullness of dining.

The activities room has an adjoining bath for easy conversion of the room into large guest quarters.

There are three additional bedrooms and two baths upstairs.

The model homes are on Chrisanta Drive, Mission Viejo and are priced from $20,950 to $27,500. Mission Viejo is 12 miles southeast of Santa Ana and may be reached via the Santa Ana-San Diego Freeway, taking the off ramp at La Paz road.

Retail Clerks' Local Observes 30th Year

Thirty years of progress were celebrated last week by Retail Clerks Union Local 324 in Buena Park as the union observed the anniversary of issuance of its charter to eight members on July 3, 1936.

Arthur Z. Berland, secretary-treasurer of the 12,000-member organization, said "Local 324 is proud to be recognized as an integral part of the many communities where our members live and work.

"Our continuing growth is a reflection not only of our own members' determination to stand together for the common good of all, but also of acceptance by the business community of the union as a vital part of the employer-employe relationship."

LOCAL 324'S AUDITORIUM . . . With Offices

THE ORGANIZATION occupied a one-room rental office in its earlier years. Then, in September, 1950, with 2,300 members, it moved to an old two-room house in Long Beach. By January, 1953, there were more than 3,600 members, necessitating construction of the union's own office building in Long Beach.

However, Local 324 continued its dramatic development and in November, 1957, the organization occupied its present building on a four-acre site in Buena Park. At that time, the union had 7,000 members, and it has added over 5,000 more since.

WITH MORE THAN 14,800 square feet of modern office space and a beautiful auditorium that has become an outstanding community center, Local 324 today has the reputation of having pioneered more innovations in membership and community services than any other local union in the United States.

Among these innovations are a $10,000 annual college scholarship program for members and their families; a $10,000 annual fellowship-in-perpetuity for heart disease research at the City of Hope; extensive newspaper and billboard advertising campaigns to acquaint the public with Local 324's aims and purposes; annual social events for members and their families to enjoy; continuing participation in many types of community activities, and active support of charitable organizations.

Groundbreaking ceremonies were held last week for T. G. & Y. Variety Store Company's new Western Division warehouse and offices to be constructed on a nine-acre site at the southeast corner of Alondra Boulevard and Valley View Avenue, La Mirada.

The parcel was purchased by T. G. & Y. from Santa Fe Railroad. Real estate negotiations were handled by R. O. Ralston of T. G. & Y.'s Real Estate Department and by William D. Beaver of Santa Fe Railroad's Industrial Development Department.

Harvey Aluminum in St. Croix Expansion

On the island of St. Croix, a swamp and dump have been converted into a tremendous engineering accomplishment.

The company that is creating this industrial miracle is Harvey Aluminum of Torrance, a primary aluminum producer invited by the Government of the Virgin Islands to provide the people of the Virgin Islands with a larger source of employment and to help the Virgin Islands become self-sustaining.

Harvey operates aluminum reduction facilities in Oregon and fabrication plants in California, Michigan, Tennessee and Kentucky.

On a world basis, the company is partners with Norsk Hydro in the building and operation of facilities in the island of Karmoy in the southwest region of Norway and his developed bauxite deposits in West Africa.

* * * *

THE ST. CROIX aluminum plant will refine bauxite into alumina, which is then shipped to the reduction facilities to be reduced to metalic aluminum.

A 750,000-gallon-per-day water desalting installation will provide the water required for the huge new plant, one of the few industrial plants in the Western Hemisphere to depend entirely on converted sea water as its only source of fresh water.

* * * *

TO SERVE THE new alumina plant as well as the island of St. Croix, Harvey recently opened a new deep-water port in the Virgin Islands called Port Harvey. The reclamation of a swamp area and its conversion into a modern sheltered port is an impressive engineering accomplishment, according to shipping authorities.

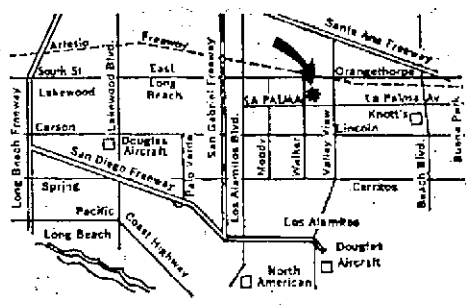

The channel leading to the port is 2½ miles long and 300 feet wide, with a depth of 35 feet. The turning basin is 1,100 feet wide and 1,600 feet long.

Continuing Don Wilson Builders' long standing policy of quality construction with total community planning in every development, Orangewood, in the East Long Beach area, is approaching completion, and Don Wilson, president of the company, announced that 50% of the homes have been sold.

Many buyers have chosen the completely finished models and have already moved into their Orangewood homes, while others have taken advantage of Wilson's offer to customize homes bought while still in the construction process.

* * * *

TOTAL COMMUNITY planning gives the new development an air of neighborhood serenity, with wide paved streets, accented by decorative street lights, and front-landscaping with lawns and shrubbery flourishing. All utilities are underground and sewers and sidewalks have been paid for and installed. The neighborhood park, dedicated by Wilson, and walled from street traffic, offers complete family picnic facilities, as well as paved courts and a fully equipped playground for the youngsters.

Flexible Law for Zoning Is Wise for City

Communities should have a reasonable degree of flexibility in zoning so that areas that may be desirable to industry can be rezoned for that purpose without a battle, states John R. Weaver, sales manager of the Du Pont Company's real estate division in the current issue of the Society of Industrial Realtors' Newsletter.

"Planners, in setting aside industrial tracts, should take into account the needs of industry and not willy-nilly assign an industrial classification arbitrarily to a tract of land, desirable or not," he asserts.

* * * *

"A WELL LAID-OUT and regulated industrial park can be just as attractive, if not more so, than a residential subdivision and certainly produces more benefits to the community in the way of tax revenue, employment, and growth."

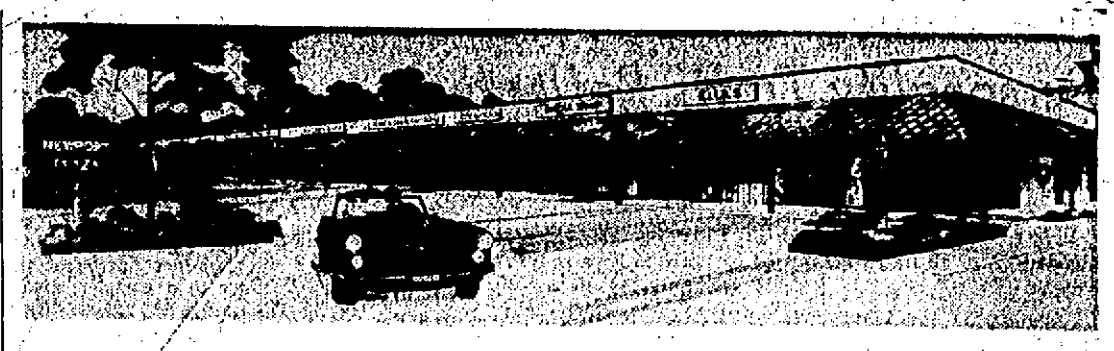

The Society, a professional affiliate of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, is composed of more than 1,000 members who specialize in marketing industrial properties and meeting the real estate needs of industry.

In discussing what communities can do in land development practices to make the area more attractive to industry, Weaver writes:

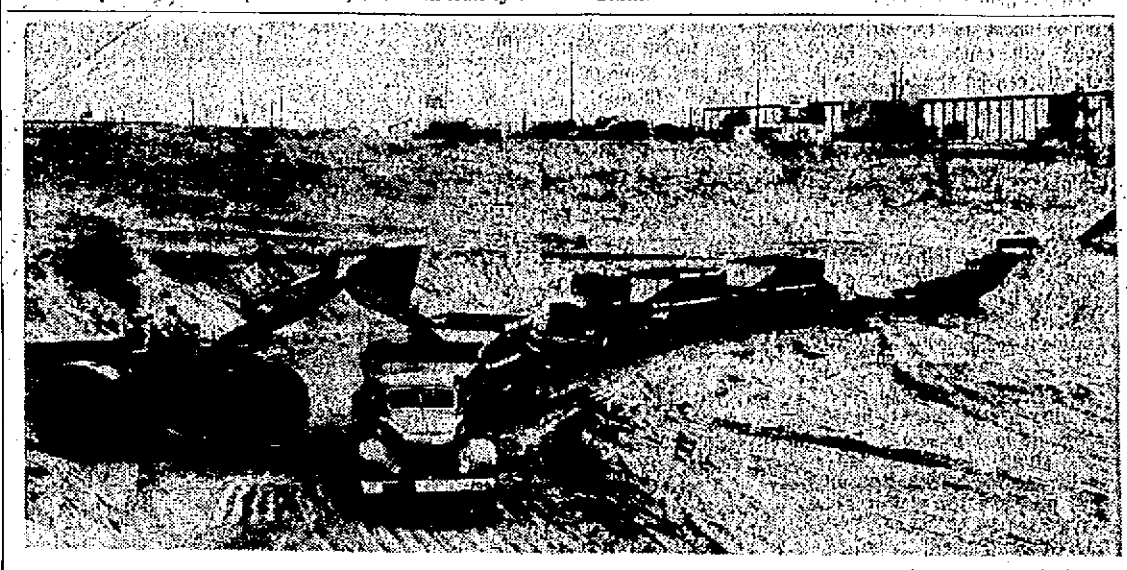

* * * *

"ONE OF THE MOST obvious, yet frequently overlooked, factors in this respect is the availability of land within a community for industrial development.

"Unfortunately, there is a general tendency throughout the country for community planners and zoners to lay out the community and, after looking out for the needs of residential, commercial and civic nature, to designate whatever is left over—usually the swamp land and other least desirable portions of the community — for industrial use.

DEVELOPER COMMENDED AT TUSTIN
Tustin city councilmen have officially commended a local developer firm, Argyros & Frank, for "enhancing the beauty of the city" with their development of Newport Plaza, the community's newest shopping center, of Spanish architecture and costing $400,000. # Floating Aluminum Airfield Will Convert Marsh to Landing Area

Special to the Progress Section

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—A rugged, portable, floating aluminum airfield that will convert marshes and rice paddies into "hardened" operating areas has been developed for the U.S. Navy by Aluminum Company of America.

Extensive tests conducted at the U.S. Army Engineer Waterways Experiment Station, Vicksburg, Miss., dramatically demonstrated the capabilities of Alcoa Floating Landing Mats.

A 13,000-pound UH-34D helicopter executed a series of landing and taxi tests on aluminum helipads installed on both water and marshy surfaces.

* * * *

THE ALUMINUM panels performed to expectations, withstanding 13-ton landing impacts, and resisting bending and shearing forces set up as the helicopter taxied to within two feet of the airfield edge.

Additional tests under actual operating conditions now are scheduled in Viet Nam.

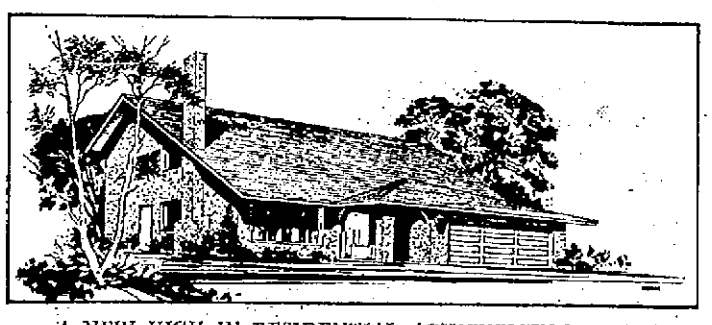

The new landing mat — designated AM-3 by the Bureau of Naval Weapons—was designed by Aluminum Company of America under direction of the U.S. Navy, and produced under a Naval Air Engineering Laboratory contract.

* * * *

THE PROGRAM was sponsored by the Advanced Research Project Agency. The mat is an assembly of aluminum panels bolted together to form a high-strength, rigid structure.

Operational requirements included lightweight construction, use of a polyurethane core, ability to replace damaged panels easily, and a two-year life expectancy in marshes and rice paddies.

Personality Traits Reflected in Types of Driver Accidents

Is it possible to eliminate almost 95% of all traffic accidents?

According to the Liberty Mutual Insurance Companies the answer is yes—through a program of driver selection, training and testing.

The Boston-based insurance firm has devised a method by which most of the drivers who will cause future accidents can be spotted today—an amazing degree of accuracy. The companies have also developed a method of training "potential-accident" drivers so they will not have accidents.

"We can even tell you what type of accident a driver will probably have," says James J. McCormick, assistant vice president for Liberty Mutual.

* * * *

McCORMICK'S method of spotting drivers likely to have accidents is based on a five-year study of Liberty Mutual's records which proved that poor drivers almost always have some outstanding undesirable personality traits.

"Such characteristics in an individual as over-agressiveness, resentment of authority, impulsiveness, low stress tolerance, lack of social responsibility or a poor attitude toward safe driving each indicate a different way a man will drive," McCormick relates.

"Personality traits coupled with such other information as physical deficiencies, knowledge of driving skills and the degree to which a driver may be anti-social will tell you if the driver is going to have an accident," he says.

A further study of a driver's background will indicate—in most cases—whether he will get into a rear-end collison, an intersection accident or some other type of accident, says McCormick.

MOST DRIVERS who are spotted as likely to have accidents are trainable—to a degree that they will not have accidents, Liberty Mutual believes.

Several years ago, Liberty Mutual established a "Driver-Trainer Consultant Service" for its policyholders that to date has shown "real progress" in preventing accidents, McCormick said. Some of the fleets Liberty Mutual has worked with have reduced accidents by 50%.

With results like that, demand for Liberty Mutual's consultant service has increased. In fact, demand is so great, that the insurance firm is going to increase the number of its consultants from 8 in 1965 to 20 by the end of this year.

* * * *

IN WORKING with policyholders who have large automobile or truck fleets," McCormick states, "we find that after careful selection of drivers, training them is the most important consideration."

The insurance companies unique method of training drivers—called "Decision Driving"—following the five-year study of accidents caused by driver errors.

"Decision Driving is based on the principle that since most situations involving accidents are repititious, accidents can be avoided if drivers are trained to automatically make the right decision under the prevailing conditions," McCormick says. Stressed, however, is the word automatically.

* * * *

"ABOUT 95% of all automobile accidents are caused by so-called driver error," he said. "In other words, making the wrong decision, usually due to not knowing what decision to make."

McCormick states today most drivers know the "how to" skills, such as mechanical operations and coordination of hands and feet in steering and braking, and the "what to" skills like knowledge of the rules of the road.

"What we recommend teaching the 'when to' skills—knowing when to make a certain driving decision," he said. "This can only come from proper experience and training."

State-Wide Developers in Uniqu Design Concept

State-Wide Developers, Inc., builder of numerous residential projects in the Long Beach-Lakewood area, incorporates a unique concept in designing.

When viewed from street level, State-Wide's 4,300 square-foot apartment units, four to a complex, give the pleasing appearance of a single large home.

This aspect, according to H. Fred Mickelson, residential sales representative, is largely responsible for the fact all of State-Wide's projects to date have been sold prior to completion.

HIGHLIGHTS OF each unit include an all-electric kitchen and, for the entire unit, electric radiant heating system controlled by individual room thermostats, Mickelson said.

H. G. Hanawalt, Southern California Edison Company district manager, has presented a plaque to the firm's principals, Roy E. Hearrean and Alex R. Bellehumeur, recognizing their high standards of electrical planning.

Sterling O'Day to Tour Midwest

Sterling O'Day, retired Long Beach real estate broker-turned-lecturer, has signed a contract to speak at high schools in four Midwest states in the first quarter of 1967.

O'Day, 66, of 1625 Appleton St., will give illustrated lectures on Lincoln and the Civil War at schools in Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska.

His contract was authorized by D. V. Keeler, director of the advisory Bureau of Lectures and Concerts at the University of Kansas in Lawrence.

Harbor District Chambers to Install Officers Tuesday

Annual installation dinner of the Harbor District Chambers of Commerce is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Western Country Club, 120th Street and S. Western Avenue, Los Angeles.

County Supervisor Burton Chace will install Carl J. Hoffman, president; Reed Christiansen, Ove Hoyer, Ortho Cordray and Arthur Reeves, vice presidents; Robert Dunbar, treasurer, and Ruth Peterson, secretary.

This will be a joint installation dinner with members of the Southside Chamber of Commerce who will have Supervisor Kenneth Hahn as their installing officer.

Hoffman, Southside's past president, will be honored by that group.

NEW YORK — Except for heels and flappery waistlines, everything's going up, up, up in New York these days.

Take the skyline. All the way from Central Park to the Battery, spectacular monolithic columns of glass and steel are on the rise, poking more and more towers into the sky.

In the streets below, increasing numbers of cabs, trucks, buses and chauffeur-piloted limousines choke their way through Manhattan's concrete caverns . . .

And underground, New Yorkers are stamping their fashionable low heels, protesting the new 5-cent jump (from 15 to 20 cents) in subway fares, imposed Tuesday by the Transit Authority.

Also included in the fare raise are most bus runs in the city's complicated mass transit network. And there's the announced threat that it may be upped 5 cents more.

The increase is a result of wage boosts following the almost fatal (to the city) transit strike in January.

Stranded here in January without bicycle, roller skates or earmuffs, I've experienced some of the hardships that result from a stoppage in the flow of this great city's arterial life blood.

New Yorkers simply can't circulate from home to job to store without the whirr of wheels in mass transit.

So . . . gothamites will just put another tourniquet around their pocketbooks . . . and career gals will buy even lower heels for short hikes to and from the office.

BUT THEY'LL BE right in step with dame fashion.

In fall-winter fashion collections, previewed the past week for the nation's press by the New York Couture group, many of the going shoes looked like spats without heels.

Newest looks afoot: fur shoes . . . clear plastic tops for boots . . . Persian lamb mules for town . . . also the unexpected combination of clear plastic with Persian lamb.

But this season plastics, vinyls, fun furs and short hemlines aren't the kooky, camp look of last season.

Femininity is staging a comeback.

As Larry Aldrich put it: "This season marks the turn of fashion's tide. Clothes are contemporary, but not knacky . . . They're pretty, but not 'darling.'

"I think we can write finis to the kooky era which has been confusing retailers and fashion followers alike."

He suggested the kooky trend may have been a

DESPITE A HECTIC schedule, Dr. Vernon Brickeys, new president of Downtown Lions, and wife, Eldred, were all smiles when they flew away from here with daughter, Sharon; son, Vernon Jr. That was June 27. Hopefully they'll still be all smiles on return Monday after two weeks' worth of vacationing in Washington, D. C., and Williamsburg, Va., then on to New York to become part of a crowd of some 40,000 delegates at Lions International convention. Which is a heap of activity.

Before they left they attended Vernon's own installation plus FIVE other Lion Club installations. All the while Eldred was working like a beaver on preparations for forthcoming Assistance League Ball, planned and gave a delightful shower for her neice, Sally, and arranged for relatives to live in their home, tend the orchids and dog, during their absence.

THEY SAY you can't win 'em all. As long as you win a big one now and then, that old saw is OK with Gilbert and Margaret Nee because they DID win a big one—an original Rembrandt etching titled, "The Lion Hunt." It all happened when the Nees attended a premiere showing of the Vincent Price art collection at Century Plaza Hotel, a benefit sponsored by L. A.'s Women Against Cancer organization. The etching, as you would no doubt guess, is worth quite a hunk of change.

VICTIMS OF a freak accident while vacationing in Yellowstone, Jessica and Dean Francis (Frenchy) Flynn of Cal State at Long Beach were both due to be released from the hospital and allowed to be home by this weekend. What happened, in case you didn't read about it earlier, is that a tree top fell on their car as they were motoring in the park. Jessica received severe back injuries and "Frenchy's" right hand was seriously hurt.

Jessica flew home Wednesday, accompanied by son and daughter-in-law, Gary and Jo Flynn, and immediately entered Memorial for more X-rays and further check-ups. She had been hospitalized in Montana. However, he was flown here shortly after the accident for hospitalization. He underwent surgery on his hand week ago Saturday. Every bone had been broken "like an eggshell," I was told.

It's a miracle they weren't both killed instantly because that tree top, close to 24 inches in diameter, hurtled down on them as they were doing about 35 miles an hour, smashing through the windshield and into the steering wheel. If it hadn't been for that wheel (and his hand) taking the brunt of the blow they think they would have been.

to Elaine Winston. She and Bill had an open poolside party all day the Fourth; day before they'd been working on their boat so she wound up with a real scorcher.

Among guests at informal affair plus children, for all who have same, were Mott and Shirley Peek, Bud and Norma Hutchinson, Dave and Bev Carmichael, Jan Rinella, Terry Bradley, Carl and Nancy Smedley and George and Maxine Roberts.

SPEAKING of Winston, Bill's mother, Gertrude, who was present at aforementioned party, and good friend, Ella Johnson, flew off Thursday for a month's tour of the Scandinavian countries.

They flew first to Copenhagen to tour Denmark, then will be in Sweden, Norway and Finland. Gertrude's family came from Norway and Ella's from Sweden and they're looking forward to going on a search for relatives. If they can't find any, they can at least do some ancestral record checking of their forebears.

A "WETTING-DOWN" party in the good, old tradition of the U. S. Navy was given by Ralph and Sally Garrison to put the final touches on making his new rank as Rear Admiral, USNA, absolutely official. Ralph was one of only two naval aviators and one in a total of eight in all reserve classifications throughout the country to receive this rank.

The wetting-down party was a cocktail buffet dinner at Los Alamitos Naval Air Station where he started out 31 years ago as an aviation cadet. Among the 100 guests present were the admiral's first commanding officer, Cmdr. Walt Williams, now of Ventura, and his last CO, Capt. Ken McLaren of Los Alamitos.

Ralph's new two-star flag was presented to him at party and was then proudly flown in his honor by Capt. J. G. Hedrick during affair.

Also present were the Garrisons' sons, Ens. Tom, 23, now stationed in San Diego, and Peter, 15, a Navy League sea cadet.

All this excitement following on the heels of a marvelous six-week vacation Ralph and Sally had to Borneo, Singapore, Thailand, Cambodia, Jahore, Malaysia, Hong Kong, Taiwan, Japan and return, via Alaska.

In Borneo, where they were in 120-degree heat, they secured a motorboat to travel up one of those exotic rivers to a camp of headhunters where they stayed all night. Fortunately, these are reformed natives and have been non-headhunters since World War II. Otherwise one would have to conclude the Garrisons were out of their heads to risk such an adventure.

THE WEATHER sent thermometers soaring anywhere from 110 to 115 degrees each of the five days Howard and Shirley Jones spent in those Springs known as Palm. No problem. They stayed at Dave and Cecelia Taillchet's air-conditioned hacienda and between being inside or in the cool pool, they were comfortable as sea breezes.

Don and Jimmie Nutter spent a couple of days with them but had to hurry home Monday to host their traditional Fourth guests to watch fireworks from their beachfront home in Seal Beach.

FOR FIRST TIME in 10 years Billie (Nestle) St. Clair will be back "home" in Long Beach. She and husband, James St. Clair, and their children are due in town July 13 from Boston to stay for about a week at the Edgewater Inn. This will be attorney Jim's first visit back since he was here during the war and incidentally met Billie during one of the Officers' Assemblies at Pacific Coast Club.

Jane and Jim Kresl will entertain for them next Sunday at a dinner party for prewar and wartime friends of the Assemblies gang.

THE SWIMMING POOL'S getting its share of action at Mac and Jane Epley's home since arrival of their son, Malcolm Jr., his wife, Dolores, and their three children.

Fascination for the pool isn't because these Oregonians are any stranger to water but because they're not used to enjoying swimming under warm and sunny skies. But they've certainly all had plenty of action wading along sidewalks under the gray, damp skies of up thataway.

Monthly shipments to go to Viet Nam

Sending a shipment once a month to the men of the 12th Tactical Fighter Wing, 391st Tactical Squadron in Viet Nam is the goal of the Cypress Junior Women's Club.

Freshly baked cookies packed in tin boxes, Kool-Aid, processed cheeses, crackers and Vienna sausage are a few of the items the women feel will be welcomed by the fighting men.

Mrs. Frank Fedowitz, Americanism chairman, received a recent letter from Major Dean C. Hofstad, chaplain of 12th wing, who wrote, "As you might suspect, we were swamped with goodies during the Christmas season. Since then, however, nothing much has come." He went on to say that sending homemade cookies "would be the nicest thing you could do."

The next shipment will be sent July 15 and anyone interested in contributing to this project should contact Mrs. Fedowitz, 5066 Brunswick Dr., Cypress.

HE COOKS TOO

Actor has trunk, will travel

By ELLEN KREC

A trunk plays a serious role in the life of an actor, and it plays a dual role in the life and travels of Robert Miller Driscoll.

He is a character actor with 14 years of experience in his profession as well as an expert in the art of living well, comfortably and occasionally, on a minimum of money. His parents are Rear Adm. and Mrs. Roland D. Driscoll, USN (Ret.) of 4021 Cedar Ave.

Bob's major always has been acting, along with singing and dancing. His minor role is cooking, with an eye to the good life, and he really looks the part of a dedicated actor and epicure. His height is 6 feet and he "keeps" his weight at 300 pounds.

Oddly enough, his success depends on his appearance, and all of his roles have been geared to his size.

He says he could gain to 600 pounds without half trying, but manages to keep his weight down to 300 pounds by eating only twice a day!

He learned to cook while playing in stock. Since he couldn't get home and obviously couldn't afford to eat out, the results were a fine actor and a good cook. He says he never makes desserts because his favorite is his mother's coconut cake made with whipped cream — and he welcomes that at the end of each show's run.

ROBERT DRISCOLL prefers travel by train or automobile. The reason he probably doesn't like to fly is because he can't take the wonderful trunk which holds his clothing as well as his kitchen. He says he very often carries his own trunk—it is so heavy it is hard to find anyone to help.

When you stop to realize "The Trunk" holds all of his spices (if you traveled and had to purchase spices in each town you could understand why), two place settings of china, crystal, tablecloth and napkins, a very heavy skillet, an electric frying pan and coffee maker, and naturally, his candelabra.

Bob played dual roles in "My Fair Lady." He opened in Rochester, N. Y., and played for four and a half years.

He wanted to show his appreciation to the cast as they all traveled West, so he gave a cocktail party. This was no ordinary cocktail party since he started by having a lounge car added to the train. At this time the bank balance was synonymous with his recent success.

The party started at 10 a.m. in Kansas City and lasted until 10 P.M, heaven knows where! In typical Hollywood fashion, everyone dressed for the affair and Bob served French 75's and nine dozen deviled eggs he had brought with him.

HIS DESCRIPTIONS are marvelously colorful, slightly sardonic but never vicious. He was sent to Russia by the State Department to play "My Fair Lady" for three months. From the time the plane developed trouble on the takeoff and had to return to New York, through three months of vodka and caviar, he could write a great deal about "Robert In Vodkaland."

He hates lunch but loves brunch and does a very good Eggs Benedict. First he toasts English muffins and butters them, then he puts thin slices of ham, cheese and tomato, then covers all with heated, canned, Hollandaise sauce to which he had added another egg yolk and 2 tbsps. lemon juice.

The State Department once again is sending a goodwill troupe to South America to do "Carousel" for about 10 weeks this fall, so Bob has been setting the mood with a skillet rice dish that's good enough to eat by itself.

So whether it's Russia, South America, Canada or home, when Robert Miller Driscoll is "between shows," he's COOKING!

Outdoor Beauty

That lovely fair complexion of yours was never meant to stand up to the harsh summer weather. Be kind to it, see that it is well protected when you're golfing, lazing on the beach, or anywhere in the great outdoors. Wear a wide, shady hat and sunglasses — this will keep you from squinting your eyes. Before you venture out smooth on your oil of Olay before making-up, and don't forget your neck. Your skin will maintain a milky look despite the drying effect of the summer.

DEAR ABBY

He likes to rent, not buy

DEAR ABBY: My mother is a very attractive widow, 62 years old but she looks much younger. She met a 60-year-old bachelor, and they hit it off like a couple of teen-agers. He's a real sport and a big spender. He has told all their mutual friends she's the best thing that's happened to him in years, he adores her, blah, blah, blah.

ABBY

They have vacationed together, he took her to the Derby, and now he's talking about a trip to Europe. Abby, Mom is going out of her mind waiting for this man to ask her to marry him. They seem so perfect for each other. She doesn't even look at anyone else, and as far as she knows, he doesn't either. What on earth is he waiting for? It's been nearly two years now. How can Mom build a fire under this man? She'll do anything.

HER DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Tell your mom not to build any fires under her reluctant Lothario or she's likely to see the romance go up in smoke. He sounds like the kind of sport who would rather rent than buy.

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a 22-year-old college girl who has to be continually coaxed and begged to help her mother now and then with an evening meal, to clear off the table, help with the dishes, make her own bed, hang up her clothes, or do her own ironing? When she was away at college, she lived at the dorm and shipped her laundry home for her mother to do and ship back.

HER MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Because somewhere along the line she was given the impression that she could get away with it. And apparently she was right.

Problems? Write to Abby, Box 69100, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply, inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

CHEF OF WEEK

Outdoor living his cup of tea (with scones, that is)

KENNETH G. WALKER

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
Food Editor

"Don't Fence Me In" is his philosophy, NOT particularly his favorite song. To him, the wide open spaces hold very special meaning.

Today's Chef of the Week, Kenneth G. Walker, possesses the same penchant for banking as his grandfather, the late C. J. Walker, and his dad, Gus Walker. Kenneth is executive vice president of Farmers & Merchants Bank which was started by his grandfather 58 years ago.

A native of Seaside Hospital, Ken claims as his alma maters, Poly High and USC, where he majored in business administration and economics. His career in banking started at the age of 14, when he manned the elevator.

As for wide open spaces, Ken and his wife, Nancy, and their five youngsters have, for 15 years, been "avocation" farmers on their 1,500-acre ranch to the north. Cotton, barley and sugar beet crops vie for attention with horses, cattle and a few chickens. Since Ken's first pet was a pig—then a donkey which followed him to school, there just might be a few of those around, too. Forty polo ponies are also residents of the ranch.

RIDING, DISCING, picking cotton and driving a D-8 caterpillar come second nature to John, 16, Howard, 15, Daniel, 13, and are not exactly foreign to Anne Cornelia, 7, and Henry, 1.

A 4-hole polo player, Walker is a member of a polo team, composed of members from Oregon to San Diego, which rides in the Santa Barbara match each year. He's equally adept with fire and branding irons.

Walker has served as president of the Independent Bankers' Association, and as a director of Group 5, California Bankers' Association, both high spots in an independent banker's career.

He also has served as a director of Memorial Hospital, YMCA, Armed Services YMCA, and American Gold Star Homes.

SO WRAPPED up in his work is he, it isn't unusual for him to call home and suggest the family go to dinner, long after hungrier members of the family have eaten.

If our "Chef" does undertake to cook, he can do it well. But generally speaking, his reputation as a cook matches his Dad's—it leaves a bit to be desired. His recipe for F & M Scones, however, is guaranteed.

F & M SCONES

2 cups self-rising flour
½ cup sugar (a bit more, if desired)
1 stick margarine or butter
½ cup currants
1 egg
Approx. ⅓ cup buttermilk or milk

Rub margarine into flour with finger tips till mixture resembles fine bread crumbs. Add sugar and currants and mix well. Add beaten egg and enough milk or buttermilk until mixture leaves sides of bowl. Roll mixture out and cut into triangles or rounds. Brush top with beaten egg and bake in 425-degree oven for 10 to 12 minutes. Split open and spread with butter—eat hot or cold.

A church reception preceded the newlyweds' departure on a trip to Hawaii. They will be at home in San Francisco after Aug. 1. He is a student at the University of California Medical School; his bride will teach school in Daly City.

Costume look is 'in' for fall-winter '66

INSIDE STORY for fall is fur . . . Chinchilla-dyed French rabbit makes lining for jacket of Jack Sarnoff costume in gray worsted. Sliver of dress underneath is cut on bias to move in close on body. (Shoes by Caressa, hat by Mr. John Jr.)

"blessing in disguise."

"Perhaps because of these far out clothes, the couture has swung to a young but elegant opposite—to trends that are beautiful, gay and in good taste."

THE NEW GIRL IN Townley's collection, designed by Chuck Howard, is a graceful sophisticate.

She's the kind of fashion know-it-all who'll be at home in jet or limousine—or at the "right" restaurant. Her hat's an exaggerated cap, built high with the visor tilted slightly to the side like a grenadier's.

In his collection, like most, necklines are swatched high for daytime dresses and costumes. Often they're definite turtle necks . . . sometimes three-cornered scarves that ride free and easy.

Designers have assumed all of women's what-to-wear-with-what problems. Dresses and suits just don't go solo anymore.

If you wear either without its companion cover-up, you'll be (pardon the expression) only half-dressed.

Says Branell: "The costume effect, whether in dress and jacket or three-piece ensemble, has left the suit, as it was once known, far behind."

Monte-Sano & Pruzan's talented and volatile designer, Jacques Tiffeau, does go-with coats that are shorter-than-long, showing the world that dress and coat are twin-types.

Often the dresses are half-and-half, the bottom half the same tweedy or covert material as the coat.

Hacking suits, such as featured by Larry Aldrich, look prophetic with longer jackets, double-vent backs and weskits. Fencer jackets (very newsy), buttoned far to the side, are worn over "sandwich board" skirts with sassy side pleats.

What else is new in New York?

Now . . . for one paper dollar . . . you can go gift-wrapped in a disposable dress (93% paper, 7% nylon) put out by Mars Manufacturing Co. All earthlings can love it and leave it.

Sleeveless, A-line, fire and water resistant . . . after just a few wearings, just throw it into space.

Newest "in" place for New York discotheque writhers is The Cheetah, 53rd and Broadway (that's the old Palladium). It adds a fashion note, too, with its Cheetabooteek, an all-night vendor of far-out garb (more about that in a later story) . . .

Reflecting today's fashion look, Klein's Department Store features a window of short-short miniskirts, each mannequin has a big daisy painted on her knee.

The title "up go the skirts, down go the eyes."

More on-the-scene fashion news tomorrow.

Baton champ warns hopefuls to watch out for trombones

By ELISE EMERY

Beverly Miller Johnson just can't stop twirling.

She started by chance when she was 9, went on to win herself right out of competition.

One day little Beverly went with a friend to a baton twirling lesson and before long was a member of Ted Otis's Twirlerettes. Her first trophy was for attendance. Then the pretty brunette began sweeping the field.

Some high spots:

The first time the Lakewood High School Lancer Marching Band competed in the All Western Band Review, in 1958, Beverly won the title of top girl baton twirler. The band, only two years old, stepped out smartly before 100,000 spectators, proud in bright red uniforms, white shoes and gloves, and glittering shakos. Beverly, 15, led the band, one of 60 units in competition, and repeated her sweepstakes honors the next year.

SHE WENT right on winning dozens and dozens of trophies.

She became state champion in January 1960, taking highest honors in the National Majorette contest in the Winter Carnival at St. Paul, Minn.

And that did it.

With that trophy, when she was 17, Beverly became ineligible to compete again. However, in March 1961, within one week, she was named Miss Teen Age Miss by Lakewood Junior Women's Club and was selected Lakewood's Good Citizen of the Year by the DAR.

Her advice then to ambitious twirlers was, "Just stay out in front and watch out for the trombones."

Beverly attended California State College at Long Beach for three years. In 1963 she married Roger R. Johnson, who teaches band and orchestra at DeMille Junior High School.

BEFORE her marriage she had garnered 252 trophies.

"It's a puzzle to know where to put them," admitted her mother, Mrs. D. G. Miller, 3760 Greenbrier Road. Both Mr. and Mrs. Miller are active in the Baton Boosters Association and their son, Darryl, 18, took 187 trophies before he won the senior boys national championship in 1964, thus also becoming ineligible for further competition.

"There are trophies on bookshelves and tables, in boxes, in the attic. I rotate them from time to time. It's a problem to keep them dusted.

"But there are two we'll never put away—the two sportsmanship trophies the children won."

BEVERLY, whose home now is at 5359 Anaheim Road, still teaches at her parents' home.

She began teaching when she was 13—two neighborhood youngsters.

"But baton twirlers will go a long way for lessons," she said.

Once a month she conducts classes in San Diego and one of her pupils, Carol Moss, 15, meets her there for lessons. Carol is last year's national junior champion. She lives in El Centro.

"I'm much more nervous when one of my students is competing than when I myself used to compete," Beverly smiled.

"She's beginning to see how parents feel when their youngsters are in contests," her mother added.

BATON TWIRLING, said Beverly, is a combination of art and sport, calling for dancing, an exacting sense of rhythm, and coordination of all the muscles of the body.

Beverly first teaches her students the eight basic twirls.

"Then you can get creative and combine them. Wherever we've traveled, I've taken lessons—even if just one—from the top twirler in the area to get new ideas."

Once, there was a great difference of style between East Coast and West Coast twirling. With the rise of music camps, bringing together young people from all over the United States, the styles are becoming more alike.

Beverly and her husband are enroute to the America's Youth on Parade exposition which will feature activities of the National Baton Twirling Association on the campus of the University of Mississippi today through next Saturday. As chief judge and assistant director of the exposition she will evaluate important contests and serve as director of the first annual national majorette parade contest.

SEVERAL thousand participants, representing outstanding twirlers, drum majors and majorettes, color guards and drummers from all over the nation have registered for the event. The spectacular is a joint effort of the university and the National Twirling Association.

"The association is the second largest organization for young people in the country—second only to Girl Scouts," Beverly pointed out proudly. "You learn a lot of twirling, but the most important lesson is sportsmanship."

Says Walter Jones, gallery director, "among the sculptures is a mask used by the ancestor cult of the Baule tribe along the Ivory Coast. The cult is based on the concept that the mask became the abode of the spirit of the ancestor, who might have been the ancestor of the tribe or the deceased father or mother."

The gallery is open during the summed Mondays through Fridays from 2 to 9 p.m. There is no admission charge.

ARTIST of the month at Lakewood Artists Guild Gallery, 5942 South St., Lakewood, is Al Kramsky. His exhibit includes portraits, landscapes, seascapes and a panel of unusual bottles. Gallery hours are noon to 5 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays with Friday hours extended to 9 p.m., closed Sundays.

LBAA 42nd annual shown in two galleries

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

The "42nd Annual Exhibition" of the Long Beach Art Association is on display this month. The works selected by Dr. Charles M. Thompson are at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., and the rest are in the association's gallery, 800 E. Ocean Blvd.

The museum show is attractive, much is good work, but, with notable exceptions, this could have been an exhibit in 1965 or 1960, or . . . Artists whose work looked good and promising then still are doing the same thing now. It is hard to account for this. Long Beach is not located in some remote hamlet, but is surrounded by exhibits of the most exciting art of our time.

Among artists that are "with it" is Robert Oxenfeld whose steel sculpture is a monumental concept and could be executed in any size. It reaches and grows in two long tendrils which terminate in interlocked rings. A cluster of disks carry the motif from the base which is, itself, a ring.

BYRON RODARMEL'S "New Day" in black and white has much going: It's in the powerful figure tradition of Rico Le Brun, it occupies the field in an excellent composition, it expands joyously into our space.

Best of show went to Don Hadley for his oil, "Wilted Wildflowers." Dr. Eugene Wallin, who took second best of show, uses a luxuriously large brush in his wet on wet watercolor, "Pacific Outpost," to gain a turbulency and expression in limited color in this medium. Edna Padrick won first honorable mention with an oil, "Weed Pots."

ALSO TO BE mentioned in a positive vein are Grace Dimmick's thoughtful "5 Faces in a Mirror — August '65," Florence Arnold's immaculate optical "Red Figure," Loyce Carhart's witty "Condominium," and Joy Elliott's college, "Shibui 4" (though Shibui it is not).

It would have been easy to say something nice about every work in the show, but these are serious artists who have mastered technique. Thus, the show does not warrant an indulgent review so much as a prodding to get out, look, understand, feel, and "get with it."

Grove concert

Pianist Marilyn Neeley and cellist Joanna de Keyser will be featured in the second "Concerts in the Grove" concert Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Soroptimist House patio at California State College, Long Beach. Miss Neeley has appeared with more than 50 orchestras in this country and Mexico. Miss de Keyser is an acknowledged master of the cello. Tickets are $1.50.

'Bus to Bowl' has Hollywood goal

"Bus to Bowl" is a project of the Long Beach Committees of Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, offering anyone interested transportation, box supper and a choice seat at the Rumanian Folk Ballet's performance at Hollywood Bowl Saturday, Aug. 6.

This is the ballet company which brought audiences to their feet cheering the artistry, exuberance and flashing patterns for seven performances at the Music Center in March.

The indefatigable Rumanians will appear in the Bowl Aug. 1, 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10. The Long Beach bus—or buses—will leave for the Aug. 6 performance promptly at 6:15 p.m., from Petroleum Club, 3636 Linden Ave. The price is $6.50. Checks must be received by July 27, made payable to Long Beach Auxiliary, Southern California Symphony. Mail them to Mrs. Leroy Carlisle, 2015 Pine Ave.

THIS WEEK, Thomas Schippers, young American conductor, will lead the Los Angeles Philharmonic in two concerts, both beginning at 8:30 p.m. Leonard Pennario will be soloist on the all-Beethoven program Tuesday and Itzhak Perlman, Israeli violinist; Gwendolyn Killebrew, American mezzo-soprano; and the Roger Wagner Chorale will join the conductor and orchestra for the Thursday performance.

Friday will be jazz night featuring the Stan Getz Quartet, Jimmy Smith Trio, the John Handy Quintet and vocalist Sarah Vaughan.

Saturday, composer-conductor Percy Faith will direct the Hollywood Bowl Pops Orchestra with the George Shearing Quintet as special guests.

Brown in 'Oliver'

Georgia Brown, British singing star who created the lead of Nancy in "Oliver!" in London and New York, will again play the role at Carousel Theater, West Covina. The musical adaptation of Dickens' "Oliver Twist" will run two weeks, beginning Tuesday.

Kay Starr to replace Merman

Kay Starr whose latest engagement was at the New Century Plaza Hotel, Los Angeles, will replace Ethel Merman in "Call Me Madam" Aug. 16 through 28 at Melodyland Theater, Anaheim.

The musical is one of the theater-in-the-round's summer programs. "How to Succeed in Show Business Without Really Trying" will play July 19 through 31, following the current "Little Me" with Jack Carter and Sheila Doyle. Other musicals will be "The Sound of Music," Aug. 2 through 14, and Kiss Me Kate," Sept. 6 through 18.

iDscounts will be given on purchase of tickets for all four coming shows and patrons may use their BankAmericards when buying by mail order.

Laguna tells dates for opera

The 1966 Festival of Opera, which will follow the Festival of Arts in Irvine Bowl, Laguna Beach, will include three different programs given in six performances.

Productions are "Madam Butterfly" Aug. 19 and 20 (with a special hospital benefit Aug. 21); "Spanish Hour" and "Carmina Burana" Aug. 26 and 27; and "Tales of Hoffmann" Sept. 2 and 3.

Opera-goers who want to enjoy a picnic under the stars may order, at $2 each, box suppers including fried chicken, cole slaw, cranberry jelly, roll and fruit tart. Orders may be placed with the Festival of Opera.

Mathis to sing at Greek

How does an entertainer become a star? Sometimes it takes years of study and preparation and hard work before a performer is recognized. In the case of Johnny Mathis, who will be at the Greek Theater for one week beginning Monday, it took natural talent and being seen at the right place at the right time by the right person.

Johnny at 19 was just ready to begin his second year at San Francisco State College. Although he had studied for seven years with a well-known vocal coach, he decided to continue as an undergrad and not to make singing his career.

Then one Sunday afternoon he attended an informal jazz session staged by friends. Johnny sang a song to the audience which happened to include a talent scout for Columbia Records in New York, who was vacationing in San Francisco.

After the show, the scout sent a telegram to New York, "Have found phenomenal 19-year-old boy! Send blank contracts!" Johnny signed with Columbia.

Mathis will be accompanied by his own orchestra under the direction of Jack Feierman and a new exciting group formed here in California "Our Young Generation" consisting of 14 talented boys and girls.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon F. Frazer, 1201 Los Altos Ave., wore a gown of delustered peau de soie and re-embroidered Italian lace. A headpiece of small jeweled roses held her tiered veil of illusion. She carried a Bible with hand-carved mother of pearl cover, brought to her as a gift from Jerusalem. It was topped with an arrangement of white orchids and stephanotis.

MRS. RICHARD F. HUGHES

Mrs. James R. Carlson of Boulder, Colo., sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Other attendants were Mrs. Allen Roth and Miss Luanne Stroppe. Wendy Sukman was flower girl.

The bridegroom, a resident of Tulare, where the newlyweds will reside, is the son of Lt. Col. Richard Hughes, Her Majesty's Forces, Ret., and Mrs. Hughes, 21218 Wilder Ave., Lakewood. Best man was Richard Logue of Vista. Ushering the 400 guests were Robert Umphress and Allan Hively.

A NATIVE of Long Beach, the new Mrs. Hughes will transfer her credits from California State College at Long Beach to Fresno State where she will resume her schooling in the fall.

The bridegroom received early schooling in Wales, where he was born. He attended the Royal Army Apprentice School at Chepstow, Mon., South Wales, a school for army officers serving the United Kingdom. He spent three years in Germany in the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers attached to the Royal Dragoon Guards.

The bride was active in Girl Scouting for 11 years, is a charter member of Memorial Hospital's Volunteens, Voluntones and the hospital's adult Volunteers.

A reception at Long Beach Yacht Club followed the nuptials after which the newlyweds departed for a honeymoon at Lake Tahoe.

West left holding the spades

South ran the rest of his diamonds while West followed. South checked off four diamonds.

Then South took his ace and king of clubs and checked off two clubs when West discarded on the last club lead. . .

This meant that West had started with five spades and was still holding four of them. East therefore held only one spade.

South played his king of spades. West took his ace and led the suit back. He couldn't do anything else because he was down to spades. South ducked the dummy and let the trick ride around to his ten spot.

There was no danger in the play. South knew that East had no more spades just as surely as if East had exposed his hand.

THE expression "counting the hand" represents bridge thought at its best. It also is fairly easy if you get in the habit of starting your count early and bear in mind that when you know how many cards a player holds in three suits then by simple substraction from 13 you know the total in the fourth.

Everyone at the table except South scraped the bottom of the barrel in order to find bids.

With 19 high card points, South was well within bounds when he jumped to three no-trump.

South won the second heart and went to dummy with the queen of clubs in order to lead the ten of diamonds for a finesse. West won with the king and, for want of anything better to do, returned the suit.

USUALLY, when both sides play the same suit one is wrong but this time both sides were playing correctly.

South checked off two hearts for West. Had West held another heart, West would have led that suit.

TRAVEL and RESORTS

Traveling with Stan Delaplane

SAN FRANCISCO—Here's something worthwhile on any trip. IAMAT (International Association for Medical Assistance to Travelers) has 140 offices in 50 countries. Phone open 24 hours a day.

You call. They send you an English-speaking doctor — he's backgrounded on North Americans, common allergies, what medicines they can tolerate and so on. You need a membership card. It's free. From a travel agent or write the office of the Association at 745 Fifth Ave., New York City.

A good booklet is "Health Guide for Travelers," 50 cents, from Consumers Union, Mount Vernon, N.Y. 10550. Gives list of shots you need for all parts of the world; medical supplies to take along; common sense ideas on how to stay well.

Have your teeth checked before you take off. Take along the prescription for your glasses. Most common overseas problems are hangover, sunburn, insect bites, dysentery.

* * * *

"Do we need vaccinations for a trip to Mexico?"

MEXICO always checks my yellow health card when I go in at Mexico City airport but not when I drive in. However, the United States won't let you back into America from anywhere without it — certified that you've had a smallpox vaccination within the last three years. Get U.S. Health or your local Board of Health to certify it.

U.S. Public Health will send you recommended immunizations. Jet travel has brought some rapid epidemics to Europe—smallpox and typhoid. It's comforting to know you've had shots when you read that in the morning paper.

* * * *

"We will take a leisurely driving trip around England in September. Some of it in the Lake country (where my family originated). Do you know of a way we can trace their history?"

BRITISH Travel (the Government tourist office) should have some information on this. At 64 St. James's St., London, or 680 Fifth Ave., New York City. There are a lot of records that can be searched—taxes, land holdings, births, deaths.

If the original immigrants to America go many generations back, you ought to research as much as you can here. It can be done by mail. Gives you a better idea what you're looking for. There are people who do this for you and tell you where to look overseas. I had this done once. Not inexpensive, but it shortcuts the work and is reliable.

"We would like to bring back some unusual mementoes of England, too."

BRASS RUBBING is becoming very popular with tourists to England. These are flat brass tomb markers in English churches — usually a knight in armor three to four feet long. You put architect's paper over it and rub it with a black wax crayon. (You get an impression just like the ones you made as a child by putting paper over a penny and rubbing it with a pencil.) Spray it with fixative. Take it home and frame it.

The how-to-do-it book is Macklin's "Monumental Brasses"—Foyle's enormous book store in London or the bookshop at the London Times. You can rub at Westminster Abbey—you have to reserve and pay for a length of time.

Have you been to DESERT HOT SPRINGS RECENTLY?

WHY SO MANY VOLKSWAGENS LIVE TO BE 100,000

The Volkswagen isn't the kind of a car you trade in after a year or two.
It's designed and built for keeps.
The pistons in a VW travel a shorter distance per mile than almost any other car in the world. That means less wear. Engine friction and stress are so low that cruising speed is the same as top speed! Continuity in making the same basic model year after year has led to Volkswagen's quality of assembly—the kind that a $5,000 car would be proud of; to say nothing of a car that sells for $1663.
Just to give you an idea: A Volkswagen is so airtight, it's a good practice to open the window before you slam the door. Even after you've had it for several years.
So. If you own a '61 or '62 VW that you've taken good care of, why would you want to trade it in for a '66 — which looks just like it? You wouldn't. You'd keep it, and have the pleasure of seeing 99,999 on your VW's odometer turn to 00,000.

AT CAPISTRANO'S NEW WAX MUSEUM

Rubbing elbows with history

By Fred Taylor Kraft
Travel Editor

You may now brush elbows with men and women whose names are emblazoned on the pages of history.

Well, you almost can.

There, before you, stands George Washington, the "Father of His Country," and beside him is John Adams, our second President, and Thomas Jefferson who, more than any other man, molded America's mind and spirit. Seated in front of them is Benjamin Franklin, inventor and statesman extraordinary.

They seem to be immersed in deep thought. Somehow, you expect one of them to turn and speak.

Then your mind brings you back through time to the present: the figures, though startling, real, are not. You are visiting the new Mission Wax Museum in Orange County's historic San Juan Capistrano.

* * * *

LOCATED directly across the street from the old mission, in this last of the old Spanish pueblo towns in Southern California, the $1 million museum was opened in January by George Druckert, Newport yachtsman, after three years of painstaking research.

"This is no ordinary wax museum," manager Donald Lane declares. "No horror chamber is seen here, as has been traditional with wax museums of the past. Neither do you see contemporary entertainment personalities as in other wax museums."

You look about you. The 31 scenes assembled, well worth driving many miles to see, are mostly significant to the area and to the mission itself.

Lane explains: "Early in its development, it was decided that this wax museum should offer the visitor the same feeling of history and pageantry he seeks when he visits the old mission, to capitalize on the 'built-in' theme already prevalent in the local area, a virtual gold mine of history."

* * * *

AND SO BEGAN the task of assembling the scenes.

The London firm of Josephine Tussaud, great-great-granddaughter of Madam Tussaud, was commissioned to produce the figures needed. K. L. Gems, grandson of the originator of the secret method of wax sculpture, and the firm's craftsmen, went to work.

Human hair from Italy, optical glass eyes used in medical work in Germany, and care in creating life-size likenesses have resulted in this most spectacular return to historic moments, to be viewed by most of the 750,000 visitors who make the trip to San Juan Capistrano mission each year.

* * * *

FATHER Junipero Serra, founder of the mission in 1776, is seen first as you approach the entrance to the museum, dominating an attractive window display.

Inside, you pass displays of early New World conquest. "The God From the East" is the first scene. Resplendent of the era of the Spanish Conquistadores, it shows Cortez and Dona Marina in the Court of Montezuma.

Next is the finely chiseled figure of King Philip II, Spain's ruling monarch during the conquest of the New World. Following are scenes of the early mission Fathers followed by the "Doomed Emperor" scene featuring the tragic figures of Maximilian and Carlotta. Other historic personalities include Pancho Villa and Zapata, Kit Carson and John C. Fremont.

* * * *

A WIDE RANGE of United States and world history also is displayed. There are Grant and Lee, Napoleon Bonaparte, Caesar and Cleopatra, Churchill and Roosevelt, Lincoln, Charles de Gaulle and Pope Paul VI, Prince Rainier and Princess Grace, all so lifelike that visitors whisper when they stand before them in the darkened corridors.

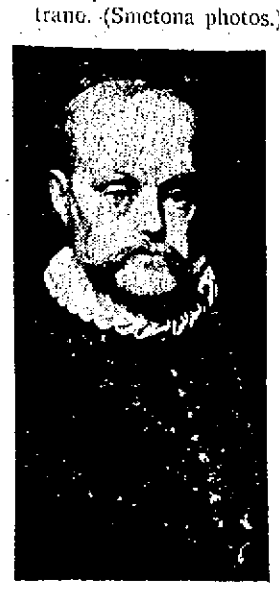

The museum is open seven days a week, from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Lane pointed out that the management recently instituted a package tour — "Capistrano Adventure"—to group of 10 or more. It includes a tour of the Mission and the Wax Museum, a visit to the large El Toro Fine Arts Gallery, a meal at the Mexico Lindo Restaurant, a free gift from the El Patio Gift Shop, and a lithograph of the mission, all for $2.89; or, without the meal, $1.40 per person.

At the end of your tour, you may sigh and say to yourself: "If they could only speak!"

LIFE-SIZE AND STARTLINGLY LIFELIKE, the figures of George Washington, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin (seated) occupy an important niche in the new Mission Wax Museum at San Juan Capistrano. (Smetona photos.)

KING PHILLIP II, Spain's ruling monarch during conquest of New World, as he appears in wax.

3-hour guided cruise best way to see New York

TRAVEL and RESORTS

One of the best ways to see the famous New York skyline, its great bridges and other sights known round the world is to take a three-hour guided sightseeing cruise around Manhattan Island.

More than a million persons, residents and visitors alike, take the 35-mile trip every year and get a new perspective on the nation's largest city which reveals facets that cannot be seen from land or even from the air.

The breeze-cooled cruises leave at frequent intervals from the Circle Line's new pier, No. 83, at W. 43rd St. and the Hudson River, and sail counter - clockwise around the island — down the Hudson to the Upper New York Bay, round the Battery, up the East River, through the Harlem and back into the Hudson.

* * * *

TRAINED guides point out the sights over a sound system as the boats get underway, with New Jersey on the right and Manhattan on the left. The announcer calls attention to the place, high on the Palisades in Jersey, where Alexander Hamilton fought his fatal duel with Aaron Burr. Then he points out the Empire State Building, the world's tallest building, which dominates the midtown area.

As the cruise progresses, it is more than likely it will pass one of the great ocean liners like the Queen Elizabeth or the United States as she enters or leaves the port. Soon the Wall Street financial district comes into view with its jagged skyline soaring into the blue—the same sight that first greets tourists arriving from Europe.

The cruise boat continues down the bay, past the Battery on the tip of Manhattan, for a close view of the Statue of Liberty, with ample time for camera fans to get their shots of the monument which is 80 years old this year.

* * * *

IN THE DISTANCE is the Verrazano Narrows Bridge, which connects populous Brooklyn with Staten Island, and which is the longest suspension bridge in the world.

Hilton in Guam

Execution of a contract for a Hilton International hotel in Guam, lovely Pacific island over which the U. S. flag flies, was announced by Conrad N. Hilton, president and chairman of the Hilton International Co. which will operate the hotel, and by Kenneth T. Jones, Jr., president of Hotels of the Marianas, Inc., which will build and own it.

The Guam Hilton will be built on a 10-acre site on the beach in Agana, the capital, and will have 200 rooms.

Airline cuts Catalina fare

Catalina Air Lines has announced a new air fare for overnight visitors to Catalina Island who fly aboard the big four-engine Sikorsky Flying Boat leaving from Long Beach Harbor.

The new air fare applies on flights leaving Long Beach Harbor after 2:30 p.m. on any day except Friday and returning from Avalon before noon on any day except Monday.

Dick Probert, president of the airline, said the new rate of $7.90 round trip includes the privilege of overnight free parking at the Seaplane Terminal in Long Beach Harbor.

Art fete at Laguna

Laguna Beach's 31st annual Festival of Arts and Pageant of the Masters opened last night in Irvine Bowl and continues through Aug. 14.

The Pageant, known all over the world, overshadows other Southland events and is being held nightly this week. Townsfolk are authentically costumed and made up by artists and posed inside huge gilt frames to recreate the works of some 30 master painters and sculptors.

Two hundred artists, sculptors, ceramists and handicrafters are displaying their works in the Festival of Arts on the six-acre grounds.

* * * *

BEGINNING Thursday, musical comedies will be presented under the stars in the San Diego Starlight Musical Theater in Balboa Park Bowl, the area's All-Year Club advises. The presentations continue through Sept. 11.

Santa Paula holds its Lemon Festival Friday and Saturday with parades, barbecue, street dancing, style show and the crowning of "Miss Santa Paula."

The first Christian baptism in California will be celebrated at the San Clemente Fiesta la Christianila, Friday through Sunday. There will be a parade of bands, floats and riders at 10:30 a.m. Friday and Saturday.

* * * *

FOR THE 11th year the town of Pearblossom in Antelope Valley will hold its Sunshine Festival, Friday through Sunday. A contest will be held for Suntan Queen (the pretty girl with the best tan), and there will be square dancing and round dancing.

Vista holds its Festival of Cultural Arts on Saturday and Sunday. There will be an art show, stage play, name personalities and square dancing in the recreation center.

Christendom's holiest shrine being restored

The Church of the Holy Sepulchre in Old Jerusalem, Jordan, holiest shrine in Christendom for the world's one billion Christians, is now undergoing a complete renovation which will cost more than $2 million and take several years to complete.

Beneath the rotunda of the church's great dome lies the traditional Tomb of Christ, and the church also shelters the site of Calvary and the last five Stations of the Cross. As it stands today, the Church of the Holy Sepulchre dates to the 12th century, the Crusader period in Old Jerusalem. But down the centuries war, fire, earthquake and inadequate repairs have caused general deterioration of the church, a huge complex of rambling passageways, chapels, cloisters, crypts and candlelit shrines.

Stone block by block, frieze by frieze, workmen are now restoring the present structure, which has for years been supported by a maze of steel braces, to its former architectural beauty. A Tripartite Commission, consisting of members appointed by Armenian Orthodox, Greek Orthodox, Roman Catholic sects, who share rights in the church, are supervising the work.

PHIL SPECTOR, TEEN TYCOON

From 'Da Doo Ron Ron' to Art Movies

By PETER BART
Copyright 1966, New York Times News Service

HOLLYWOOD—The news item, at first glance, seemed utterly implausible. "Phil Spector," it said, "is making an art movie." Phil Spector? An art movie? We reached for the phone.

The voice on the other end of the line belonged to Danny Davis, Spector's promotion man. "Listen, baby, not only is Philly working on a picture but he says it will win the Cannes Film Festival. And you know Philly, I mean, he's a groovy kind of genius. If he says it will win, baby, it will win."

"But Phil Spector? You're putting me on."

"Like, you want to go see him and ask him yourself? You should ask Philly in person, is he going to win the Cannes Festival or not."

* * * *

PHIL SPECTOR, the first "teen tycoon" of the rock 'n' roll era, is a sort of American Beatle who has pulled down $5 million or so turning out such epics as "Da Doo Ron Ron" and "Oh Yeah, Maybe Baby."

Later, outside Spector's Hollywood-Edwardian mansion, once the manor house of one of Los Angele's most imposing estates, Davis said:

"Philly has produced 26 records in the last four years and 18 of those sold a million or more. There's never been anyone like him. A groovy kind of genius."

Spector's long black limousine stood in the spacious driveway, a "Send Batman to Viet Nam" sticker on its bumper. Two lissome teen-age girls were frolicking in the swimming pool. "Teenyhoppers," Davis explained softly. "They wander in here somehow."

* * * *

SPECTOR, lean, pale and looking older than his 25 years, greeted his visitors in his baronial, elegantly paneled living room. Handsome oil paintings of British landscapes adorned the walls.

Spector was attired in a blue velour sports shirt with a large wraparound collar and skin tight brown slacks. His neatly coiffed hair was shoulder length, his sideburns plummeted below his jawbone.

Would a man who could make millions of dollars driving out "Da Doo Ron Ron" and "Oh Yeah, Maybe Baby" really want to turn his back on all that and switch to, like, art movies?

"Art is a game," Spector explained in a soft, reedy voice. "If you win that game too regularly it tends to lessen your motivation. That's why I've lost interest in the record business. If I stayed at it I would just be playing for public approval, not for what suits me.

"The sad thing is that most great artists start playing to the public rather than for their own satisfaction. That's why I must move on." There was a reverent silence. Spector stared into space and Davis stared at the floor.

"My first movie will be called 'The Last Movie.' It will be an art movie. I am an admirer of Truffaut, Stanley Kubrick, Fellini. It'll be in that tradition. Hollywood needs that kind of movie."

* * * *

THE FILM, he explained, will be a contemporary western on the theme of guilt and will be set in a Latin-American town. It will go before the cameras in Mexico Sept. 15. Stewart Stern has written the script and the director will be Dennis Hopper, a young actor who Spector believes can be an American Truffaut.

Spector says he has been talking to Jason Robards, Jane Fonda, Jennifer Jones, Joseph Cotten and Roddy McDowell, among others. And if the studios don't finance it? "In that case, I will," he said.

The butler padded softly into the living room bringing some apple pie and root beer. "You might check out the teeny boppers and see if they want anything," Spector told him.

Dean's Secret Vice

By EARL WILSON

NEW YORK—Comedian Dom DeLuise, who's taken over as one of Dean Martin's summer replacements, took me into his confidence and revealed to me the true nature of Dean's secret vice.

"I thought I was going to see a totally bombed guy," Dom said.

"Instead, Dom is in his room eating peanut butter. That's correct, peanut butter sandwiches. His room is full of cold cuts till it looks like an Italian wedding. And Dean is eating peanut butter, all day long he's eating peanut butter."

Dom, a Brooklyn boy who looks a little like Jonathan Winters, has made Dean his particular private hero. He most admired Dean's refusal to be restricted to the usual ways of taping TV. Dean does one dress rehearsal and then one take of the scene —and that's it.

"Dean, can you do it over?" a director may ask Dino.

"I just did it, Pal, didn't you see it?" he answers. If the director looks sad, Dean says:

"Once, Pal, once. I only do it once."

* * * *

"I HEARD DEAN say such a wonderful thing on the set of one show. There was a mixup and there were no cue cards!" Dom said.

"The director said 'It's not your fault, Dean, and it's not my fault.'

"Dean said, 'It's not your fault, and it's not my fault, and it's not Gregg's fault. It's nobody's fault — like Hitler.'"

Dom is almost equally in awe of Doris Day with whom he appears in the movie, "The Glass Bottom Boat."

"She invited me into her dressing room and her first words to me were 'Do you like brownies?'

"I took one and chopped it up and sent it to my relatives as relics," Dom said. "She calmed my worries by telling me that Alfred Hitchcock once said to her, 'What's so important about it? It's only a picture.'

* * * *

"DORIS," Dom said, "is concerned about her image. There was a line in a script, where she was supposed to say 'Shut up.'

"She said 'I don't think that will sound right,' and it was changed. She goes toward flowers and prettiness and it works for her. She gets up early and walks four miles to keep her legs supple. At her summer place there were no maids. She did the serving.

Dom from Brooklyn has found Hollywood quite a wonderful world.

"I feel under an obligation," he said, "to mention on behalf of my wife, Carol Arthur, and I, that we're pregnant. My wife played Bea Lillie's maid in 'High Spirits' and now has a role in 'The Boys From Syracuse.' Fortunately, it's a fat part."

THE WEEKEND WINDUP . . Sandy Dennis got into her apt. house elevator wearing a long gown, and an old woman said, "Oh, darling — are you graduating tonight?" . . . Samantha Eggar's role in "Dr. Dolittle," with Rex Harrison, was offered first to Barbra Streisand . . . There'd be some real killing on the act of the "Vampire Killers" if one of the studio execs sees another: Budget trouble, etc . . . Stars working in a certain L.A. TV studio sometimes use a VIP washroom that has pornographic drawings hidden in the decor.

Ginger Rogers, now in "Hello, Dolly," says she likes to see her old films on TV: "It's so nice to watch yourself growing young gracefully" . . . The first act booked into the Living Room by Sammy Davis is singer Ronnie Dove . . . Kathryn Crosby'll end her summer stock tour in August to accompany Bing to Dublin (where he'll make "Rocket to the Moon") . . . Stripper Lill St. Cyr'll be back on B'way Aug. 8, getting $3,500 a week at the Hudson Burlesque . . . Singer Jill Sinclair gets to her jobs at swank clubs via motorcyle.

THE N.Y. METS, who need everything else, now have a singalong book, compiled by Shea organist Jane Jarvis . . . Lesile Uggams'll make her first summer stock appearance Tuesday in "The Boy Friend." . . . Copa Comic Hank Bradford celebrated his Copa appearance with a fancy gift to himself — a 1916 Stutz Bearcat auto . . . The 30-minute love scene in "Mademoiselle" (between Jeanne Moreau and Ettore Manni) took 10 weeks to shoot.

Dick Shawn, who masquerades as a Spanish senorita in "What Did You Do in the War, Daddy?", will keep the comedy bit in his cafe act . . Natalie Wood's "Penelope" film will be in color—except for her bank robberies, which'll be in black and white . . . When "Beau Geste" plays in Santiago, Chile, top billing will go to the bellydancer in the film, Ava Zamora—'cause that's her home town.

WHY NUDE?

"It's perfectly natural for a girl to answer the telephone in the nude if that's the way she is when it rings," said Susannah York in explaining why she agreed to play the nude scene in Warner Bros. "Kaleidoscope." Increasingly popular since her appearance in "Tom Jones," Susannah was recently named by Life Magazine as one of Europe's young stars-to-be.

'How to Succeed' to Bring Nelson, Vallee to Anaheim

The ancient saying that "too many cooks spoil the broth," doesn't apply to "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying."

This is the musical hit, starring Rick Nelson and Rudy Valee which follows the current attraction, "Little Me," at Melodyland Theatre, opening July 19.

Seven talented people of varied backgrounds got together to produce "How To Succeed" . . . ". It started with author Shepard Mead, who wrote a popular book spoofing the stuffed shirts of big business. Then Jack Weinstock, a new graduate from the Bellevue Hospital Medical School and Willie Gilbert, fresh out of Ohio State University, got together and adapted the book for the stage.

Rudy Vallee was in the original production, as was Robert Morse, who is now a star. In the Melodyland version, Rick Nelson of the well-known Ozzie and Harriet Nelson family does the Morse role.

'Treasure Island' Glitters in Anaheim

By BILL DUNCAN

Damon Douglas, the tow-headed member of the "Treasure Island" cast at Melodyland Theater in Anaheim, proved his mettle as an actor Saturday when he portrayed a believable role of "Jim Hawkins" in the stage production of Robert Louis Stevenson's classic.

It was the opening of a two-month run of children's productions at the theater in the round. If the first production is any indication, the season should be a sellout.

Young Douglas, a member of the Melodyland Theater training school, bounced on and off stage like a professional. He carried off his lines like a trouper and proved the star of the show—especially in the eyes of the junior audience.

Jack Ritschel, portraying "Long John Silver," was excellent. The best casting was for "Dr. Livesy," played by Cosmo B. Inserra — he not only acted well but looked exactly like the character Stevenson wrote about.

The staging was superior, but for this type of show middle or rear seating is best if the illusion of an island adventure is to be sustained.

Costuming, lighting and sound gave realism to the production.

"Treasure Island" will run again on July 15 and 16. Next Melodyland children's presentation's are "Alice In Wonderland" July 22, 23, and July 29, 30; "Tom Sawyer," Aug. 5-6; Aug. 12-13 and "Junior Hi Jinks," Aug. 19-20 and Aug. 26-27.

FAMILY FUN

Hansel and Gretel Parody in Town

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Staff Writer

One of the theatrical phenomena of our time is the college-dormitory-produced musical which may eventually hit big-time show biz. Witness "The Fantasticks" out of the University of Texas.

Another eccentricity of the day is the growing number of shows titled "How to Succeed at Something Without Half Trying."

A combination of these — substitute Stanford for TU, "Witchery" for "Something" — opened an indefinite run Friday night as the first production in Community Playhouse's new upstairs Studio Theatre.

And while triple threat man King Hall's show may not crack the big league it is good family fun and not particularly mentally wearying on a hot summer's night.

Hall wrote, produce and directed this modern parody of the old Hansel and Gretel fairy story — then stars in what might be called the title role.

His "Mrs. Witch" is a victim of circumstances. With a name like that she must bake little children into gingerbread —or does she? The question remains unsolved.

* * * *

A TWIST on the old story has Hansel and Gretel eating nothing but cookies and cake provided by their father, the village baker. It is a craving for spinach and broccoli that sends Saundra Mathews and Mike Sterling off to the witch's wooded home and its surrounding vegetable garden.

A second variant on the old German folk legend is a "love interest" Hall introduces. Both a music and a dance teacher — Mary Frances Boddy and June Sulow — are trying to hook the youngsters' father, Paul de Lucca.

As the kids progress into the forest they meet such characters as a Sandman who can't put anyone to sleep, a talking moon, a rat and lizard who offer good advise and, finally, Mrs. Witch's stove.

Ric Larson as the Sandman turns in a fine performance, and his production number, "Wrong Approach," was one of the show stoppers. He also handled choreography for a show marked with high quality precision dancing.

Following the show Mrs. Elias Day, veteran Long Beach drama-music teacher, was honored by Community Playhouse's board of directors.

She was given a gold plaque commemorating her "many years" of guidance to local hopefuls — including actress Laraine Day, who was present.

What Your Name Means

Send your name to La Reina Rule in care of Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90801, for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

MISS RULE: May we have the source of BINGAMAN—L.B., Bellflower.

BINGAMAN of Germany began as "Binge-mann." Deciphered from 14th century German, this surname referred to the ancestor as a "dweller in a hollow shaped like a cauldron." No shield is available for this family.

MISS RULE: Kindly inform us on MARSHALL—M.S., W.M., Long Beach.

MARSHALL, from the French title Marescal, was brought to England in the 1100s. A "Marescal" was the king's overlord of horses and horsemen. Ancestors include John Mareschall of Yorkshire, 1379, as well as a Lord Mayor of London in 1755. Deacon Thomas Marshall of England arrived at Boston, Mass., in 1633, and was a primary American forefather.

MISS RULE: Kindly give data on KERRIGAN—J.K., Anaheim.

KERRIGAN of Ireland developed from the archaic Gaelic clan name O'Clarahain of County Mayo. This lengthy cognomen deciphers as "Sons of the young, black-haired one." The Kerrigan shield is silver, crossed by a red chevron placed between three black ravens.

MISS RULE: Please explain JONKER, de JONGHE and JUNGMAN. — A.Y., Long Beach; M.W., Norwalk; W.Y., Bellflower.

JONKER, de JONGHE and JUNGMAN (spelled Youngman in America) all trace to North Germany and nearby Holland. These names decipher simply as "Descendants of the young man."

MISS RULE: Kindly give genealogy on RIOS.—R.N., Garden Grove.

RIOS had its inception in early Spain. This surname represents an ancestral estate that lay between two "rios" or "rivers." The Rios armorial shield is gold, emblazoned with two blue stripes, representing rivers, surrounded by a gold border.

MISS RULE: Please explain MANKO.—L.M., Long Beach.

MANKO is a Central European Slavic surname. The ancient Teutonic-Slavic source word "Magan" meant "young warrior."

MISS RULE: Please explain CRAIG.—G.C., Long Beach; M.C., La Puente.

CRAIG, from the Gaelic "Carraig," is an Irish and Scotch locality-origin surname meaning "Rock." Craig was used in reference to a family living near a high, rocky cliff used as a neighborhood landmark. The Scotch Craig shield is covered with ermine, emblazoned with three silver crescent moons on a black band across the center. The Irish Craig shield is red, with three three-arched bridges centered on it. James Craig, among early Scotch south Pennsylvania settlers, owned land there in 1741.

MISS RULE: Please give genealogy data on McGLAWN.—C.M., Lakewood.

McGLAWN began as MacGiolla-Foin in north Irish Donegal and Tyrone. This clan held extensive baronies. The Gaelic significance of this clan name was "Sons of the adherent of St. John."

LIFE WITH A SPORTS CAR

After a While You Hardly Notice the Cramped Torment

By Art Vinsel

THERE'S THIS "Big 3" dealer I dislike, see, which is how I came to buy an Austin-Healey Sprite... out of spite.

The little independent used car lot my bug was on also happened to be smack in the middle of this guy's sprawling agency, which was a continuous humiliation to him and therefore another reason why I wanted to buy the little car. Bad enough to lose business to your competition, but when you surround him on three sides with your flapping flags, banners and other eye-catching hoopla, it hurts more than ever.

So I dropped in on Fairly Honest John, with his 20-by-30 yard lot and his eight cars and set in motion those merciless wheels by which auto dealers and loan companies profit.

It was just like getting married. After the last smile and handshake the trouble starts. Without benefit of rice. But it's even worse with a car, because you don't get any action by kicking it in the rear fender like you do with a woman. It just sits there, 800 pounds of passive demonstration.

THE RISKS are many when buying any used car, but purchasing a used sports car is tantamount to perusing the patient roll at a mental hospital and signing release and custody papers on one at random.

You just never know what you're going to get.

I took custody of my own little four-wheeled cross-to-bear and drove it home on noon hour the following day. After a light lunch—all six cans and a handful of peanuts—I headed back to the office. And I got as far as the driveway, 20 feet from my door.

When I twisted that bright, shiny key in its snug ignition switch, then pulled the starter handle, nothing happened. Chuckling murderously, I rang up old Fairly Honest John.

REDUCED TO terms which will allow this magazine to be mailed to subscribers, the conversation boiled down to: "How do I start this beast now, fella?"

Cooing sympathetically around his cold cigar, old F. H. suggested that I rattle one of two wires attached to the left battery terminal. This, after he explained what a battery terminal looks like, I was able to do.

Kkkhhaatttaattattoouumm . . plumph, plumph, plumph, plumph, plumph.

Hallelujah.

And then I was shrieking back to the office in a manner that would have warmed the cockles of Graham Hill's heart, a satisfied customer once again. Until tomorrow.

THE FOLLOWING day dawned gray and drizzly. I know because I was awakened by the misty rain as it blew in through my broken bedroom window. A sparrow had flown into it the previous spring and ruptured the oiled paper pane, which was in vogue when the apartment was built.

My 1961 Sprite squatted disconsolately outside, ever so faintly resembling a brown frog with a Pepsodent smile. After a brief skirmish with the old adobe's plumbing system and two cups of brackish brew I accepted as coffee, I was ready to get to work.

The car wasn't.

Its stout little battery dampened by the rain, it sounded at each yank of the starter wire like a fat old man entering his 36th consecutive hour of seasickness.

The boys from the garage were nice about it and didn't annoy me with shop talk. It isn't often that you get offered a $42 generator job at 7 a.m. And besides, you never can tell about a man who greets you at the door at that hour of the day, desperately clutching a brandy bottle in one hand and a trembling fistful of automobile contracts in the other.

BUT, LIKE so many other days in the preceding 25 years, I survived and lived on to face and surmount new calamities. Would you believe how soon, though?

The rain in Spain falls mainly on the plain, but in Orange County, it just plain falls on your head when you have an ancient convertible top like my car did. It would have done credit to any Spanish lace maker, but it lacked character in a sudden downpour. The underside of a Sprite, by the way, also presents a few problems with standing water.

Pity us when we come toddling down the pike in one Orange County city and plow into an intersection flooded one foot deep. (Three John Birch Society members eavesdropping on a Boy Scout meeting were swept down a storm drain and clogged it.) The car's drenched engine gave a phlegmatic cough, a feeble chug, and we wallowed to a halt.

"I'll push," said my hardy companion, who then leaped — without regard for his own personal safety — behind his passenger seat and started shoving against the dashboard. After a brief explanation of Newtonian physics, spiced with colorful adjectives, I convinced him that he would have to get outside the car proper—and get wet—if he expected to move it.

BUT EVEN then he was dubious about theories and wanted something more tangible to explain why he couldn't push a car while sitting in it. I think it was the tire iron under the front seat that finally got the message across.

At that point, along came three yahoos in a red domestic sedan, one of those automotive harlots with her front end hiked up in the air and bawdy chrome wheels. Spotting us splashing around knee-deep, he decided to pull over.

And pull over he did. With a flick of his slender wrist and with a sophomore drama class sneer playing across his chapped lips, he veered close enough to drench us with a wall of muddy water.

(Dub in your own screams of rage and discomfort here.)

Now I have some idea of what it's like to be in a submarine when a depth charge blows a hole in the side right next to you.

Again, good taste forces the author to let the reader fabricate his own version of the ensuing remarks, hurled at the taillights of the youngsters' car.

NOW, the rainy season is

The Little Cars That Lit a Fire

By Paul Wallace

Always in car-show condition, gleaming and bright, is this refurbished MG, a revered vehicle among those who drive for sport. Frank Mason proves the sports car is for the young at heart.

IN 1950, THE promise of a bright new world, that had buoyed a generation of young men through World War II, was just making itself evident. The several-year lapse since the war's end had been needed to transform a wartime production into one supplying, in ample quantity, new refrigerators, houses and automobiles.

In 1950, it had not been many months since the discouraging postwar waiting lists for new cars finally had ended—not many months since Detroit's Big Three finally had brought out completely fresh models for the first time in a decade.

In 1950, hardware of all sorts at last had entered a buyers' market, inspiring the first real competition in marketing new products to entice dollars from customers with increasingly sophisticated tastes.

AT ABOUT THIS time, two events occurred which were to have an influence on the tastes of Americans—and, indeed, on the U. S. economy itself—far out of proportion to their apparent significance at the time: the tentative importation into the U. S. of a few MG-TC sports cars, and the introduction in England of the Jaguar XK-120.

Soon driving would become not only utilitarian but a sport.

The first postwar MGs arrived on these shores with little fanfare and the first hint to most Americans that such cars existed came when they suddenly found themselves staring at one of the high-wheeled little two-seaters with the chopped tops and tails at a traffic light or in a parking lot.

True to the boy-meets-girl format of The Saturday Evening Post of that era, the confrontation seldom was love at first sight. The square little long-hooded roadsters inspired a variety of emotions among their viewers. But, like a Post story, these emotions almost never included indifference. If nothing else, people found them hard to forget.

CONTRARY TO THE MG's arrival, the new Jaguar was given wide publicity in the U. S. The XK-120 was so low, so fast, so spectacularly streamlined for the time that it captured a spark of yearning in all car fanciers who read about it. And, in the reading, many Americans learned something about sports cars for the first time. However, the dazzling Jag, at more than $4,000 a copy, was a rich man's toy in the economy of a decade and a half ago.

But it lit the fire. Then Mr. Average Car Nut would run across another MG. Now, he had some idea what he was looking at. And the more he stared, the more captivated he was by it. He suddenly began seeing it as a virile, rakish, masculine machine that evoked thoughts of weekends at English country places, 'round-the-houses road races on the French Riviera, and laughing, long-haired blonde girls who said "dahling."

It was too much. First one young man, then another sought out the rare dealer who sold the little sports cars. The buyers multiplied, slowly gaining momentum until the headlong rush in the late '50s for anything with two bucket seats and a cloth top. The sports car fad petered out, leaving a steady clientele of enthusiasts and a mark on the nation's views of automobiles that changed the industry.

IN LONG BEACH, according to Walt Masters, long-time MG buff, a man named Ross Sherwood was the first owner of a TC. Then Jim Easton bought one and others followed.

The growing, esoteric little group naturally banded together—to talk of downshifting, cornering, nerfing bars and ritual mysteries of synchronizing twin SU carburetors. It was only logical that the group organize some structure to supervise such sports car fun and games as rallyes, time trials and road races.

So, in 1950, 16 local residents, all TC owners, gathered to form the Long Beach MG Club. The charter roster included Caz Bartlett, Sam Caldwell, Clarence Covert, Dan Dickinson, Jim Easton, C. D. (Pete) Evans Jr., Tom Frisby, Dale Halliday, Bob Lockness, Clarence Mulvey, Al Moss, Vic Trodd, Ross Sherwood, Ferrel Webb, Paul Winters and John McFarland. Dickinson, who still lives in the Long Beach area and maintains an active interest in the club, was named the first president.

Later in 1950, the group was chartered as a centre (chapter) of the international MG Car Club. As such, it has grown into one of the largest and most active sports car clubs in the country. Present membership, under the gavel of President Constantin "Dallas" Dallas, numbers in the vicinity of 375.

IN ITS EARLY years, the Long Beach MG Club sponsored some full-fledged sports car road races in Southern California, including one in 1953—a financial disaster—on the unused runways of the Navy's Reeves Field, a World War II fighter strip on Terminal Island.

The main event, as I recall, was won by that senior hot-rodder and current proprietor of a local racing shop, Bill Stroppe, driving a Kurtis-Kraft roadster powered by a very hot flat-head Mercury V-8. Ken Miles was second in a home-built MG special—to the delight of club members—and Max Briney took third in a powerful Lincoln-engined Allard.

Early in its race-producing days, the club organized a flag team, the men who stand at corners in a race course to signal drivers of danger—a crash or oil or gravel on the track—out of sight ahead.

The club also set up a scoring team—people who record the laps of each car and officially keep tabs on the progress of a race—a difficult chore in a long race when the cars become spread out laps apart.

AS SPORTS CAR racing in Southern California got to be a big and very expensive business, the MG Club got out of race promoting. The expertly-trained flag and scoring teams, however, still handle these duties at virtually all Southland road races including such high-octane professional affairs as the Riverside Grand Prix each autumn.

But the club still exists primarily for the same reason it was formed—to organize participant activities for sports car enthusiasts.

It sponsors numerous rallyes each year—competitive, non-racing events in which the object is to travel a prescribed route at a specified average rate of speed.

It stages time trials and slaloms, one-car-at-a-time racing events against the clock over short road courses.

It holds an annual outing for foreign exchange students studying in the Long Beach area under American Field Service scholarships.

And it sponsors a car show for a blooded automotive stock—concours d'elegance—each year at Santa Ana's Fashion Square that probably is the most elegant and selective such event in Southern California. The concours was the promotion of three-time club president Fred Sander but the fulfilled ambition of one of the club's oldest and most enthusiastic members, Frank Mason, who maintains one of the handsomest of the now-classic TCs in these parts.

Club members no longer drive MGs exclusively. Many other makes are represented among the group's roster and some, in fact, own no sports car at all.

An enthusiasm for responsive automobiles, for cars that are a joy to drive, is all that is required.

It is the same feeling that united, in 1950, 16 young men who were enchanted by a wire-wheeled, hard-riding, hard-steering, sensitive, thoroughbred of a car, the Morris Garage's TC model.

In one-two-three formation finish Ford GT cars prepared by Carroll Shelby Company cross finish line at gruelling Le Mans 24-hour endurance race; victory capped unprecedented rise of Shelby from bankruptcy to multimillion-dollar business in 3-year span.

By Jerome Hall

Editor, Southland Magazine

It's a Well-Worn Phrase, but There May Be No Other Way to Describe Mr. Shelby . . .

The New King of Cars

THE BLAAT OF EXHAUST pipes, the whine of wound-up engines, the squeal of slipping tires, the shuddering, shattering screams that warn of impending crash, the howl of the crowd at the finish line . . .

These are the sounds of the sport of auto racing.

For quite a while now the world of Carroll Shelby has been one big, long, loud roar.

He has been surrounded by the roar since he was an Air Corps flier in World War II, since he bought a cement-mixer truck with his mustering-out pay, since he plunged into auto racing at the grand old age of 29, and he is surrounded by it today in his office that overlooks the main runway at Los Angeles International Airport.

This is not even to make mention of the roar of the crowd that is due him, the victory cheer he earned in capturing world road racing championships for the United States, beating Europe's best in Europe's sport on Europe's roadways.

Shelby shows two models that made him world's largest independent producer of sports cars, the GT 350 and (rear) 1965 world champion Cobra.

Shelby, a tall, sun-toughened Texan who has put together one of the more remarkable success stories in American industry as well as sport, has had a loud, boisterous life (there are those who would say it has been, in the language of his sport, a rip-snorter).

In recent months—not years—he has turned a small-time garage business into a multimillion-dollar operation that has made him the world's largest independent producer of sports cars, the first American to break Europe's domination of grand prix-type racing events by winning the World Manufacturers Championship in 1965.

Last month Shelby sent forth a team of vehicles that totally embarrassed the perennial champion Ferrari cars, giving the United States its first triumph in the world's foremost road race. On a rain-doused stretch of mid-France roadway three weeks ago a trio of American cars finished one-two-three in the awful, agonizing, monstrous thing called Le Mans, a 24-hour endurance that is the world's most difficult race. Left far to the rear were the Ferraris and the Maserattis and the Jaguars that for so long had made so laughable Americans' attempts to build GT (grand touring) race cars.

So as Carroll Shelby gazes out his office window today he can relax for the first time since he began bolting sheet metal together in a back-yard garage in Santa Fe Springs hardly more than three years ago, scratching for cash to buy parts for his first attempts at assembling race cars, sleeping in the back seat of his auto because it was a case of choosing between paying the rent or buying a couple of carburetors.

That was 1961, just two years after a heart condition forced Shelby to retire from competition driving, and only months after he had won one of the two most important prizes in auto racing, the Le Mans, while driving an English-built Aston Martin. But with the aid of a small experimental budget from the Ford Motor Co. he combined a Fairlane engine with a British sports car body (an AC) and assembled the first Shelby racing machine.

Within three years he was head of a $12 million business. "I fully expect to gross $100 million next year," he says coolly. Shelby Enterprises mushroomed from a two-man business to an assembly-line operation with an annual payroll of $1,500,000 in that three-year span.

It has been recognized by American industry as one of the outstanding success stories of all time.

As to sport's point of view, it was perhaps an unparalleled rise, for in 1965 the infant Shelby American Co. cracked the domination of the Ferraris, the Mercedes, the Maseratis and the Jaguars to win for the former Texas cement truck driver the International Manufacturers' Championship, the premier prize in sports car racing.

Last month Ford GT cars, prepared by Shelby & Co., swept the first three places at Le Mans in a performance widely acclaimed as unparalleled in motor racing history, the climax of a year-long intense effort by Shelby, who had been handed an ultimatum by the Ford Company to win at Le Mans at all cost.

Now that the victory has been accomplished there are indications that both Ford and Shelby will cut back their racing efforts. (There also are indications that the Le Mans victory was so sweeping that the international ruling body of road racing will change the rules to make both the Ford GT and the Shelby-built Cobra ineligible.)

Henry Ford II, whose engines have powered cars to victory in both the Indianapolis 500 and Le Mans 24-hour endurance—the two major races in the world—has publicly confirmed his intention to shift into low gear and Shelby has said "To continue fielding teams of cars all over the world at huge expense just to do the same thing over and over again would be completely ridiculous." So from now on Shelby will build racing cars, sell them and then make another profit on them by contracting to keep them in peak racing condition.

"I never considered racing as an end in itself," he says, but a means to his ultimate objective, which was to sell for six to seven thousand dollars a car that would compete with the $15,000 Ferraris.

This he has done, for the famed Shelby Cobra, with which he won the world manufacturers championship, is available for almost immediate delivery at $7,495. If you don't feel you are quite capable of negotiating hairpin turns and floorboarding it on the straightaways, Shelby has an answer for that, too. He operates a drivers' school that can turn a novice into a high-speed expert in a dozen lessons. (The race-ready Co-

Life-size re-creation of da Vinci's painting, "The Last Supper," has been enjoyed by every Festival audience since 1935.

LAGUNA BEACH'S 'LAST SUPPER'

The 'Master' at the Pageant

By Bill Duncan

THE HOUSE LIGHTS had dimmed and the audience of the Pageant of Masters in Laguna Beach waited for the stage curtain to rise on the final living picture—Leonardo da Vinci's immortal painting, "The Last Supper."

There was a long pause, then the lights went on again and the orchestra filled the void with an impromptu concert. Backstage there was a flurry of activity. Everyone was in place on the set except the main actor—the man playing the role of Christ. He was late—caught by an unheavenly human device, a traffic jam.

When he arrived and was quickly made up for his part, the show went on.

That was the only time in the 27 years that volunteer actors have staged the living replica of da Vinci's masterpiece that Christ was late for the Last Supper.

Judas was late one year and missed the entire performance. He was substituted with a man sitting in the audience who "had the features of Judas in da Vinci's painting." And again one year the rats backstage ate the bread of the Last Supper, but a carpenter quickly carved new loaves out of a 2x4 board.

THE PAGEANT of Masters, the living art show that has run for 31 years—suspended only during three years of World War II when military orders blacked out the nighttime, outdoor presentation. During that span of years, thousands of living pictures have enthralled audiences, but only one has lasted year after year—da Vinci's painting, "The Last Supper."

Some 800 volunteers will breathe life into the works of the masters for the next five weeks at the Pageant of the Masters, which opened last night in the amphitheater of the Irvine Bowl. Great paintings and famous sculptures are re-created through the medium of live actors, men, women and children, using backdrops of paint, plaster, canvas and wood to simulate in depth the artist's masterpiece.

The pageant has become world famous, equated to the Bavarian Oberammergau Passion Play, for its unique staging, costuming, lighting and makeup to bring the work of the masters—old and new—to life. More than 3½ million persons through the years have come to see the remarkable results of this labor of love, a community volunteer enterprise unlike any other in the world.

EACH YEAR the traditional closing of the pageant is the staging of The Last Supper, the masterpiece that is described as the crowning work of da Vinci's amazing career. It was first produced—not as a closer, but as one of the living pictures in the middle of the show—in 1936 by then director Roy Ropp. The work received such acclaim that the directors of the Festival of Arts, the parent group of the pageant, voted to close the program each year with this moving religious painting.

The original painting was done by da Vinci on the end wall of the refectory of the Monastery of Santa Maria delle Grazie in Milan, Italy. Today it is badly deteriorated and almost lost. Da Vinci, a perpetual tinkerer with new ideas, had mixed egg whites in the plaster and paint which caused the work to flake off. The soldiers of Napoleon, who slashed off part of the painting to cut a door into the refectory which they used as a stable for their horses, also damaged the painting by throwing stones at the heads of the 12 Apostles, but superstitiously would not toss a missile at Christ's head.

IN THE RE-CREATION at Laguna Beach, even the hole that Napoleon's soldiers cut through the wall is depicted.

As years pass, the pageant officials have tried to duplicate the original as closely as humanly possible. Today's presentation is quite different from the one done years ago, which was merely a table with 13 men posed around it.

"We now have captured the feeling. I believe that Leonardo intended for the painting," explains pageant producer Don Williamson. "Leonardo's Last Supper will always remain 'The Last Supper' in art. We work from a copy of the original made shortly after it was painted and before the deterioration began. This, coupled with the historical studies of the painting itself, has allowed us to duplicate the original nearly to perfection."

The studies Williamson refers to go into each production of the pageant in an attempt to catch in minute detail the feeling the artist intended to convey. The men portraying the figures of The Last Supper have attempted to capture da Vinci's particular expression for each of the disciples and Christ, himself, as Christ spoke the shocking words:

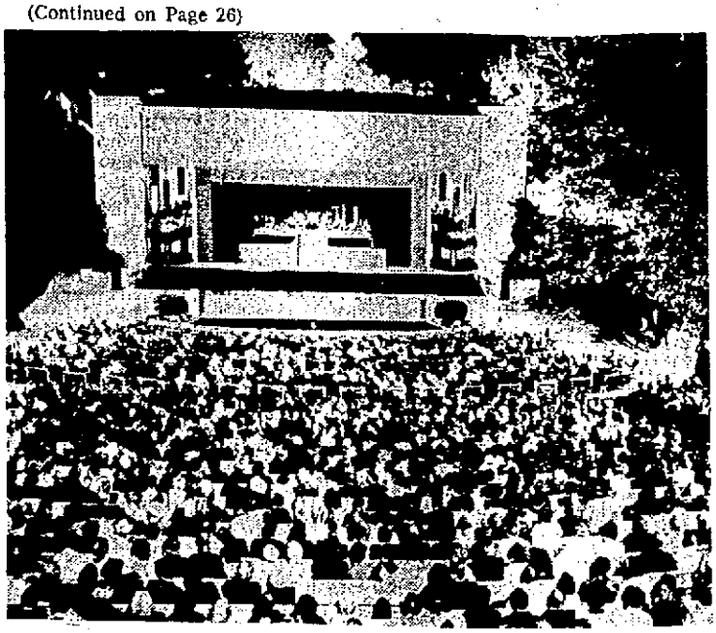

"One of you shall betray Me!"

Beginning at the left, as one looks at the painting, Bartholomew has risen in consternation; James reaches his arm over to Peter; Andrew throws up his hands in utter incredulity; Peter leans over to the beloved John, while in front of him.

Try a Shadow 'Jewel Box'

Mrs. Henry L. Carr points to velvet-lined shadow box she arranged to show "treasures."

By Helen L. Gillum

DO YOU wish often for a suitable way to display those treasured pieces of jewelry handed down to you from long ago? If so, why not try this delightful old standby, the shadow box? Mrs. Henry L. Carr of Long Beach, uses this method very effectively.

In a 12x14-inch shadow box frame, on a background of red velvet, she artistically has arranged a nice assortment of antique jewelry that once adorned her paternal grandmother. In a lower corner of the shadow box is a recently-restored small photograph of Mrs. Carr's grandmother taken soon after the young lady's marriage in 1880.

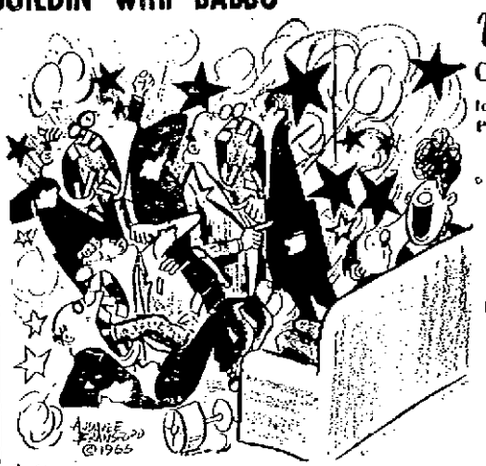

The box frame, made from beautifully polished old wood, is 3-inches deep, setting off to good advantage the charming contents. The composite exhibit makes a decorative wall piece, a fine conversation piece and best of all, a pleasing memorial to her grandmother.

AN IMPRESSIVE item is a "necklace" across the top of the shadow box, consisting of a uniquely designed chain and locket. The locket features a raised gold motif of a small crescent, triangle and cross, and a little diamond, ruby and pearl. (Mrs. Carr's father's baby teeth are also imprinted on the back of the locket—but these could hardly be considered part of the decoration!) The young wife in the picture is wearing this same necklace, a wedding gift from her husband. The inner compartments of the locket contain pictures of the married couple.

An interesting bracelet is made of six small porcelain-like discs, each brightly decorated with flowers in bright mosaic colors. There are two heavy gold bracelets of the old-fashioned type so popular in late Victorian times and in the early 1900s. A round gold locket and small gold heart-shaped locket with mother-of-pearl in the center are appealing.

Pins include a silver crescent-shaped one with small pearls, and a diminutive china doll, only 1½ inches high, with movable legs.

THE FISH THAT HAS A HOOK FOR PEOPLE

There's No Sunshine in This Ray

By George Serviss

THERE'S A QUIET but nasty little character lurking along the Southern California beaches—retiring by nature, easily frightened and not looking for trouble.

But don't step on him!

He carries a weapon that will make an unwary bather sorry if he does.

He and his ilk are the sting rays, more commonly called stingarees, bearing barbs or stings on their tails and secreting a powerful poison—not fatal but mighty painful.

Long Beach Life Guard records show 161 cases of sting ray injury last year. Up and down the coast from Santa Monica to San Diego, figures reported and unreported would show several hundred more. Perhaps not a startling percentage in relation to the thousands who use the beaches annually—but very important to the ones who are stung.

STING rays like the warmer water, hence are most frequently found along the shallow beaches and in the bays. Most common in the Long Beach area are the round rays, Urobatis halleri, rather harmless in appearance but a real menace to bathers and fishermen because of a resemblance to the common and harmless shovelnose shark often hooked along the beaches. Others of the same family of rays are the diamond and California butterfly sting rays. A fourth poisonous fish, the bat ray, is of another family.

Best advice: To bathers, use bathing areas where there are others in the water, create a splash and scuff the toes when entering the water; to fishermen, learn to recognize the rays and kill them before attempting to take them off the hook.

If struck, soak the injured part quickly as possible in hot water, as hot as the area can tolerate it. Addition of Epsom salts to the water is also a help, according to Vic Miller, lieutenant of the Long Beach Life Guards.

THE LONG Beach lifeguard stations offer special first aid treatment for sting ray victims, where medicines especially effective for treatment of the undersea nuisance are available.

Whatever the poison injected by the sting rays, the effect seems to be on the nervous system and, under the hot water treatment, may cause severe pain for varying periods of time. Lieut. Miller said he has witnessed recovery of some victims in as short a time as 10 minutes and back to play on the beach. In other cases, pain may last for an hour or more. Regardless of recovery time, sting ray victims should be treated by a physician to remove possibility of post-injury infection.

Sting of bat ray is painful and poisonous; victims should seek care from physician.

Dr. I. D. Litwack, Long Beach health officer, further recommends a tetanus shot as a precaution against infection other than from the ray poison. Bits of barb or other foreign substances may remain in the wound and should be removed by a physician, Dr. Litwack stated.

RAY stings most commonly are in the instep, atop the instep or in the area of the ankle. The severe pain that follows may extend up the leg into the area of the groin. Muscle spasms also may follow. Nausea and fainting may be shock symptoms and victims should leave the water at once.

A Red Cross pamphlet on sting ray treatment recommends washing out the wound as the hot water treatment begins. Should one making flat dives in shallow water be stung in chest or abdomen, immediate reference to medical treatment is considered imperative.

Sting ray venom is deposited in the wound by pressure of the wound edges against the membrane covering the stinger, not by forced injection, says the Red Cross in quoting from a Caltech research report on these fishes. Wounds range from small punctures to lacerations of more than an inch.

Research shows that the action taken by a sting ray is defensive only, quick and accurate but, because of the location of the stinger, appearing impossible for the fish to attack a person or another fish. Experienced bathers shuffle the feet or slap the water with their swim fins to frighten away rays. Waders may prod the bottom of the bay ahead of them with a stick and fishermen may wear some type of footgear, although rays have been known to penetrat rubber boots with their barbs.

ROUND rays are a sort of circular disk with tail shorter than the disk, skin smooth with few spines, up to 20 inches in size, usually smaller, dark brown or slaty-brown in color above with spots or blotches, undersurface yellow. The stinger is a sharp spine lying atop the tail. They are found from Pt. Conception to the tropics. Many are caught by surf fishermen.

Butterfly rays are distinguishable primarily by their butterfly shape, about twice as wide as long, with small, short tail and stinging spine atop the tail small in comparison. They may achieve a width of five feet. Range is from Pt. Conception to Turtle Bay, common south of San Diego.

Diamond sting rays, also called Pacific and rat-tailed sting rays, may range up to 6 feet in size, are of bluish brown with a long, whip-like tail, 1½ times the body length, and with a sharp sting or spine a short distance back of the body and atop the tail. They are not common north of Dana Point but the habitat is from British Columbia to the tropics. Of interest to anglers only in that they are very dangerous.

Bat rays attain a width of more than four feet and a weight up to 150 pounds. Their heads project above and beyond the flat body planes in bat fashion and have large eyes on the sides and large, flat teeth. Color is black or greenish black, the undersurface white, and the range is from Cape Mendocino to Turtle Bay. They also trail a long, rat-like tail topped with a dorsal fin, just behind which is a long, sharp spine.

Although not commonly taken by surf and bay fishermen, several bat rays ranging up to 60 pounds were caught recently in the vicinity of First Place on the Long Beach Strand. Specimens of this size can put up a struggle on hook and line and should be killed before removed from the hook.

They should always be exterminated because of their menace to crabs, lobsters and other edible shellfish. By reason of the power in their "wings" or pectoral fins they create a suction in the sand when swimming near the bottom, exposing the mollusks which they devour.

Special raids are sometimes made on the bat rays in the San Francisco area and in the oyster beds of California waters. Netting raids have also been made on all types of rays that have been attracted to the river outlet between Seal Beach and Long Beach where warm water released from the inland power plants creates a magnet for these fishes.

Greatest danger period for bathers is in the early summer before crowded beaches drive rays into deeper water or quieter areas, life guards say. The far east end of the Long Beach strand is a more likely place to encounter rays than are most other areas, they say.

While the individual beachgoer's probability of being stung is relatively small, if you are one of the unlucky ones, get out of the water, get help and be sure to see a doctor afterward.

The bat ray, underwater nemesis of the beach bather, often grows as large as 150 pounds. This specimen was taken in Alamitos Bay.

Why Not an Old-Fashioned Bulletin Board at Home?

Hide 'n' Seek Notes

By Ruth C. Ikerman

THE OTHER DAY a group of young mothers were talking about where they leave notes for their families, and I was amazed to discover how out of date the good old reliable bulletin board seems to be in some homes. Instead, the children and parents have devised various forms of the old game of hide and seek.

One mother writes her notes and then with transparent tape leaves them on the outside of the refrigerator door. She figures this is the first place the children will look when they get home from school and if she can catch their eyes as they open the icebox door, she has a good chance of letting them know what time she wants the casserole put into the oven.

ANOTHER mother uses the inside of the icebox, on the theory that the children are too hungry to really give a good look or reading to anything on the outside of the box. Once they reach inside for the cool drink, or the peanut butter to make a sandwich, they will be more inclined to pick up the piece of paper and see what chores are in order for the afternoon.

"They may even suspect I am telling them where the chocolate cookies are stored, so they won't dare not read it," this mother admitted.

A third one has discarded the icebox notes as being too routine. "Now if I want to be sure my son knows what I want, I write the note on a big piece of paper and drop it in the doorway of his bedroom, where he will see it when he goes inside to get his ball and play shoes."

SOMETIMES she shuts the door, when he expects to find it open, so he will know something is "afoot" when he walks inside. In cases of desperation, when the content of the note really has to get across, she has been known to pin it to his play shirt inside the closet of his room.

One thing the young mothers have in common seems to be a consistent use of transparent tape to put the notes in some place where they will be seen, and will not blow away from an opened window. Tape has taken the place of chalk for a blackboard in many homes.

On one other point they were all in agreement,— it does no good at all to put a note on the bathroom wall near the washcloths, for small boys especially will never even look in that direction when in a hurry to run out to play.

A House Full of Art Lovers

By Ellen Krec

EVERY FAMILY has a personal philosophy of living and the Hurtubise family is no exception.

Dr. and Mrs. Francis A. Hurtubise say: "Children first, then gracious living and comfort." All are apparent in the mellow Spanish colonial house that truly "belongs" in the Bixby Knolls area of Long Beach.

It took a long time to arrive in Southern California, but Mrs. Hurtubise says they love it and "California has been very good to us."

BOTH DR. and Mrs. Hurtubise are Canadian-born, and their French ancestry shines in conversation as well as in furnishings.

The architecture is typically California-Spanish with the red tile roof, the patio-courtyard enclosed with wrought iron gates and the arcade leading to the massive carved door.

The moment the door is opened the eye is greeted with art. The foyer is dominated by a prized oil painting they purchased in Beverly Hills, only to discover the artist was from Montreal and French-Canadian!

THIS IS a family with a truly artistic background. Dr. Hurtubise paints and the rooms hold samples of the work he did at age 14. His mother discovered her talent at 65 and delights them all with her still-lifes. One sister is an artist-teacher and all have contributed to a home that reflects talent and beauty.

The rather formal living room is as blue as the Canadian sky with French absinthe draperies, antique white walls and blending tones of blue in the carpeting and accessories.

The two English regency chairs were made to their specifications, then covered with a blue print Italian silk. The enormous urn-shaped lamp is Venetian handblown and shares the corner of this ethnic room.

THE LIVING room is basically English and French, either antique or reproduction, with careful touches of Italian provincial in commodes and coffee table. One exception is a chest with a travertine marble top and doors that fold back to uncover Dr. Hurtubise's "toys." These are records for stereo is his second hobby. A loudspeaker tastefully is hidden in a louvered, Indonesian chest that also serves as a table.

The fireplace color matches the walls, thus allowing the paintings to form the focus of the room. The only touch of another color is a plum velvet ottoman that rests in front of the fireplace. Each of the five Hurtubise children is represented on the mantle with a silver cup, a gift from godparents at birth.

The family heirlooms add a great deal of interest. Crystal decanters, hand-painted china cups used for cigarettes and a gold-inlaid bonbon dish serving as an ash tray suggest the past must be useful as well as attractive.

With a nod toward the Hispanic architecture, the dining room is completely Spanish in decor. A distressed fruitwood chest serves as a buffet and holds the silver and linens. The oblong dining table will seat 12 people very comfortably. Spanish contemporary ladder-back chairs with black leather seats are used. A pair of 12th century English candlesticks are very comfortable on the table and the chest is flanked by two immense antique Indonesian candlesticks. This room alone took two years to assemble.

A GOOD-enough-to-eat-in alcove in pink and white serves as the breakfast room. A still life came as a surprise from Grandmother Hurtubise. When she discovered the color scheme, she just painted a good-enough-to-eat watermelon.

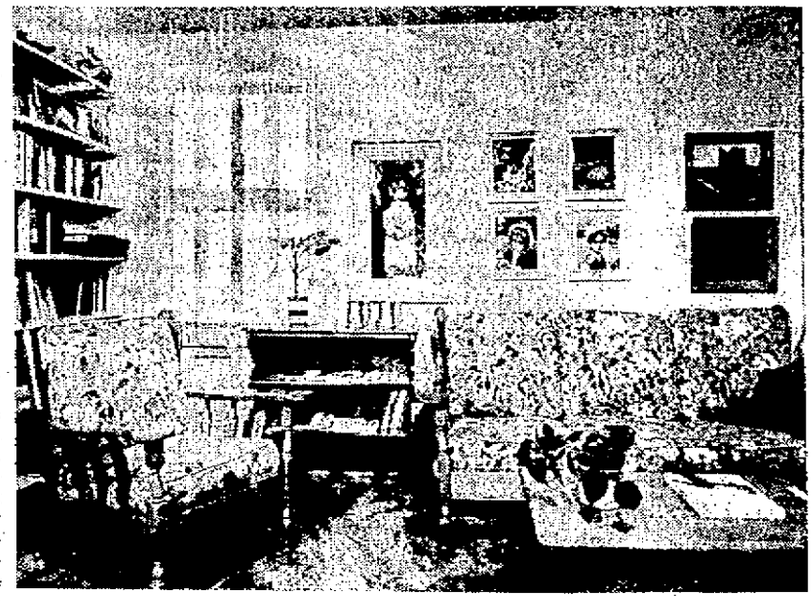

A practical choice of furniture is a round Vilas antique table and reproductions of Windsor chairs. Theirs is a particularly warm fruitwood finish that is non-marking and requires only washing, never polishing. The only problem with this furniture is it sometimes takes a year or more to receive it after you place the order. It is made only in Quebec and mostly in Early Canadian or Early American reproductions.

The den really is the "living room" with all Vilas antique reproductions with cheerful washable covers on the sofa in shades of blue, green and lavender. There are shelves to hold books and tables to hold food. The walls are for paintings, except for one framed photograph Dr. Hurtubise took of a snow-covered Canadian countryside when he was in the tenth grade and playing "hooky." The children "live" in this room and love it.

The traditional Spanish use of tile makes the butter yellow kitchen a dream to care for. The walls are covered completely with ceramic tile. A purely functional room, but a treasure for a family with children.

A scissor staircase leads upward to a well-balanced wall of family art. The stained glass window at the top of the stairs gives the perfect light to the groupings.

Spacious elegance keynotes formal living room (above) in combination of family heirlooms and custom furniture. But between "darkness and daylight" the den (below) becomes living room for the family. Furniture is the practical Vilas Antique of early Canadian styling. And the inevitable paintings . . .

THE SECOND level of this home is, for the most part, the children's domain. The bed-playroom shared by Su Su, Louise and Anne Marie is peppermint and white. There is an air of circus and fun. Even the chests have been painted by Dr. Hurtubise in three vivid colors. As Mrs. Hurtubise will tell you, "With five children it certainly is time-saving to say 'It is in the orange drawer' instead of 'You will find it in the lower righthand drawer.'"

The headboards are white wrought iron, very little girlish, with pink bedspreads to match the pink and white appliqued circus animals on the cafe curtains. The pictures in this room are framed French vitamin ads. These are charming circus figures very "Puissant," as the little French clown says.

The eldest daughter, Michele, has graduated to a fresh-as-a-daisy room, lemon and white striped shades with white curtains trimmed with removable daisies. A silver green carpet adds to the spring-like effect. The furniture is the practical Vilas antique finish. Michele is an avid reader and her walls hold the framed covers of the first four books she read. The most important book at the moment is an etiquette book given her by her mother, who says, "I am delighted with her interest even though she finds it necessary to remind the rest of the family when they are in error."

The addition of a boy, Paul, to a family of girls created a need for an additional room. The sun porch with its many windows became his room. Coral carpeting, a bedspread woven with animals and another chest-of-many-colors complete this little 2-year-old's room.

THE MASTER bedroom is elegant simplicity, with deep red carpeting, an English contemporary bed and double chest, an Italian provincial desk with a Brewster chair, gold cherub wall lamps, add to the mildly Victorian setting.

The elder Mrs. Hurtubise "grew" the paintings for this wall. She painted the flowers from her garden in Canada to remind her children of home.

The Hurtubise youngsters have a lovely home but they are fortunate in another respect—they have their own house — a play house. This makes them the envy of all their friends.

It combines slides, rings, ladders and has seating in the sky for five. It's a peanut penthouse that intrigues sometimes 9 or 10 children to eat lunch on the steps. This is the high spot of a yard that is surrounded by a lovely used-brick patio that might well have been a part of Old Mexico.

Family art dominates the staircase (above). Dining room mode definitely is formal, with Spode china, Czech crystal and Spanish furniture.

The Sandwich Is King for the Busy Modern

By Mildred K. Flanary
Southland Magazine Home Economics Editor

THE "ENCLOSURES" are as important to a sandwich as are "the middles." And a triple basic to the sandwiches in this spectrum is enriched bread—white bread to which has been added three B-vitamins, thiamine, niacin and riboflavin, and iron.

Enriched bread comes to market in a spectrum of shapes and types. You may select rolls or buns. You may choose French or Vienna variations. Sesame seeds and poppy seeds top some of the versions, while plump raisins, sugar and cinnamon swirl through slices of still others.

A taste of any of the nine sandwiches featured here will demonstrate that each is different, and each is best.

BUCKAROO BUNS

- 1 pound ground beef
- ½ tsp salt
- ½ tsp crushed chillies
- 1/16 tsp pepper
- 4 unsliced hamburger buns
- ¼ cup chopped salted peanuts
- ¼ cup pickle relish
- 4 lettuce leaves
- 1½ tblsp mayonnaise or salad dressing
- 1½ tblsp chili sauce
- 4 thin slices tomato

Combine beef, salt, chillies and pepper; shape into 4 meat patties; grill until done. Slice buns, crosswise, into 3 equal-sized layers. Spread bottom layers with mixture of peanuts and pickle relish. Top each with a lettuce leaf and middle bun layer; spread with mixture of mayonnaise and chili sauce and top with cooked hamburger, a tomato slice and bun top.

Yield: 4 Buckaroo Buns.

LONG JOHN HERO

- 4 Brown 'n Serve French rolls, (2½ ounces each)
- 2 tsp prepared mustard
- 4 (1½ inch) strips boiled or baked ham
- 4 (1½ inch) strips cooked turkey or chicken
- 2 tsp relish sandwich spread
- 6 thin slices tomato, halved
- 6 thin slices cucumber, halved
- ¼ cup shredded lettuce

Cut 2 lengthwise slits in each roll, leaving bottom crusts whole. Brown according to package directions. Spread ½ teaspoon mustard in 1 slit; insert a slice each of ham and turkey. In other slit use sandwich spread, 3 pieces tomato and cucumber and a tablespoon lettuce. Repeat for each roll. Yield 4 Long John Heroes.

CANADIAN CHEESE PUFF

- 4 sliced sesame sandwich buns
- 8 (1 ounce) slices process American cheese
- 4 slices Canadian bacon, grilled
- 2 tsp prepared mustard
- 12 onion rings
- 4 green pepper rings
- 12 slices stuffed olives

On the bottom of each bun, stack a slice each of cheese and grilled bacon, ½ teaspoon mustard, 3 onion rings, another cheese slice, a green pepper ring and 3 olive slices. Place both halves of buns in a shallow baking pan and heat in a moderate oven (350 degree F.) for 5 minutes, or until cheese is soft. Serve openface. Yield: 4 Canadian Cheese Puffs.

TROPICAL TEMPTER

- ¼ cup mashed banana
- ½ (3 ounce) package cream cheese
- ⅓ cup drained crushed pineapple
- 2 tblsp chopped salted cashew nuts

Demonstrating disassembly of sectional surfboard he helped design is Karl Pope of Costa Mesa. Two such boards may be carried in Volkswagen, he says.

Surf Set Gets C-o-l-l-a-p-s-i-b-l-e 'Board

By Bob Loeffelbein

A MATHEMATICIAN and an electronics engineer have come up with a collapsible surfboard. It may be broken into three pieces and carried in a suitcase. Two such 'boards may be carried in the backseat of a Volkswagen, the inventors claim.

Its easier portability by plane results in a not-inconsiderable saving of a $50 shipping fee — which is going to please a growing number of international competitors who trek to Australia, South America and Hawaii.

The new 'board, called a Tri-sect by co-originator Karl Pope, the engineering half of Morey-Pope Engineered Surfing Equipment Co. of Ventura, was tested in the 20-foot "heavies" (waves) during last December's International Makaha Surfing championships in Hawaii. Riding the 'board then was Tom Morey, the other half of the company.

Results of that test were so good the newly-crowned meet champion put in an order for one, says Pope.

Morey, recently elected president of the United States Surfing Association, says the company also is manufacturing bisected boards (2-piece), injection-molded skegs (for other manufacturers) and the new "slip check" spray-can wax replacement for surfboard use.

Both Pope and Morey graduated from the University of Southern California and have surfed for the past 10 years. Pope lives in Costa Mesa with his wife, Paula Jean, a former Olympic diving champion, and their three children. Morey's home is in Ventura, the company's headquarters.

Bearded Iris

Tall Bearded Iris are common flowers with an uncommon beauty about them. They were once more popular than they are now, and more's the pity, for anyone who fails to include them in their garden today is missing something special. California Association of Nurserymen members offer a wide selection of iris for fall planting so plan to try a few of them, at least.

There's a plant of some kind blooming in Southern California every season of the year. Grow your own. The garden columns of Southland Magazine will help you.

Tracing Palos Verdes Lore

By Bob Sanders

TIME AND THE TERRACED LAND. By Augusta Fink. Howell-North Books, $7.50.

TRACING THE history of the Palos Verdes Peninsula from the time a million or so years ago when it first pushed itself up out of the ocean to the hectic present is a monumental task.

But Auther Augusta Fink, who lives atop a high bluff over-looking Abalone Cove, has done it with a researcher's knowledge, an artist's insight and a longtime resident's deep affection.

Presenting one of the many undelved parts of California's colorful history, the book, with its many hard-to-come-by illustrations, leads the reader gently down through the ages that have made the Palos Verdes Peninsula what it is today.

* * * *

AFTER A preliminary geological survey of the area, the author plunges into the life of the earliest inhabitants. Not only who they were and where they came from but poignant accounts of these people's day-to-day existence, including the wickiups they lived in, the tools and weapons they used and the rigors of their primitive life are intriguing parts of the early chapters.

Stirring sagas of the early exploring expeditions with details of how some of the participants later became settlers in the wild land are examined, not with the historian's dry eye but with the flowing feelings of an ardent lover of this particular portion of the earth's anatomy.

Later chapters described in intimate detail the Early Days of the peninsula, the bitter fight between the rival families of Dominguez and Sepulveda, the warfare between the United States and the Californians that culminated in the cessation of Mexican rule, the beginnings of the economic development of the area with Phineas Banning's fight to have San Pedro declared a port of entry and myriad little known facets of the development of the peninsula up to the present day.

* * * *

READING this book, it is obvious that Miss Fink knows her subject well and, consequently, writes with authority. It will be a delight to those who live on the peninsula and a boon to Southern California's history buffs. It is an excellent treatment of a little-known subject that is well worth reading, even for the only casual reader.

A PEEK AT OLD NEW YORK

By Les Rodney

TURN WEST ON 23RD, by Robert Baral. Fleet, $5.95.

AS A UTRILLO painting can create for a viewer who has never been to Paris the illusion of nostalgia, so this sprightly volume may do for old New York.

It deals lightheartedly, though with historical accuracy, with the legends of the Chelsea section, that expanse from Fifth Avenue to the Hudson, from 14th to 34th Street, once the center of Manhattan's gay, scamy and creative life.

The old Grand Opera House, the notorious Haymarket sin center, Lillian Russell swirling out of the grand Chelsea Hotel and walking to Cavanagh's for dinner, Sarah Bernhardt playing chess with a dummy at the Eden Musee,, Tin Pan Alley, the antics of O. Henry, Thomas Wolfe and even the latter-day Brendan Behan, the picturesque murder of Stanford White atop the old Madison Square Garden, girl friend Evelyn Nesbit "I'm a Broadminded Broad from Broadway"—Proctor's 23rd Street Theater, where an opera star was hired to sing in the lobby on the ingenious theory "When they hear such singing in the lobby free you can imagine what they think will happen inside!" and a host of other celebrities and hangouts pass in lively review. Plus Adolph Zukor's Famous Players Film Co. on 26th, given enchantment by Pickford and Barrymore before Hollywood bloomed, with the early Westerns filmed in the New Jersey Palisades right across the river (by ferry, if you please, NOT the Lincoln Tunnel.)

LIKE MOST totally gone New Yorkphiles, the author is from somewhere else—Fort Wayne. He occasionally succumbs to the danger in this kind of book of becoming a little arch, pressing the light touch. And absent is the workaday world of plain people whose lives rarely if ever touched the high spots.

Yet part of the truth of the age before machine culture was undoubtedly a more inventive, lusty, individualistic flair, and enough of that is captured and documented to make this account interesting indeed. Vintage art, old ads and clever typography add to the flavor.

A TALE OF WRECK AT SEA

THE WRECK OF THE CASSANDRA. By Frederic Prokosch. Farrar, Straus & Giroux. $4.95.

A CRUISE SHIP burns and sinks at sea and a motley group of nine drifts on a lifeboat to a large, remote island, somewhere between Hong Kong and Australia, which is inhabited in its interior by savages: the pattern may sound familiar, but in the masterly hands of veteran author Frederic Prokosch this tale is an engrossing, even haunting, novel.

The ship survivors (the year is 1938) are Miss Penelope Eccles, a butterfly hunter; Mrs. Lily Domingo, 59-year-old millionairess from Tennessee; her Austrian boyfriend, Baron von Wolfhausen; Zenzo, a Japanese youth; Laura and Tony Wagenseller, bickering couple from Philadelphia; Billy Baxter, a young American boy; Professor Shishnik, scholarly, childlike Russian; and Ibrahim, the ship's bartender, a handsome young Negro from Morocco.

Prokosch is a fine novelist who compels the reader's interest in the fate of each of these characters. There is violence, terror and vileness in the story; but there also is tenderness and beauty—BOB MARTIN.

And Try Not to Miss . . .

HEIRS TO FREUD: ESSAYS IN FREUDIAN PSYCHOLOGY. Edited by Hendrik M. Ruitenbeck. Grove, $7.50.

A "second generation" of Freudians: Ferenczi, Hitschman, Eitingon, are represented in this collection of essays. There are discussions of child psychology by Freud's daughter Anna, and Melanie Klein; on the superego by Freud's great biographer Ernest Jones. There are early essays by the original American Freudians—Brill and Putnam.

RED MAN'S RELIGION. By Ruth M. Underhill. University of Chicago, $7.95. Having lived a good part of a long life on most of the nation's Indian reservations, Ruth Underhill, anthropologist and ethnologist, is more than well qualified to write of any facet of Indian life, culture and lore. She has done so in numerous books, and "Red Man's Religion" is a rare mine of information on Indian beliefs, practices, rites and ceremonies. There are fine chapters on the Indians and the supernatural, on their ideas of world origin, on their attitudes toward the dead, on medicine men and shamans, on the Sun Dance and other cults.

THE WESTERN WORLD: RENAISSANCE TO THE PRESENT. By J. Russell Wilson. Lippincott. $12.95.

An American historian spreads the panorama of 500 years. The economic and political institutions that have made Europe and America what they are receive an expert's treatment. Arts, sciences, philosophies, literature and even the important matter of taste get full attention.

A Few Vintage Volumes

WILLIAM YOUNGER, a Scotsman, departed this earth in 1961 at the age of 43. One would like to believe he has gone to a land where every year is a vintage one.

He was, we say, a Scotsman, but he could not have been dour. (All Scotsmen, non-Scotsmen believe are dour, just as all Japanese wear thick-lensed glasses and all Frenchmen are great lovers. Conversely, so all Americans believe, all Frenchmen think all Americans are lambs for the fleecing.)

But back to William Younger. No one dour of nature could have chosen, as the major work of his life, to trace the influence of wine on mankind from the earliest times. His posthumous book, "GODS' MEN AND WINE," published by the Wine and Food Society in association with World Publishing Co., $19.75, is a shout of praise for the pleasure wine has given man, when taken in gentlemanly moderation, from Ur of the Chaldees, Egypt and ancient Asia Minor, from Minoan Crete. It sings of the noble role played by wine in the glory that was Greece and the grandeur that was Rome.

ON THROUGH the Middle Ages, the Renaissance, the Age of Reason, the Victorian and Edwardian eras, Mr. Younger pens the epic of wine's exhilaration.

Wine was a woman's discovery. King Jemsheed of Persia, being inordinately fond of grapes, had them stored in jars. He found a certain bunch bitter—and believing their liquor noxious, ordered the jar labeled poisonous. As Mr. Younger tells it, a lady of his harem, wearied of life, drank some of the liquid, and instead of dying, fell asleep and awoke so refreshed that she finished the jar. The king pried the secret out of her and "a quantity of wine was made; and Jefsheed and all his court drank of the new beverage."

This veritable encyclopedia of wine contains 165 contemporary illustrations, a good many of them in color, that are in their own right a documentary of man's wine-making and drinking habits in every age.

THE WORLD PUBLISHING CO., again in conjunction with the Wine and Food Society, offers another boon to wine-fans in Andre L. Simon's "THE COMMON-SENSE OF WINE" ($7.50). There cannot be much worth knowing about wines and winemakers of today, or how to use wines to the best advantage, that is not in Simon's book. The five stars of the book are the greatest wine-growing countries—France, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Germany. Their wines and wine regions are described in detail. Our American wines come in for a good deal of praise. The lesser-known wines of Switzerland, Bulgaria, Greece, Israel, South Africa and Chile, and some 15 other countries are titillatingly discussed. And there is advice on serving and storing wine, on wine glasses and decanters, and on wine cellars.

So, a toast to William Younger, Andre L. Simon, the Wine and Food Society, and World Publishing.

Relax--Be Comfortable!

By Steve Ellingson

CALL IT A PATIO, a yard or a retreat—by any name this area issues an open invitation to "come relax and be comfortable." And the biggest inducement to comfort is a well-padded settee under the shade of your favorite tree. Now, with the long daylight hours, there's nothing like it to help squeeze a little more relaxation out of the end of a busy working day.

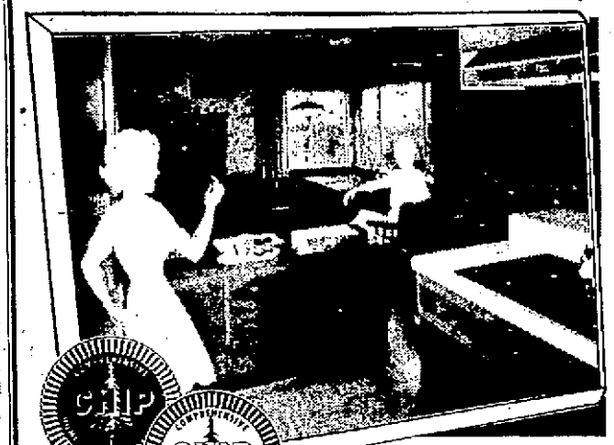

The settee, shown here with Marie Cheatham, co-star of NBC's "Days of Our Lives" series, has many attributes. Not only is it rest-promoting, tension relieving and good looking, but it's a project that most amateurs will enjoy building because of its simplicity of construction. The pads are a standard size and available everywhere. Wheels make it easy for you to follow either shade or sun.

The full-size pattern makes this an exceptionally easy project. You need only trace the pattern parts on wood, then saw them out and finally put the parts together. Lots of pictures are included showing the various stages of construction along with easy-to-understand directions. If you have a young boy in your family, this is an ideal project for him—or any other amateur in your household. Inexpensive too!

Invitation to relax is extended by simply-constructed settee—and star Marie Cheatham.

To obtain the full size settee pattern No. 396, send $1 by currency, check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Southland Magazine Patterns Dept., P. O. Box 2383, Van Nuys.

COIN ROUNDUP

Canada 'Specials'

By Maurice M. Gould

THE COINS to be issued by Canada during 1967—100 years since Canada became self-governing—will be in big demand among collectors all over the world. First of all, these coins will be minted for only one year and are unique commemorative pieces.

Totally different from the 1966 coins and the coins to be issued in 1968, they are a must for the collector of type pieces. They will be of special interest to the topical collector, since they will be struck with fish, birds and animal designs.

The 1967 Canadian centennial coins will include such animals as the wolf, wildcat, rabbit, dove and a fish (the mackerel), and will appear on the 10-cent piece.

One of the most beautiful coins will be the Canadian silver dollar, to show a Canadian goose in flight.

A New Brunswick artist, Alex Colville, winner of the competition for Canada's Centennial of Confederation Coinage, is the designer of the new coins.

Of course, the much-publicized $20 gold piece will be in the news for a long time and it is hoped that eventually this will be made available to U. S. collectors.

The minister of finance of Canada has reported that consideration is being given for the issuing of some centennial paper money during the celebration. In fact, a great many collectors sent in suggestions regarding a special commemorative paper money issue for the one centennial year.

Sesquicentennial medal of Cambridge, Mass., shows New England street scene on obverse.

LOOK FOR MORE interest in the collecting of medals and medallic art of all kinds.

The 89th Congress has a large number of commemorative medal bills before it, probably more than at any other time in history; the House of Representatives has been considering and debating the merits of each individual piece.

Some already have been passed, among them the Alaska Purchase Centennial, the Scranton, Pa., Centennial, and the 75th anniversary of the American Numismatic Association. These three pieces are considered national medals.

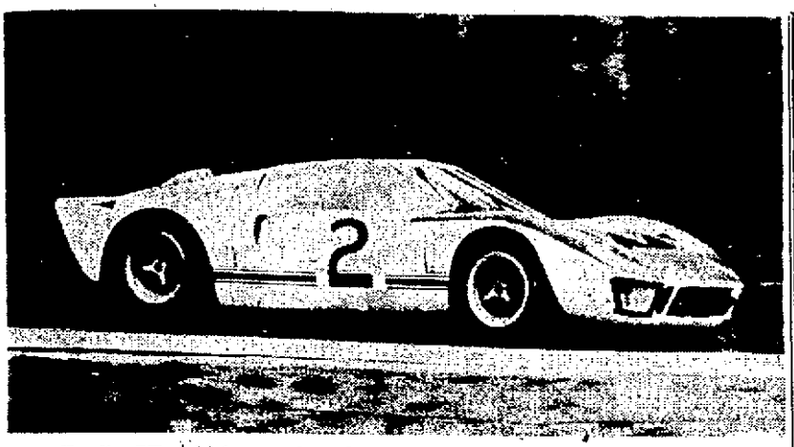

There will probably also be a Secret Service Centennial Medal, along with many others.

One of the most important pieces to be struck, of great interest to all coin collectors, will be the American Numismatic Association medal. This group is the largest organization of coin collectors in the world, has over 25,000 members and is now in the process of preparing to build a permanent home and museum in Colorado Springs, Colo.

One example is the beautiful medal issued recently on the 150th anniversary of Southbridge, Mass. This sesquicentennial piece shows the main street on the obverse; the reverse has a map of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the famous Deneson Rock, and the "To the Victors Belong the Spoils," which is a famous quotation from one of its outstanding citizens, William Learned Marcy.

The New King of Cars

bra accelerates from 0 to 60 miles per hour in 3.9 seconds, from 0 to 100 in 7.5 seconds, and from 0 to 100 to a dead stop again in 14 seconds.)

With auto racing steadily gaining spectators and competitors all across the country, Shelby sees a whole new breed of race driver in the making, a return to the gentleman sportsman who takes his machine, which he drove to work all week, to the track on weekends and runs it in races. He claims loudly and proudly that his GT 350 Mustang, the car he produces by the thousands at his L. A. International Airport factory, where jet fighters were assembled, can be driven from his showroom floor directly to a drag strip or road race course and come up a winner.

The projection is that Shelby American will sell 6,000 of the revamped Mustangs this year at $4,428. (The race-ready competition model is $5,950. The GT 350 Mustang has a slightly modified body from the stock Ford model but there are major changes in its steering, suspension system and engine. Shelby sells them through 90 dealerships nationwide, and when in a jovial mood, which is most of the time, the owner of Shelby American is likely to quip of the GT 350 Mustang: "It's what made Horace Wink blink."

(Another statement by Shelby of the GT 350 and the Cobra: "What I am trying to build is a car for a very special class of buyer, but I think there are a lot of buyers in this special class. This car is for the person who, when the light turns green, wants to go.")

Shelby American's concentration on mass producing modified Mustangs has caused a loud ripple within the organization. Pete Brock, a brilliant young race car designer (he designed the Cobra Daytona coupe which many racing authorities consider the best racing car in the world today), resigned from the Shelby American in recent months. Brock, the first man hired by Shelby when he began to build his empire, commented to this writer: "They're turning it (Shelby American) into a washing machine factory, just stamping out Mustangs." Brock says he would like to return "if he (Shelby) ever gets back into the business of building race cars."

But it is more likely that Carroll Shelby is moving in the other direction. It's been a long and loud trail since that first victory in a race car in Okmulgee, Okla., the first time he ever sat in a sports car. They were lean years, traipsing along the circuit through Caddo Mills and Jacksboro and Hudson's Corners and it was a hectic life even after he hit the big time of Daytona, Monza and Le Mans.

That's why those who've watched closely his climb from penniless ex-driver to a position of being the guiding force in America's burgeoning sports car business in a span of only a few years understand his point of view.

He has won everything. Now he wants money.

Max, the Non-Conforming Cat

By Eleanor Avery Price

"Maxwell," whose tri-colored markings are quite rare, belongs to Ruth Arthur, Long Beach.

TWO YEARS AGO, we carried in this column a picture of a male tortoiseshell (tri-colored) born in Signal Hill area. He's still a beauty, and living happily although he's never permitted to get into nocturnal feline brawls. Now another genetical nonconformist has appeared in Long Beach. Named Maxwell, he's owned by Ruth Arthur.

Tortoiseshell and calicos are fairly common as females. They are not to be confused with cats—male or female—with yellowish or tawny fur around the face, the underparts or back. This is a coloration of fur and is not sex-linked.

The study of genetics is not always easy to understand, and scientifically the birth of a male tri-colored should not be possible. Each individual cell of every living species carries a constant number of deeply-stained bodies in cell nuclei, which can be studied when taken from the mouth. They are called chromosomes, a word originated in 1888 by Wilhelm Von Waldeyer.

LATER, Walter S. Sutton formulated the theory of their importance in reproduction. Man has 46 chromosomes; rabbits 44; mice 40; cats 38. A female normally carries two X chromosomes, whereas a male has one X and one Y. In reproduction, if the X fertilizes the egg, the offspring has two Xs and is female. If the Y fertilizes the egg, the offspring carries both X and Y and is male.

In the genes of black and yellow in a cat's color, the female with her two Xs can have both black and yellow in her coat. The male with his own X and one Y is not supposed to carry both colors. If he does, he has two Xs plus the Y, giving him 39 chromosomes instead of 38. The extra one usually makes the male sterile. In fact, the odds are about 100,000-to-1 against the male being fertile. People have claimed their male tris sired kittens, but the only one I know about with proof is Quad. Ch. Torti Man of Gallus who lived in Texas from 1950 to 1959.

Sterile tri cats can still drown out a TV with caterwauling, and they may leave "calling cards" in every room in an attempt to attract a female. Just as with ordinary toms, their personalities vary.

In studies of humans with extra or missing chromosomes, which has nothing to do with hair color, the human may be mentally sluggish, have abnormal growth or personality problems. For this reason, doctors who study mentally retarded persons at Rainer School in Buckland, Wash., also study as many male tri cats as they can obtain. Most cats sent to them do not have the positive pattern of nuclei cells and are not true "triploid-diploid mosaics."

The Washington school also is interested in blue-cream cats, a rare enough coloring in females, and another "impossible" in males, because this color is probably a dilution of the true calico.

MEDICINE AND YOU

No Cure for Obesity?

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical Science Editor

NEW RESEARCH supports the belief that obesity remains incurable.

Dr. Joseph A. Glennon of the University of Wisconsin Medical School tells of 199 obese patients who took part in a long-term weight-reduction program. Only 12% lost 20 pounds or more and only one succeeded in approaching an ideal weight.

The program consisted of a short period of hospitalization followed by dieting at home. (All did manage to lose weight in the hospital.)

But follow-up studies one to two years after hospitalization show that weight reduction was not appreciable. Men were no more successful than women in combating obesity.

Dr. Glennon made his report to the Central Society for Clinical Research, Chicago.

A 20-YEAR follow-up study of 200 schizophrenic patients shows that many "hopelessly deteriorated" patients fully recover after a long illness.

Schizophrenia is a severe emotional disorder marked by retreat from reality.

Dr. Manfred Bleuler, Zurich, Switzerland psychiatrist and son of the man who invented the term "schizophrenia," says that if a patient lives long enough, he is likely to recover.

DOCTORS HAVE long felt that smokers get more respiratory infections than nonsmokers. A new research project gives proof:

Student nurses—47 smokers and 47 nonsmokers—were studied at Vancouver (Canada) General Hospital. As expected, the incidence of respiratory disease was less in the nonsmokers, reports the New England Journal of Medicine.

LONG-TERM treatment with a cortisone-like drug of the child with disabling asthma usually helps him to lead a nearly normal life and attend school.

So says a British researcher in Annals of Allergy. Dr. John Morrison Smith of Birmingham (England) Chest Clinic says that most of 56 patients treated were able to change from chronic invalidism to a reasonably normal life. Drug usually used was prednisolone.

WEST GERMANY is plagued with emotional problems, public health officials report.

The suicide rate is rising to new highs. Seven million persons (11.5% of the total population) are severely neurotic. One of every 30 students is disturbed.

SCIENTISTS WITH the Agriculture Research Service are working on a high-calorie fat emulsion that can be given for long periods by intravenous injection.

The new produce, made from cottonseed oil, is capable of providing up to eight times as many calories as currently used solutions. Thus it should prevent weight loss when patients have to be fed intravenously for long periods.

The emulsion, still considered experimental, has been used only on laboratory animals.

BEFORE A CROWD, skilled athletes perform better but less-skilled ones do worse, research shows.

Leon E. Smith, Ed. D., associate professor of physical education at University of Iowa, puts it this way:

"In other words, an audience facilitates performance and impairs learning."

The report was made at a regional meeting of the American College of Sports Medicine.

The Younger Set Heads for 'Tent-Outs'

IF A "TENT CITY" arises overnight in the neighbor's back yard, don't be surprised.

It's one of the "in" things among the younger set this summer to move out of the house and into their own easily-built playhouse towns in the far corner of the back yard of suburban homes all over the country.

It's a movement that has full approval of most parents, too, for it is not only providing an outlet for pent-up energies, but the fad is quieting down a lot of houses, as well.

THE KIDS ARE going for the latest outdoor innovation for children, the "A"-Tents. These experimental "A"-Tents, created by the Play Council, using inexpensive Homasote building board and simple wood framing, were patterned after the popular "A"-frame vacation homes. They were the result of studies to determine how they could serve as playtime projects for children to make use of their inexhaustible energy.

Plans were prepared for a wide variety of tent designs which would stimulate the imagination of any child and which could be easily assembled by any parent. Children and parents were consulted for ideas, test models were made and the children's enthusiasm was noted.

Some models were discarded and additional new ones created. And, finally, the day arrived when the group of "A"-Tents was assembled in the back yard of a quiet suburban home to receive the final approval of the children.

LET LOOSE, some of the kids zeroed in on a gaily decorated "A"-type wigwam (like a bunch of Indians). Others became soldiers zooming in on an "A"-Tent painted a khaki color.

Still others became sheiks of Araby, playing in and out of a colorful striped canopy "A"-Tent. Two other children tried their luck at prospecting for gold in front of their prospector's "A"-Tent, which had the natural gray finish of the weatherproof Homasote building board while another group tried erecting "instant tents," tents without framing which can be assembled and disassembled in minutes and which stimulate a child to use his creative as well as his imaginative skills.

In all respects, the project was a huge success. It encouraged children to use their imagination and, at the same time provided an outlet for their energy.

Parents require no professional skill to assemble and decorate the tents nor are any hard-to-get materials needed.

The wood framing and the Homasote board are available at most building material dealers. Being splinter-free and weatherproof, Homasote board makes an ideal material for outdoor projects designed for children's play.

A spokesman for the Play Council has indicated that plans and ideas for the "A"-Tents are available free to all by writing to The Play Council, Box 441, Trenton 3, New Jersey.

IN ALL ITS forms, the "A"-Tent, as devised by the Council, is an educational "starter." Children have an opportunity to take pages from history as the situations for the "A"-Tent settings, such as Washington at Valley Forge, Lawrence in Arabia, the Battle of the Little Big Horn, Sutter's Discovery of Gold and many, many more incidents which make up their studies of history.

And there also is fun for the whole family, first in assembling and decorating the various "A"-Tents and then in helping the children plan some of their pint-sized adventures.

There's no doubt, the "A"-Tents are here to stay and with them a whole new concept of play.

They Love Summer Sun

By A. C. MacLeod

SOME plants, like some people, are sun worshippers. Give them a full day in the blazing August sun and they only ask for more. Give them shade, and they sulk or otherwise show their discontent.

The season when these sun-worshipping members of our plant world can be of use is hard upon us, so if you wondered what to plant against the heat-drenched south wall or on a sun-baked hillside, visit your local nursery now. California Association of Nurserymen suggests any of the following will do the job and do it well.

One sun-loving perennial that long has been a California favorite is the lavender—that plant of great sentimental attachments. The old fashioned English lavender hasn't changed much since our grandmother's day and is still a ruggedly atttractive shrub for sunny borders and beds. Its gray foliage and spikes of lavender flowers are easy to live with and easy to combine with other colors. There are newer lavenders, however, worth a look. One of these, Munstead Lavender, is specially dwarfed, seldom growing over a foot in height. It is an excellent choice for the base of a sunny wall, or the top of a retaining wall on a sunny hillside. The blooms have the wonderful fragrance which one associates with the lavender family.

ANOTHER gray-leaved perennial which soaks up any amount of sun is the Dusty Miller. There are two or three Dusty Millers available, varying in size from the squat edging plant we use to line walks and beds to two or three foot specimens used to fill in the shrub border or to stand by themselves in a featured spot.

Dusty Miller is a popular sun-loving plant for border and accent in California gardens.

Dusty Millers are all silvery-gray, bearing yellow flowers in summer which add to the attraction. It is the foliage color which we rely on mainly however — through 12 months of the year—to combine with other colors, primarily those of such sun-loving bedders as Scarlet Sage or zinnias. In not-so-hot garden settings, it can be most attractive when combined with the bronzy tones of fibrous begonia.

Similar in color to the Dusty Miller is another perennial, Silver King artemesia. This one has the same silvery foliage, but the leaves are much more fine cut and the overall appearance is of a delicate lacy quality. The foliage of Silver King is wonderfully decorative in bouquets, especially dried bouquets. To prepare it for such use, cut in late summer and hang upside down in a cool, dry place such as your garage or basement. You can also cut it fresh during winter for display indoors, and fine display it makes.

IN THE GARDEN border, this artemesia will grow in a loose, mounding form from two to three feet high, though the latter is unusual. Keep it pruned back (by cutting bouquets) to discourage ranginess and give it all the sun your garden has. You can't overdo it.

The unchallenged king of our sun worshipping plants is the lantana, which never seems to get enough heat to hurt it. So many wonderful new varieties of this rugged plant are available that the gardener owes himself a trip to the nursery just to see them. Most of them are of the low, spreading type, but put them on a lattice work and they will fan upward in a neat espalier. You couldn't ask for a nicer addition to a sun-baked wall than one of the newer lantanas grown this way.

All of the plants mentioned above are rugged individualists who make their own way despite neglect and unfavorable soil conditions. They are much better for regular care, however. Poor soils should be improved with steer manure, though supplemental feeding as the plants grow is not necessary. As a matter of fact, in the case of lavender, extra feeding is inadvisable, for too much food reduces the wonderful fragrance.

Vermilion-red cosmos, Sunset, is a medalist.

Gold Medal Winner

FOR ONLY the third time in the past 27 years a new flower has been scored sufficiently high by all judges to receive a gold medal award from All-America Selections. A cosmos, of a color never seen before in these flowers, it is named Sunset. Scarlet or vermilion-red blooms with an underlay of gold, make this an outstanding annual for any garden.

It is so easy to grow. Just make a shallow drill with the tip of your hoe or rake handle after soil has been spaded and raked level, and scatter the seeds—thinly please, because every one will grow.

And the color—it has to be seen to be believed! It is just as bright and unfading in the states in the lower south as it is in provinces in Canada. Here's a real eye-stopper you'll be delighted to grow.

If you serve a dish that friends rave about, submit the recipe to Recipe Contest Editor, Southland Magazine. It may win a $5 "Recipe of the Week" prize.

LAGUNA BEACH ART FESTIVAL

Judas clutches the bag of silver. John waits with calm confidence. Christ, His head turned slightly to the right and lowered, is a wonderful study of simplicity and meekness. To the right, James has spread out his hands in dismay, while behind him, Thomas shows disposition to be aggressive; Philip has risen in troubled doubt and young Matthew turns to the two near him in wonder. Thaddeus is struck with horror and Simon is stern and forbidding.

"We have studied the picture of The Last Supper hundreds of times," says George Owen, 81, of Laguna Beach, who has played the role of St. Peter for 16 years straight. "Yet each time we catch a little different mood of each disciple and try to add it to the presentation."

THE HUMAN figures in The Last Supper hold their poses for three minutes—longer than for any of the other pageant presentations.

This year, the pageant will feature a startling contrast to da Vinci's painting by also enacting the painting of The Sacrament of the Last Supper by Salvador Dali—a master work of modern art. The original of this piece is in the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D. C., but a magnificent copy hangs in the refectory of St. Michael's Norbertine Seminary in Trabuco Canyon.

In addition to the da Vinci and Dali works of religious art, the pageant will stage three other religious paintings, St. Michael Casting Satan Into Hell, by Antonio Palomino y Velasco; The Holy House of Nazareth, by Francisco de Zurbaran, and The Virgin With St. Ines and St. Tecla, by El Greco.

THIS YEAR'S pageant features 30 re-creations of paintings and sculptures, but also adds the charm of other types of art, repeating the showing of the exquisitely detailed Oriental carved ivory chess figures in a classic checkmate position on the same stage with the contrasting Mexican chess set of simple paper mache also in checkmate position.

Of course, during the five-week run there is more to see at Laguna's Festival of Arts than just the Pageant of Masters. The six acres surrounding the Irvine Bowl are clustered with the work of some 200 artists in every medium of the arts. The work is for sale and many artists sell enough at this festival to keep them in business for the greater part of a year.

An interesting display is the Anna Mary Beck Junior Art Gallery which presents the best work of Orange County students from kindergarten through high school. There are puppet shows several times daily and on Sunday afternoon the "Performing Arts on the Green" is presented by the Festival Arts Chorale in cooperation with the Civic Ballet, Community Players and other local cultural groups.

From June to August, when most are planning their vacations, the people of Laguna Beach are busy rehearsing and practicing a living art. And many, like George Owen, a St. Peter for 16 years, wouldn't think of doing anything else.

Life With a Sports Car

over for a time, and we sports car owners must rise to new heights of injured persecution. We're a carefree lot at heart, but we're also a bit paranoid about big cars and the Big Car mentality of many Americans.

I personally hope for a special tract in Gehenna reserved for sloppy parkers of those cars with sharky fins, mammary-like bumper projections and taillights that could be hired out when the spotlight breaks down at a supermarket grand opening.

This breed of man—and woman—has cost me many a parking light lens and has put numerous dimples in the Sprite's frail grillework.

Within two weeks, three lenses were broken and my car's license plate illuminator was sheared off. It got so I'd check the parking space for tire-slicing shards of broken glass before I dared to move the car. I've never been present for one of these power-steering pervert's performances, but I eagerly await the confrontation.

Perhaps I'll just hand the culprit a bill for the damage, and then again, up for serious consideration, is the simple act of walking over and smashing the corresponding light of the offender's car.

Guess which method appeals to me most?

THERE ARE more subtle aspects of sports car ownership which don't necessarily lead to mayhem or the urge toward it. You encounter, for instance, some complex social problems with whomever happens to be the light of your life on a given night, especially if the occasion is more than ultra-casual.

In one brief fling I learned that:

—Leaking clutch fluid ruins satin shoes.

—Beehive pomadours do not hold up at 60 miles per hour with the top down.

—Pipe ashes should not be tapped out on the edge of the windshield frame except when the car is motionless.

—One mustn't expectorate without a careful analysis of prevailing winds and rate of travel.

—Handholding in city traffic is feasible only among the automatic transmission set.

A word about safety might be wise in light of the current controversy over American automobiles and the degree of their skull-banging and kidney-punching liabilities.

You can induce aches, pains and a carbon monoxide headache just riding in a roadster such as mine.

SPORTS CAR knee, for example, is a leg malady caused by the low seating arrangement, plus much use in braking and clutching the car. For one who was never considered a Brer Rabbit for grace and agility, it was an awkward affliction. People stare so when you climb out of the tiny cockpit, groan audibly and hobble down the sidewalk gingerly favoring your left leg. It usually disappears after three weeks of cramping torment.

Eventually, one learns to live with a sports car and love it, despite such womanish wiles as constant demands in time, money and attention. But just like with a woman, you never let a sports car involve you to the extent that it interferes with your career.

I was going to write more to this article, but I've got to get down to the garage and pick up my Sprite. Clutch went out on it the other day, you know.

Your wife deserves a medal.

This medal is the symbol of an all-electric Gold Medallion Home.

We call it "the home that helps with the housework."

How does it help?

The electric oven cleans itself automatically.*

The electric range never blackens pots and pans.

The electric dishwasher and washer-dryer do loads of work a day.

But the biggest help is the electric heating system. It keeps the whole house cleaner. White draperies stay white longer. Walls need less scrubbing. The heat is as clean as electric light.

If you're looking for a new home, look for the medal your wife deserves—the symbol of an all-electric Gold Medallion Home.

Thousands have been awarded to homes (and wives) in Southern California.

Best of all, Gold Medallion homes come in all price ranges and work all day for surprisingly little.

Southland Dining at its Finest in the Long Beach and Orange County Area

EVER SO often — without warning — I am wracked by a powerful desire. I've just got to have a delicious beefsteak for dinner.

Fortunately this robust wish is accompanied by a mild, tempering influence. I do not care to bankrupt myself in pursuit of that steak. I don't want to leave my car keys with the proprietor to take care of the tab. Nor do I wish to take a less drastic way out, arranging to pay for my dinner in easy monthly payments.

Being fairly intelligent as well as hungry, I know exactly where to go when I want a marvelous steak served at a sane price. It's the Melody Cove, 1960 Santa Fe Ave., Long Beach, an attractive, modern place with thick carpeting, paneled walls and a quiet atmosphere conducive to pleasant dining. It's been owned for many years by Jerry Reynolds and his tall, graceful wife Jo, knowledgeable hosts well-acquainted with the secrets of pleasing patrons in two important ways: (1) quality and (2) price.

The Cove has two featured steak dinners, both $2.75. One is a top sirloin, char-broiled to perfection, accompanied by onion-rings, soup du jour or a large fresh salad; baked potato with thick, delectable cheese sauce; garlic toast and coffee. The other is a teriyaki steak, which is a conventional top sirloin accompanied by a cup of spicy, exotic teriyaki sauce, as well as the aforementioned side dishes.

Closed Sundays but open for luncheon and dinner daily, the Melody Cove also offers tasty sea foods and poultry. The Thursday night special is prime rib au jus (juicy and flavorful), $2.25. One of the luncheon treats is a $1 hamburger sandwich, served on a French roll with melted cheese and a green salad.

SUNDAY TREAT—Chicken every Sunday? Absolutely! And it's also popular every day of the week, provided it's luscious Kentucky Fried Chicken prepared by Ray Weidemann, Don Steinke and their talented crews. Ray and Don are hosts at the Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurants at 1190 E. Carson St., Long Beach, and 4917 Bellflower Blvd., Lakewood. Their special recipe produces southern fried chicken so delicious it makes strong men weep with joy, while their spouses —liberated from kitchen duties—shout with hapiness. Dinners are merely $1.35; take-out orders are from $1.10.

Q. Is it true that the U.S. Army is now operating Dachau, Hitler's oldest concentration camp in Germany,as a stockade for American GI's?—E.L.T.,New York, N.Y.

A. Eastman Barracks, a prison for American GI's, is located on the same land that encompassed the Dachau concentration camp. From time to time GI inmates report a strong nauseating stench wafting up from the nearby crematorium where the Nazis murdered approximately 28,000 Jews and anti-Nazis. Dachau today is divided into two areas: one consists of the memorial to victims of the German atrocities, headed by Ruth Jakusch of the Dachau International Committee; the other consists of the Eastman Barracks, which once was used to incarcerate important enemies of the Third Reich. GI's in Germany refer to the Eastman barracks as "the Dachau stockade." It is a neat, whitewashed jail that houses GI's who have been sentenced to six months of imprisonment or less.

Q. Were Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and Nathaniel Hawthorne college classmates?—Watson Henry, Evanston, Ill.

A. Yes, both were graduated from Bowdoin College, Maine, class of 1825.

Q. I've read that most of the fatal accidents in private flying are caused by drunk pilots. Is this so?—Vernon Richards, Paducah, Ky.

A. One of the first formal studies of general aviation accidents, made by Drs. Charles Harper and William Albers of the Federal Aviation Agency, shows that in 158 of 477 fatal general aviation accidents in 1963—this has nothing to do with commercial airline flying—56 or 35.4% of the 158 pilots registered positive at autopsy as regards alcohol in the blood.

Q. Does Barry Goldwater plan to run for the U.S. Senate again? — Dan Lloyd, Tombstone, Ariz.

A. Probably in 1968 or when Senator Hayden of Arizona retires.

Q. Not long ago while I was in Europe, I was told that most major European countries deliver the mail faster and more frequently than the U.S. Post Office does. Is this true? If so, please use only my initials as I would still like to get my mail.—M.P.G., Bal Harbour, Fla.

A. True.

Q. How many years have Chet Huntley and Dave Brinkley been with NBC, and who was responsible for putting them together?—R. Espinard, Chicago,Ill.

A. Brinkley has been with NBC since 1943, Huntley since 1955. The original pairing suggestion came from the late Fred Wile of NBC-TV, Los Angeles, was implemented by Pat Weaver, formerly in charge of NBC-TV.

Q. I've heard that Robert Goulet was married before his marriage to Carol Lawrence (1.) and that he has a child from that first marriage. Is that so? — A.T.E., Jamaica, N.Y.

A. Yes, he was married to Louise Longmore in 1956, has a daughter, Nicolette, by her.

Q. How many times has columnist Drew Pearson been sued for libel? Has he ever lost? Is it true Gen. Douglas MacArthur planned to sue him for libel because he reported that MacArthur every now and again touched up his hair? —Arthur Holt, Los Angeles, Calif.

A. Pearson has been sued approximately 25 times, has lost only one suit. MacArthur resented Pearson's intimations that he was a vain man.

Q. Who said: "In America there are two classes of travel—first class, and with children."?—J. Robert Jenkins, Cambridge, Mass.

A. The late Robert Benchley, U.S. humorist—1889-1945.

Q. In 1961 President Kennedy sent his Vice President, Lyndon Johnson, and his sister and brother-in-law, Jean and Stephen Smith, to Vietnam. What was Johnson's report on Vietnam? What did he recommend back then?—S.L., Washington, D.C.

A. He then reported that the number-one danger in Southeast Asia was not Communism but "hunger, ignorance, poverty and disease," went on to say that we must "make imaginative use of our scientific and technologic capacity." He favored military training missions but no commitment of American troops on the grounds that such commitments would revive anticolonial demonstrations in Vietnam. The major supporter for troop and combat escalation in Vietnam was Walt Rostow, who with Gen. Maxwell Taylor followed Johnson to Vietnam in October 1961. Both gentlemen suggested U.S. troop commitments. Despite demurrers by Averell Harriman and J. Kenneth Galbraith, President Kennedy reluctantly agreed to send combat troops to Vietnam. In May 1962, when Defense Secretary Robert McNamara flew into Saigon for his first assessment of the situation, he said after a two-day stay: "Every quantitative measurement we have shows we're winning this war."

Q. Is Petula Clark married? Does she have any children? Is she English or French? — Claire Diamond, Jersey City, N.J.

A. Petula Clark, British, is married to a Frenchman, has two daughters.

Q. In Vietnam many American soldiers are referred to by their buddies as "Straight Arrows" and "Broken Arrows." What do these expressions mean?—Viola Rushmer, Baltimore, Md.

A. "Straight Arrow" signifies a married man who remains faithful for his entire stretch of duty in Vietnam. "Broken Arrow" refers to a married soldier who succumbs to temptation.

Q. When Senator Fulbright was president of the University of Arkansas, is it true he was given the choice of resigning or being fired, and that he chose resignation? — C. H. B., Deming, N. Mex.

A. No. Fulbright was fired by Gov. Homer Adkins on the grounds that he was not an educator but a political hack. This occurred immediately following Adkins' election against which Fulbright's mother had strongly fought in her reform newspaper, The Northwest Arkansas Times, describing Adkins as a "blowhard" and a "handshaker."

Q. Lucille Ball recently made a TV special acting as a guide around London. My question is—was Lucille Ball born in England or the U.S.? Also how much does she know about London? — R. Smith, Jamestown, N.Y.

A. Lucille Ball was born in Jamestown, N.Y. In all probability she does not know enough about London to be licensed as a guide, but she is a big TV name, which is what the sponsor is buying.

NEEDED NOW: A CODE OF ETHICS FOR CONGRESSMEN

by SEN. PAUL DOUGLAS

"CONGRESSMEN WHO CHEAT"—WHAT SHOULD

On March 24, 1963, PARADE published an article by Jack Anderson on "Congressmen Who Cheat" — the small number of legislators who sell influence, misuse funds, pad payrolls. This focused the public spotlight on congressional ethics, and the uncomfortable legislators have never been able to back out of its glare. The scandals that followed have brought the issue to a head.

The original PARADE revelations kicked up a storm on the House floor. No less than a dozen members angrily leaped to their feet to deny the charges. Congressman Omar Burleson (D., Tex.), whose Committee on Administration is responsible for policing the House, challenged PARADE to "come before us in public hearing and reveal all or any part of the allegations in the article." But the congressman turned out to be not the least interested in errant congressmen, only in who had given information to PARADE. When Anderson offered to submit a statement documenting cases of misconduct, Burleson dismissed the meeting.

A statement PARADE had prepared for that session disclosed many incidents. One name that figured in the statement was that of Bobby Baker, and his role in the award of a $21 million contract to build Washington's new sports coliseum.

Philadelphia contractor Matt McCloskey, a Democratic party sugar daddy, came to see Baker about the contract in 1960. Baker arranged a meeting with Congressman John McMillan, (D., S.C.), chairman of the House District Committee. McMillan, as part of his political blessing, suggested that one Don Reynolds write the insurance.

That's precisely how the deal turned out according to testimony before a House committee. McCloskey won the contract. Reynolds wrote the performance bond. Baker allegedly got $4000.

Later, the Washington Post reported McMillan received a $5100 Cadillac from Reynolds. After the disclosure, McMillan sent Reynolds two checks for $5100.

The Senate was no more eager to investigate its members than the House had been. Baker's closest friends, constant associates, counselors and confessors were senators. The Senate sent investigators into 32 states in the Baker case, interviewed 200 witnesses, took sworn testimony from 60. But not a single senator was questioned.

In both Houses, however, there have been attempts to police legislative ethics. Not long after the PARADE article, for instance, the Senate established a Special Committee on Standards and Conduct, to look into charges against members. The House restricted per diem allowances and expenses members could draw while traveling abroad. A number of senators — led by Senator Douglas, Sen. Clifford Case (R., N.J.), Sen. Hugh Scott (R., Pa.) and Majority Leader Mike Mansfield—have risen in the Senate to disclose voluntarily all their income and holdings.

In the House, Rep. James Scheuer (D., N.Y.) arose to announce he was refusing to vote on an issue in which he had a personal interest.

The Baker scandal also triggered proposed legislation that would require congressmen to file a record of holdings, to show possible conflict of interests and would require governmental departments to keep complete public records of contacts made by congressmen in behalf of constituents.

In the Senate last year, however, an attempt to pass a disclosure statute was pigeonholed after Sen. Everett Dirksen (R., Ill.) complained it made him a "second-class citizen." In the House, the bill was hooted down without a vote.

There are before the Congress now similar bills that would require disclosure of congressional income and restrict campaign donations. A bill backed by the President would require that all outside income and gifts to a congressman or member of his family worth more than $100 be disclosed.

These bills are not given much chance of passage. But, as Senator Douglas points out in his article, the need for such legislation is great. Congressmen who cheat, as PARADE's article said, must be stopped from giving a black eye to their honest colleagues. And American citizens have a right to legislators whom they can trust.

I believe that the time has come for Congress to act to reform the antiquated laws on campaign contributions and political expenses and to provide for the disclosure of the income, assets and the holdings of its members.

Congress has been dilatory in these matters. We have fooled around long enough. The failure to act could jeopardize the public confidence in the legislative branch of the government.

There are already a series of bills before Congress, including President Johnson's proposals, which could go a long way to solve the problems we face.

But year after year Congress fails to act. One year, the Senate passes a bill but the House fails to act. The next Congress, the House acts but the Senate does not. For a variety of reasons, nothing of consequence gets done.

Basically, there are two problems: Members of the Senate and House have great power and influence over a variety of favors, privileges or benefits that selfish interests desire — Defense Department contracts, insurance for a bank or savings and loan company, a quota for an oil refinery, agricultural allotment arrangements, sugar quotas at highly subsidized prices, tax favors, appointments to important positions and influence over hundreds of bills and resolutions that Congress routinely passes.

The other problem is the tremendous amount of money that a candidate needs to run a modern political campaign. It has been estimated that in the New York City mayoralty campaign last year at least $5 million was spent. In the recent senatorial campaign in that state, the expenditure for each candidate has been estimated at over $3 million. In my own state of Illinois, a recent candidate for statewide office said that he spent a million dollars before the final campaign; certainly he must have spent at least that much when the campaign really got underway. In a major two-party state, under modern campaign conditions — especially with the importance and extremely high cost of television and radio time — a bare minimum of $500,000 would be needed to run even a modest campaign.

MISTAKES & TEMPTATIONS

I advocate disclosure not because I think that members of the House and Senate are dishonest or corrupt. On the contrary, I believe that the level of honesty is a good deal higher than the general level in our society. But the fact is that these men have more opportunities for mistakes and more temptations thrown their way in a month or year than the average person does in a lifetime. If congressmen and senators acted as most of those in private business do, many would be pilloried in the press and driven out of public life. So it is not because of lack of integrity on the part of my colleagues as a group that I advocate both disclosure and reform of campaign contributions, but rather as a protection for these men whose power and position make them especially vulnerable to the ambitious, the self-seekers and the narrow interest groups.

One of the reasons Congress has failed to act vigorously in these areas is that each member of Congress knows from personal experience the pressures of running even a modest campaign. He therefore tends to be a good deal more tolerant and considerate of his colleagues for fear that "there, but for the Grace of God, go I." And, in addition, as men who deal daily in their publi lives with the tremendous problems and difficulties of human beings, legislators are far more compassionate than those in administrative and judicial positions.

Nonetheless, Congress has great problems that we must do something about. Let me give some examples. One man I know, who was literally without funds near the end of his campaign for the Senate, was asked if he could use $10,000. His reply was, "Can I use $10,000?!" But strings were attached. He could have the $10,000 if he agreed to support one of the most flagrant of the tax loopholes. The candidate said that he had not studied this provision, but he could not agree to take the money on condition that he vote in a particular way. Eventually the $10,000 was raised elsewhere, and the candidate received it with no strings attached.

DOZENS OF GIFTS

Shortly after I was first elected, my wife and I received dozens of gifts, some quite valuable. These came from people whom we scarcely knew and from people we had not known at all. We packed them up and shipped them back.

I remember in a major debate on the steel basing point price system, I was taking a position essentially against the steel industry when it crossed my mind that I owned a few steel shares and that if the fight were successful my own shares would decline in value. This did not deter me, but the mere fact that I thought about it warned me, and I sold the shares and since have put what small holdings I have into mutual funds where no legislation could affect the value.

On numerous occasions people have offered campaign contributions while making a request for a job, privilege or favor. My policy is to return these and to make certain that campaign contributions are insulated from me so that I will not be influenced either consciously or subconsciously. But these are precisely the reasons why we need to have disclosure legislation.

The expenses of holding office are not commonly understood. Last year I spent over $10,000 buying lunches for constituents, holding receptions for Illinois visitors, going back and forth to Illinois, for weekly television and radio reports to the citizens of my state, for political contributions and for telephone and telegraph expenses beyond the allowances given a senator. This year I will probably spend more. Tremendous demands are made on the public official, and if he doesn't pick up the check, people will properly complain that he is a "freeloader." And, frankly, I regard contributions to my political party and to candidates in whom I believe as much a civic duty as contributions to church and charity.

I believe that the full disclosure of a senator's income and assets is the best possible insurance to the people that he is not engaging in conflicts of interest. I believe that the people who elect us at least have a right to know about our income and holdings as well as expenses. For this reason, first as an alderman in Chicago and more recently as a senator, I have made a public disclosure of income, assets and expenses of myself and my wife. Also for this reason I have a rule for myself and my staff of returning any gift the value of which exceeds the arbitrary figure of $2.50.

What is the solution to these problems of requiring personal financial disclosure? The best solution would be for all citizens to take their civic duty seriously and contribute a few dollars to their party and its candidates. This would adequately finance campaigns and leave no candidate indebted to anyone. But this obviously does not happen and will not happen.

The system that has grown up recently of having dinners where a guest gets a $5 dinner for $50 or $100 is a great improvement as a campaign fundraising device. No officeholder can feel that anyone can influence him for amounts as relatively small as this. Even the larger sums from the trade unions represent the dimes and dollars of ordinary working men and women. It is much healthier to have a large number of people giving $50 and $100 than a handful giving $5000, $10,000 or $15,000 apiece. People who give large amounts expect, and generally get, favors in return. And in the end, the public pays for these contributions because the cost is absorbed in the defense contract or deposit insurance or the sugar quota received in return.

FLAT FEE PER VOTER

In my judgment, the best solution is that put forward more than a half-century ago by Theodore Roosevelt and more recently by the late Sen. Richard Neuberger of Oregon. They believed the best method of financing campaigns was for the federal treasury to pay to the major candidates for federal office a flat fee such as 10¢ per prospective voter. Campaign expenditures would be limited to these amounts. In this way, campaigns would be adequately financed, candidates freed of any obligation and the public protected.

Some may say that with the present level of taxes and of government expenditures this would be just another unnecessary expense. But the fact is that under our present system the public generally pays anyway. This proposal is a better method of doing it.

For all these reasons some proposals should be enacted into law by the Congress. The problems can no longer be swept under the rug. ■

BRINGING UP BABY®, Hints Collected by Mrs. Dan Gerber, Mother of Five

Cool thoughts for warm tots

Great time, summertime. But scorcher days do call for tips on how to keep your cherub cool.

• Try not to let baby sit, creep or run too much in the sun. On scorcher days, it's wise to stick to shady, draft-free play spots.

• Sunsuit or diaper will suffice on most days. On real sizzlers, baby will be more comfy with a Gerber cotton shirt to absorb perspiration.

• A kiddy wading pool, or even a pan of water and a cup to dip and pour with, is fun and refreshing. Baby, of course, should be carefully watched.

More refresher courses

Heat has a way of working up a baby's thirst. Among the truly happy quenchers are Gerber Strained Fruit Juices. Fruit-bright, yet delicate, they also provide vitamin C. That's an important factor in maintaining sound gums and other body tissues. One can of any variety will give your baby over 100% of the recommended daily allowance.

Besides the pleasant and popular orange and apple juices, Gerber offers a wide variety of delightful combination juices.

JUICE OF THE MONTH

Have you treated baby to the new Gerber Strained Orange-Apple-Banana Juice? Subtle, smile-provoking, downright delicious.

Indoor cooling systems

• If you shade baby's room against strong morning sunlight, he'll be cooler during his afternoon nap.

P.S. A snack of a cooling Gerber Juice is great for curing post-nap blues.

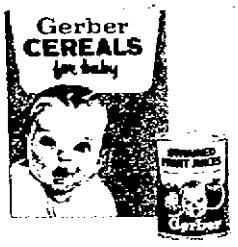

• Occasional tepid baths are welcome cooler-offers. (With a bit of baking soda to help curb prickly heat.) Brushing hair away from nape of neck also helps keep baby cool.

Dan Gerber footnote

"It may interest you to know that before oranges are picked for Gerber Juices, they are specially tested for sugar and acid content. When the sugar/acid ratio is just right, the flavor is at its peak; the vitamin-C content at its highest."

Note: Gerber prepares over 100 baby foods—infant formulas, cereals, strained and junior foods. Comfortable, durable babywear, too. We're proud to say:

The catfish that got away was probably a lot smaller than this 46-pounder.

OLD SHOVELFACE

AS AMERICAN AS APPLE PIE, THIS FISH REALLY CAUGHT ON

by ROBERT DEINDORFER

Arrangements to lease 500,000 acres of backland near Alexandria, La., for military maneuvers some time ago proceeded without incident—until a U.S. government agent approached a certain landowner for permission.

All of a sudden it wasn't a matter of money, or duration, or even any shell holes that might affect the future value of the land. As the property owner explained the situation to leasing agent Clarence B. Lent, it was much more serious than that—at least to him.

"In Kisatchie Bayou, which runs through a corner of my land, there's a catfish weighing over 30 pounds," he told Lent. "The hole in which he stays has got to be put off-limits. When that catfish is caught I expect to be on the other end of the line."

The farmer's concern helps prove a point few people would challenge: Old Shovelface is pretty special in America.

In bayous and ponds, rivers and lakes, anglers by the millions fish for the catfish and its kid brother, the bullhead, with rod and reel, cane poles, trotlines, jugs, hayhooks and sometimes nothing more than their own bare hands. They use everything from soap to green apples as bait, and they land whoppers up to 100 pounds without making headlines.

Whatever groceries they feed on, the catfish is a succulent, sweet-tasting fellow. In cities like Memphis, for example, fresh channel cat frequently bring a higher price than trout. And smalltown cafes beyond number confine their seafood strictly to catfish.

Few, if any, freshwater fish have a more unusual appearance. Bony plates armor the cat's thick, white-bellied, forktailed body and long, stringy whiskers, weak little eyes and a great crater of a mouth ornament its flat head. On seeing his first catfish a writer for the English humor magazine Punch commented that it seemed to be something more than a fish.

The Englishman put his finger on a blunt truth. The catfish is indeed something more than a fish. It's a gamester, a gargoyle, a meal, a stew, a nickname and even a political platform, not to mention an abiding part of our national folklore.

While few parents ever christen their new-born "Old Shovelface," it isn't long before hundreds of kids start answering to the nickname "Catfish." Among a host of sports celebrities who rejoice in the name are Georgia's old All-American end W. W. Smith, the Minnesota Twins' World Series pitching hero Jim Grant and umpire Bill Klem.

Then there is Catfish Row of the musical comedy Porgy and Bess and any number of actual ponds, streams, streets, neighborhoods, parks and often entire small townships that bear the name.

Throughout the Mississippi River basin practicing politicians regard the catfish as an important ally. Skinned and cleaned, dipped in flour and corn meal, sputtering in a pan of deep fat, the cat contributes to the election of innumerable sheriffs, mayors, state legislators and congressmen. And certainly a plate of fried catfish can taste suspiciously like good government.

The folklore concerning catfish is abundant, and many legends have at least an edge of truth to them.

ANOTHER DRACULA?

In rural cabins along the Alabama waterways, for example, some people believe that Old Shovelface walks the shore by night in search of chickens, rodents or even small babies to feed on. An old school friend of mine swore he watched a big cat swallow a dead squirrel on the bank of a Missouri river.

The fact is, America's 25 types of cat are definitely not ambulatory. But ichthyologists do claim that certain foreign species, among them an eel-shaped African catfish, have been known to crawl on dry land, using the rough surface of their pelvic fins to locomote.

The American legends of lunkers coming ashore for a fresh chicken probably grew out of the catfish's appetite, which happens to be downright prodigious. Old Shovelface feeds on literally everything down near the bottom, in fresh or brackish water, both day and night. In the Missouri Ozarks anglers bait their hooks with worms, nightcrawlers, cheese, apples, liver, corn, crawfish, frogs, clams, beef, field mice, grubs, sour potatoes or grapes.

"Just for the fun of it I put a fresh cherry on my hook, and guess what?" Carl Parker of St. Louis recalls—"I had myself four pounds of cat."

Out of professional curiosity the Iowa State Conservation Department inventoried the contents of some large cat during a postmortem several years ago. They found rags, newspapers, rubber heels, scraps of wood, burlap and even, in one vast Mississippi River oldtimer, a pair of ice tongs.

Fishing techniques vary as widely as the cat's diet. In states whose game laws allow it, addicts bait hooks with soap, tie the lines to gallon jugs and float them on a pond. When a jug gets to jiggling, they row over and pull up a fish.

Slim Alderson of Crabb, Tex., who used to support a family of nine by selling fresh-caught cat every week, managed to take two bull cats totaling 150 pounds on a heavy handline.

In northwest Arkansas frugal sportsmen see no reason to bother with bait at all. And in rural areas of Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi, grabblers go right down into rivers and ponds during the spring nesting season and pull 20- and 30-pounders out of spawning beds with their bare hands.

These and other novelty methods notwithstanding, the sport still packs a thrill for an angler using the traditional rod and reel.

Roy Groves of South Dakota got a special taste of catfishing kicks one memorable day in 1949. Fishing Dakota's James River, Groves strung a minnow on the hook and cast out his nylon line. All of a sudden the rod thumped in his hand, and line went winding off the reel. After five wearing minutes, Groves had the feeling that this was by far the biggest fish he had ever hooked. At the end of a long, arm-sore battle, he landed a catfish almost five feet long, 94½ pounds.

Yet despite the record books, it wasn't actually the biggest—not if you put any faith in fish stories.

FISH STORIES

Oldtimers in Georgia still talk of a 148-pounder, while two men in lower Illinois claim they seined a 195-pounder out of the Mississippi. The European catfish, or wels, has weighed in at more than 200 pounds. And a Georgia newspaperman writing over 50 years ago acknowledged the rumor that two night fishermen landed a great catfish of just under 150 pounds.

But according to eyewitnesses who insist they were there, nothing can quite match one overgrown cat that perished near the small town of Morrison, Mo., long ago. Early one morning a farmer walked down to inspect a heavy trotline he'd baited with a rancid ham the night before. As he stood there the line moved slowly back and forth, an awesome side of a fish showing in the water. Even with the assistance of three neighbors, it took two hours before a final heave on the line brought a 315-pound catfish heaving into the shallows.

It's little wonder that the cat has an impact all out of proportion to just another breed of fish. Along with everything else, it suits America's chronic sense of bigness.

But perhaps the most resounding tribute to Old Shovelface came about when several Texas colleges were wooing a prize high school basketball prospect named John Reynolds of Possum Walk. Wherever he went coaches and college officials proudly showed off the campus, the gymnasium, the fraternity houses and dormitories, and at least a few of them suggested he wouldn't have to worry much about spending money if he chose their school.

On the basis of a bit of enterprising personal research, however, assistant coach Shelby Metcalf of Texas A & M didn't even give Reynolds a sightsee of the campus when it came his turn. Instead, he packed him off to the nearby Brazos River, where the two of them caught a mess of channel catfish, which they cleaned and iced.

"I like your river," Reynolds told Metcalf later. "I believe I'll go to school here."

by Jackie Kahane

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jackie Kahane, born and raised in Montreal, is a delightful, glib leprechaun who's played most of the top nite spots in America for the past 15 years. Married, father of two daughters, a resident of New York, Jackie writes most of his own material, which he describes as "fresh, semiliterate, contemporary and clean, clean, clean." A small, energetic crew-cutted dynamo, Jackie says, "I eat, drink, breathe, talk, sing and live comedy, which is true of most comedians. The big difference with me, however, is that I not only think funny, I also think clean." Of late Kahane has been touring with singer Wayne Newton, playing the Flamingo in Las Vegas and Harrah's in Lake Tahoe, drawing great yaks with such jokes as these:

A woman entered a plane with a newborn infant in her arms. A drunk sat down next to her. He took one look at the baby and said, "Ma'am, I've never seen anything more repulsive in my life. Your baby is the ugliest thing I've ever set eyes on."

The mother, livid with rage, rang for the stewardess. "Miss," she said, "I've never been so insulted in my life. Either you get this obnoxious wretch away from me, or I'll sue the airline for every penny it has."

Diplomatically the stewardess led the drunk to another seat in the rear of the plane. Then she rushed back to the lady passenger. "I'm terribly sorry this had to happen," she explained. "Now you just relax. I'll bring you a hot cup of coffee and I'll dig up a banana for your monkey."

---

A little boy asked his father, "Daddy, where do I come from?" His father went on at great length about the birds and the bees. After 10 minutes of this dissertation, the youngster said, "Daddy! I can't understand why you're taking so long to answer such a simple question. Billy next door tells me he comes from Detroit. Where do I come from?"

---

It was on the second day of their honeymoon. The tired groom, weary but determined, shuffled from bedroom to kitchen. He prepared a sumptuous breakfast for his bride, carried it up on a tray, set it down on their bed. His young wife was overwhelmed by this display of consideration.

"Darling!" she said. "You're the most wonderful husband any girl could ask for. The tray is so pretty, and the food looks so yummy."

"Then you've seen what I've done?" the husband asked.

"Of course," said the bride. "Every little detail. Why?"

"Because," snapped the groom, "this is exactly how I want my breakfast served every morning from now on."

---

Two drunks followed a funeral procession all the way to the cemetery and took positions among the mourners. The minister closed his eulogy with, "As dust we come and as dust we go. As the Lord giveth, so the Lord taketh." The drunk turned to his ossified friend and said, "Well, you can't be fairer than that."

---

A beggar approached a back porch. "Madame," he said to the woman who answered his knock, "I'm awful hungry." Said the woman, "Would you mind too much having yesterday's soup?" The hobo said, "Not at all. That would suit me fine."

"Great!" said the woman. "You come back here tomorrow."

---

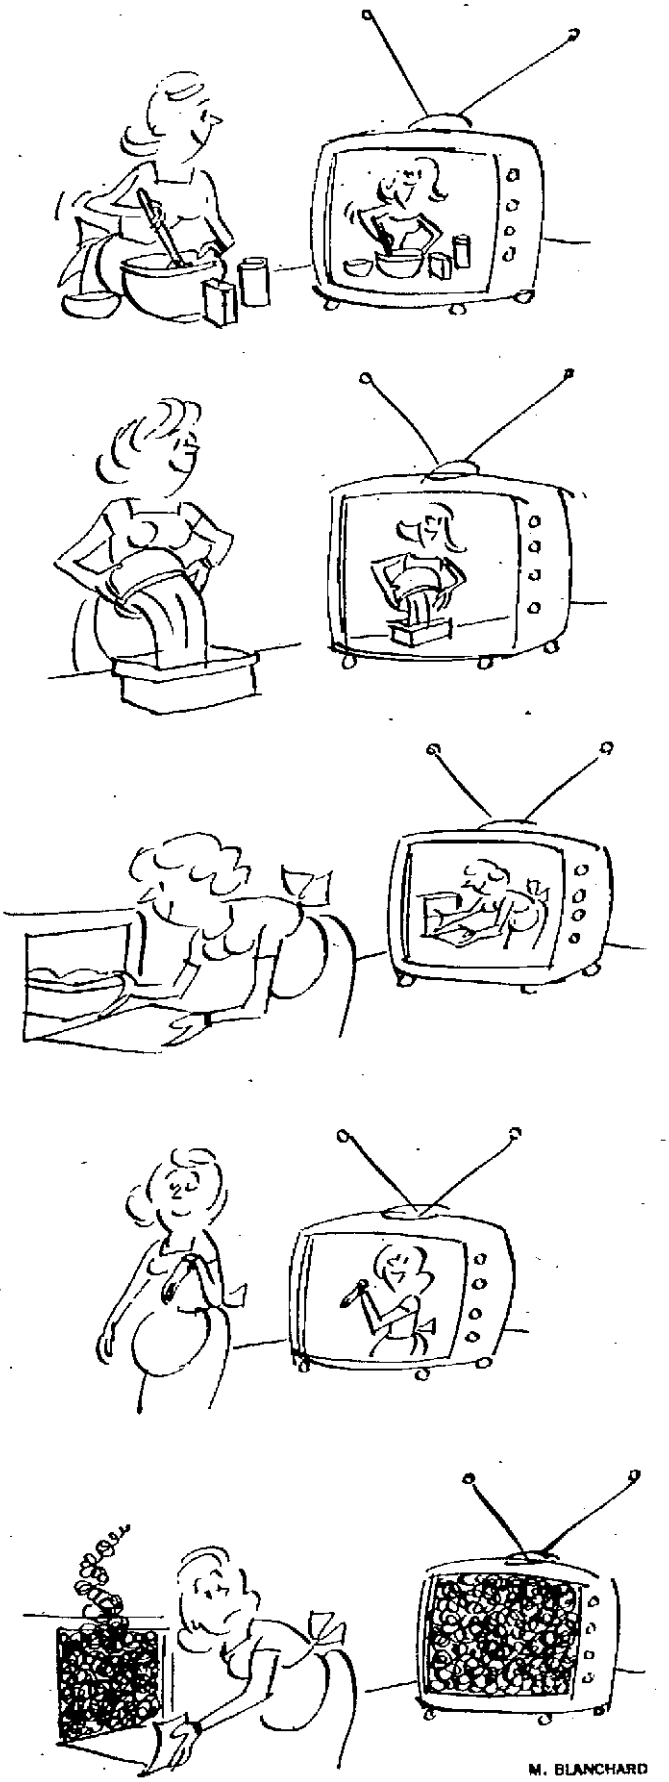

Two mother kangaroos were gossiping one afternoon. Cracked the first mother kangaroo to the second: "I sure hope it doesn't rain. I just can't stand that kid inside all day."

THE WORLD'S SMARTEST CAT

by LLOYD SHEARER

Six-year-old Siamese, Syn Cat, earns $1000 a week. Blue-eyed Syn was born in Ontario, Calif., and his fact sheet reads—height: six and one-eighth inches; weight: nine pounds, two ounces; length: 20 inches without tail, 30 inches with.

Owner Al Koehler found Syn at a pound, says the cat is the "smartest, most emotionally stable cat in the world," would like to find a Mrs. Syn.

HOLLYWOOD.

Any idea how many cats are born in this country each year? An estimated 50 million compared to an estimated 32 million dogs.

A dog may be man's best friend, as Sen. George West of Missouri claimed in 1876, but a cat is definitely America's number-one family pet. For every dog in a U.S. family, there are now 1.9 cats.

This information may reach you as a surprise, but to Walt Disney, the boy who never grew up, these statistics are old hat. A past master at bringing out the best in animals, Walt for years has been trying to elevate a cat to screen stardom. And now he's done it.

He's taken a 6-year-old Siamese, named him Syn Cat "because he synchronizes so well with everything," has starred him in two top money-making films, Incredible Journey and That Darn Cat.

In contrast to human beings who become screen stars, Syn Cat refuses to let success corrupt him. He remains so unspoiled, so modest and cooperative that Disney has ordered his story department to come up with a third vehicle for the feline. But good "cat scripts" aren't too easy to find these days.

That's Al Koehler's major worry. Koehler, 51, originally from Freeport, Ill., is a veteran animal trainer who three years ago bought Syn Cat for $2 from the Chafee Humane Association Pound in Ontario, Calif. "I am convinced," Koehler declares, "that Syn Cat is the smartest, most sociable, most emotionally stable cat in the world. And I want him to work while he's still in the prime of life. A cat like Syn comes along once or twice in a century, and I don't want to sound commercial, but if we're ever going to have a TV series in this country starring a cat, I think Syn Cat is the only one with the intelligence and know-how to fit that bill.

"I've been in the animal training business ever since I was 14," he declares. "I've had many animals in many films. But Syn is something special. This cat can almost reason."

"IN BUSINESS FOR HIMSELF"

Most cats are unintelligent compared to dogs. They show no sense of responsibility or eagerness to learn. Most of them are crafty, predatory, emotionally unstable, selfish, anarchistic, or as animal trainers put it, "A cat is generally in business for himself."

There are exceptions, of course, but these are so few as to make a cat capable of taking film direction a great rarity. Cats frighten easily, particularly in strange circumstances and surroundings, and only those with calm temperaments can be used for film work.

Syn Cat is the rare one who doesn't bolt and run at the sound of a gun or the honking of a horn or the scream of an actress. Stroked tenderly, given a bit of food as a reward for a good performance, he will hold still no matter what the action around him.

In training Syn Cat, Al Koehler sharply conditioned the animal's response to a bell. Cats boast a remarkable sense of hearing, and in Syn Cat's case this auditory sensitivity is outstanding. Figuratively he can hear a pin drop.

When a film gets underway, and a director wants Syn Cat to follow a designated course of action such as jumping from a ladder to a ledge and then down to a trash can, a miniature speaker is taped out of camera range to the ledge and another to the trash can. Syn Cat is placed on the ladder at the start of a sequence. The ledge bell is then rung, and Syn Cat jumps to the ledge in search of the sound. The trash can bell is next sounded, and Syn Cat leaps to the ground, rushes to the trash can searching for the bell lure.

"What I did with Syn Cat," explains Al Koehler, "is this: I taught him to stay, to lead, to run, climb, jump and walk not only by command but also by ringing bells in sequence. Then when a picture like That Darn Cat began, I recorded the sound of ringing bells on tape and hid miniature speakers in strategic spots. For example, when I wanted Syn to enter a room, I would reproduce the sound of a bell ringing just inside the door, and Syn would follow the sound with no trouble. And of course, I always rewarded him with a tidbit of food after each action to make it worth his while."

Training a cat is a tiring, painstaking job. Teaching him his name, how to follow his master in fast or slow time, how to obey commands—all this takes time, patience, effort, talent and love. Before Koehler puts Syn Cat in a film, he reads the script most carefully, rehearses the animal, accustoms him to particular noises such as automobile backfires, police sirens, door knocks.

When Syn Cat—he is insured for $2000, the maximum insurance accorded cats—reports for work, Koehler receives $1000 per week for his services. Syn Cat earned approximately $32,000 for his job in Incredible Journey, most of which was filmed in the Canadian northwest, and $10,000 for his stint in That Darn Cat.

Koehler would like to mate him, "providing we can find a Siamese with the same kind of calm, easygoing, pleasant temperament, a gal who's real friendly-like. But that isn't easy."

When Syn Cat isn't working, he lives in his own eight-foot pen behind Koehler's house. The pen is equipped with a 10-foot tree and a snazzy bed box, but Syn spends most of his days roaming inside the Koehler household. He's liked the house ever since Koehler brought him there from the animal shelter three years ago.

SYN MEETS KOEHLER

His previous owner was an unidentified lady in her 60's who tearfully gave him up to the shelter with the explanation that she had to move and cats were forbidden in the apartment house she was moving to. An hour after this lady turned Syn Cat in, a friend of Al Koehler's at the shelter phoned and told him about "a real sharp cat."

"I came down," Koehler recalls, "and they were kind enough to let me test the animal for temperament and reaction. He was very friendly, he didn't frighten easily, so I figured, 'For two bucks, what've I got to lose?' Needless to say, it's the best investment I ever made. Siamese cats on the average live 12, 14 years, which means Syn is ready for at least five more years of good hard work. Matter of fact, he loves to work, and in front of the cameras he's a real ham. All we need now is for a producer to come up with a good cat script. I don't want Syn applying for unemployment insurance."

Hayley Mills and Dean Jones costar in That Darn Cat, but vying for top billing is Syn Cat. Owner Koehler trained him for film by conditioning him to sound of bell.

PARADE'S SPECIAL INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF LARGE MAIL VOLUME, PARADE CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES.

HOLIDAYS FOR WIVES. Every employed person in Norway is entitled to four weeks' holiday each year with pay. That's the law. And happily enough, it applies to housewives. They, too, are entitled to four weeks of vacation. It's all part of Norway's Holiday Act, which established the Housewives Holiday Fund. Here's how it works: Suppose a Norwegian housewife wants to get away from it all for a few weeks. Who will look after her children and household? The answer: the Housewives Relief, an organization that consists of well-trained women, specialists in child care and household management. Practically all communities in Norway are blessed with a branch of the Housewives Relief, financed by the local authorities. When a housewife gets fed up, she phones the Relief, applies for her state-guaranteed vacation, and the state provides an acceptable substitute.

MARRYING AMERICANS. In 1940 approximately 12% of all American women 30 to 34 years old were single. In 1960 only 6.9% were single. In 1966 an estimated 5% of women in that age bracket are single -- proving irrefutably that more girls at an earlier age are learning how to snare a husband.

NEW SUPER MISSILE. A new intercontinental ballistic missile (ICM) -- standing for Increased Capability Missile -- is being developed in this country. Its objective: to penetrate any existing or future enemy defense system. The missile will probably be equipped with a multiple warhead. This will divide into a number of smaller, independent missiles, each targeted into another area under individual guidance systems designed to avoid the most sophisticated radar tracking devices. Soviet Russia, which now possesses almost 300 ICBM's and fewer than 100 submarine-launched missiles, hopes to develop by 1970 a ballistic force capable of killing 120 million Americans. The U.S. nuclear kill-probability at this time is already double that figure. In any future U.S.-Russia nuclear war, the only victor will be death.

RATS & INDIA. A rat in India consumes five kilos of grain a year; 2.4 billion rats consume 12 million tons of grain, or the equivalent of all the aid in wheat being sent to famine-ridden India in 1966. These statistics have prompted the Indian government to renew its efforts to exterminate rats. But the results so far have been disappointing. The government is meeting with the indifference if not the hostility of 350 million Hindus, who push their respect for animal life to the absurd. The Hindus find it just as intolerable to exterminate a rat as to crush an ant. At Rajasthan, rats even have a temple to which the faithful bring bowls of rice every day, being careful not to get their toes bitten. The Hindus generate the same attitude toward monkeys, vultures and especially cows. At the last census there were 176 million cows in India, almost all of them reduced to unproductive skeletons wandering freely in the streets. Last week the city of New Delhi made efforts to organize a troop of "cowboys" to round up the wandering cows in the city -- but no gassing for these sacred animals. In India cows die in their own good time or in traffic accidents, which they frequently provoke. To remedy this social ill, the Indian government tried methods of contraception for cows, but with no better results than those in birth control for the human animal. In India, good year or bad year, the rate of increase of the human and cow population is at least 2%.

VACATIONLAND YUGOSLAVIA. The new Riviera of Europe is Yugoslavia's Dalmatian Coast. Last year 2.6 million tourists, including Sophia Loren, Frank Sinatra, Kirk Douglas, Gene Kelly and Doris Day, spent $100 million in hard cash in Tito-land. This year the Communist hosts plan to take in at least one-third more. Tourists and visitors from neutral Austria and Sweden as well as from NATO members Italy, Norway and Denmark may now enter the country without visas. But the expansion of the tourist trade has run into some practical problems. There are not enough suitable accommodations. According to the Belgrade tourist office, between now and 1970 Yugoslavia will need to provide at least 250,000 new hotel beds. The state can provide only 120,000 at the most -- and the gap of 130,000 will have to be filled by foreign and domestic capitalists. In 1963 Tito's government made small-scale capitalism possible. Private entrepreneurs received tax rebates and were allowed to employ up to five people. The result was a boom in handiworks and guest innkeeping. More than 4000 pensions and lodging houses were opened. In Zagreb alone, where the state has built only one new hotel in 20 years, 240 of these innkeepers set up shop. But when these petty capitalists earned too much, the state stepped in to filter off their profits in taxes.

BERT'S EYE VIEW

'Big Valley' Star Protests Bedroom Scenes

By BERT RESNIK
TV and Radio Editor

PETER BRECK, one of the regular stars of ABC-TV's "The Big Valley," was angry. "We are heading," he roared "in the direction of 'Peyton Place Goes West' and I don't like that.

"We've got to start cutting them off at the pass instead of running them into the bedroom.

"If you're going to be a western, be a western."

In "The Big Valley," a western, Breck has the role of Nick Barkley, who runs the ranch. As Breck sees it, Nick is a hot-head who many times is put in a spot where he has to rebel.

And Breck, off-screen, was rebelling.

The series, he felt, had been fine in the beginning. It was an hour of the great outdoors in color. The viewer could escape out into the open.

Then came sex..

"WE HAD TWO RAPE SHOWS," said Breck. "Rape stories belong in the 'Defenders' or 'East Side, West Side,' not a western.

"There's enough in the history of California that we could use rather than exploit the bedroom."

And it's a bedroom that has been exploited too many thimes on "The Big Valley," in Breck's opinion.

There was one drama about a drought which also had another story element about the Barkley girl being in a compromising position in a man's hotel room.

"How," wondered Breck, "can a love scene be bigger than a drought?"

But that's the way they wanted it."

There was a script scene in which three rancehrs bust in the front door of the Barkley ranch house.

"The kind of a guy Nick is, he wouldn't just stand there and take that," said Breck.

The script had him doing just that.

"THEN ONE of the men started making slanderous remarks about Nick's sister and a man in a hotel room. The kind of a guy Nick is, he couldn't take that either."

But the script had him doing just that. Breck told them to write it right or write him out. He was excused from the scene.

"I'm not going to prostitute Nick," said Breck. "People believe in him. They believe in him as much as I do. He's truth and life, not just a super-hero like 'Batman.'

"I believe in him and I'm not going to just read a script and pick up my check."

Breck knows what he wants. It's not more lead roles for Nick. It's not Nick carrying more shows.

When time came for negotiating the second season—"The Big Valley" will be back in the fall—Breck made his points.

Not more money. Not more publicity. Not more this and that.

"I just want scripts to be definite like Nick. If the situation is wrong, write him out."

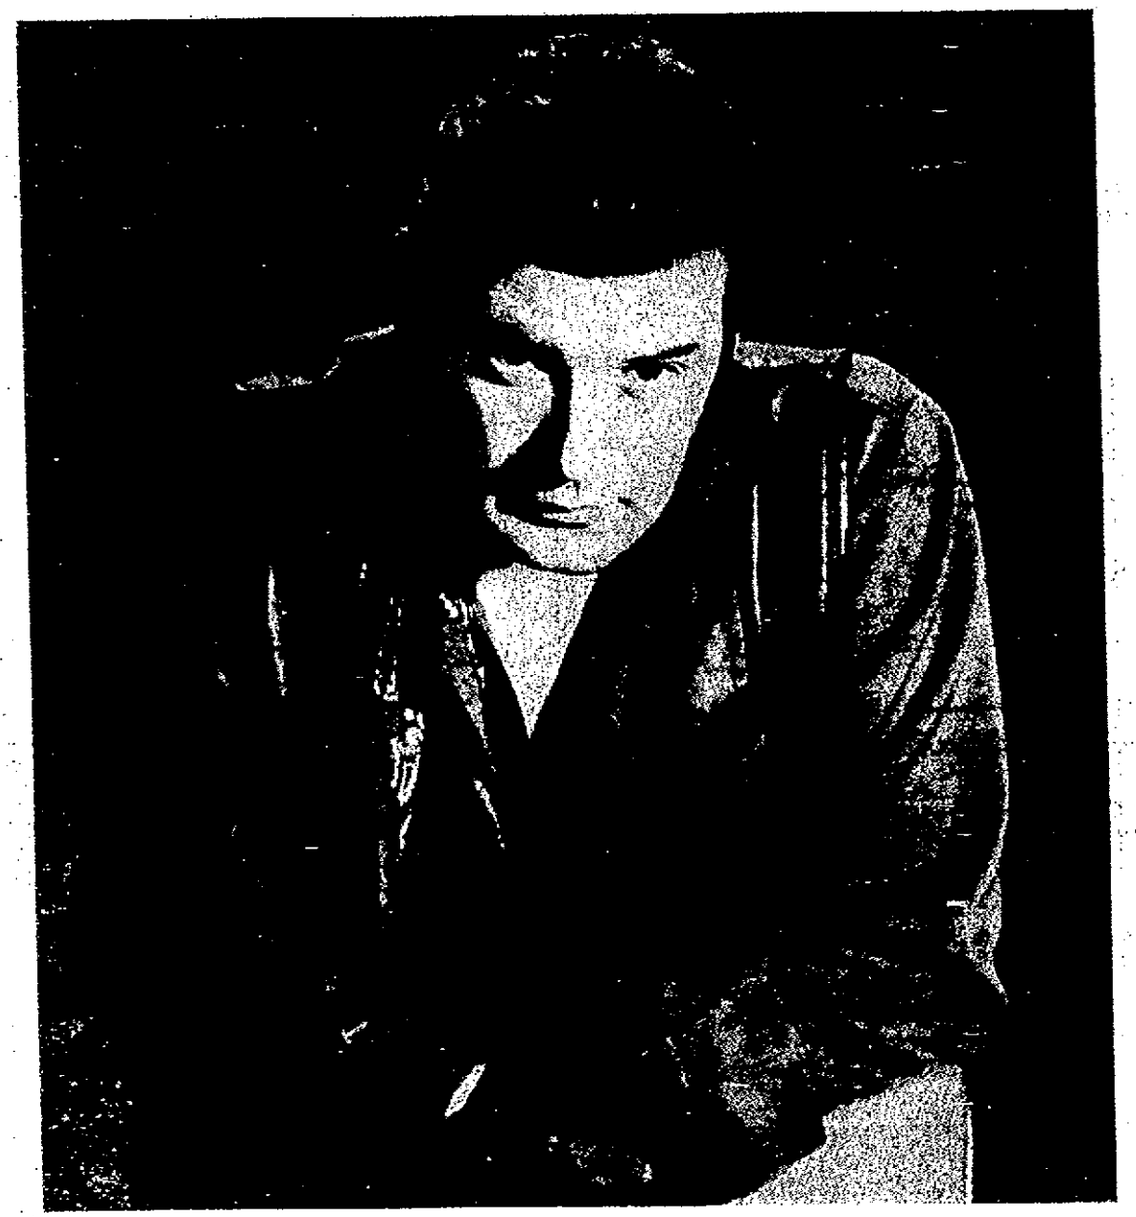

Breck hadn't yet seen any scripts for the second season. He was hopeful, though, that there would be fewer bedroom scenes.

And livingroom, too.

"There's not a bloody thing to do in the livingroom except stoke the fire and drink," he said.

If the second-season scripts don't return to the great outdors and don't have Nick really running the ranch like he's supposed to, Peter Breck doesn't plan to head for the bedroom.

"If it continues like 'Peyton Place Goes West,'" he said, "I'm going East."

'Father Knows Best' Daughter Mother of Three--and Hardly Seems Day Older

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—A nice thing happened at a party recently and since it involves a longtime friend of yours, maybe you'd like to hear about it.

The nice thing occurred in a modest little millionaires' hangout called the Bel Air Country Club, in a room about the size of the Rose Bowl. And the occasion was a get-together for the latest group of ABC-TV executives to be promoted to their inevitably short, happy reigns at the top. It is a little like fattening the bulls before letting them out into the ring. More than 200 of Hollywood's finest partygoers turned out to praise the brave bulls and get their ears, and hardly anybody could remember the names of their predecessors.

The scene was sheer democracy in action, for there are certain other country clubs that do not cotton to actors and their compatriots, Madison Avenue haircuts or no. Legend, in fact, has it that Victor Mature once tried to join one of these other clubs with the explanation: "I'm no actor, and I have 35 pictures to prove it."

WELL, IF YOU WANT to know the truth, Mature was a pretty darned good actor, as you'll notice by watching his old murder mysteries on television. But that's not the nice thing I started to tell you about.

The nice thing took place near the end of the party, when I was just about worn down by the mental indigestion and sheer social discomfort of all such occasions, and I was angry at myself for breaking my vow to avoid them.

I flopped into a chair to recuperate, and as I looked around the room I noticed our longtime friend, Elinor Donahue, who portrayed the teen-age daughter of Robert Young and Jane Wyatt in one of television's most successful series, "Father Knows Best." Miss Donahue was standing in a little group that included her distinguished-looking husband, Harry Ackerman, a top Hollywood television production executive.

I marvel at how Miss Donahue hardly seemed a day older and how natural, wholesome and friendly she appeared at this function so well populated by sharks.

* * *

I HAD SEEN HER in person only once before, and a long time ago. It was so long ago, in fact, that I didn't even own a television set at the time and had no idea who she was. I was bumming through Los Angeles on my way to South America, and some movie-connected relatives in Beverly Hills suggested that I sponge off them for a few days and taste the good life before heading back to thumbing and bus fares.

One beautiful afternoon, they took me to one of those beautiful daytime Beverly Hills parties, at a beautiful home with loads of beautiful people who wandered around a beautiful pool and a beautiful living room, almost as big as the Bel Air Country Club's.

A young lady and I struck up a conversation, and of course she was Miss Donahue. We had a pleasant talk, and later her agent asked me if I would please drive her home. I did, we said goodbye, and not until the party of the brave bulls did I see her again.

Anyway, I noticed her, and she happened to turn around, and smiled a smile of recognition. I wondered whether she was merely being polite, or whether she really could do such a nice thing as to remember somebody from so long ago. I went over, and was astounded as she remembered the details of that nice afternoon.

She told me she now had three children, and I told her I had a daughter, and I asked her how come she wasn't acting any more, and she said she no longer was interested in it, and we exchanged pleasantries and said goodbye. So that is the latest of your longtime friend. She has a fine memory. It was a nice thing.

There's New 'Shane' on Show Biz Horizon

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—They've dusted off George Stevens' classic movie western, "Shane," for next year's television season.

The wide screen 1953 epic starred the late Alan Ladd in the title role, Jean Arthur, Van Heflin and Brandon DeWilde as the boy.

At the time of its release one 13-year-old sat goggle-eyed in a theater enraptured by the heroics of the gunfighter Shane.

He was David Carradine, son of character actor John Carradine.

Now, 13 years later, Carradine finds himself in Shane's boots as the star of the television series for ABC.

At first glance, David is an unlikely Shane. Where Ladd was diminutive and silent, young Carradine is 6-foot, 2-inches tall and garrulous. He's fuzzy-cheeked in comparison with hard-bitten Shane as played by Ladd.

* * * *

BUT CARRADINE is nothing if not confident.

"I don't think I'm following a difficult act," he said a few days before reporting to work. "If the picture was a classic, I think the series will be more so.

"The show has a modern attitude despite being set in the 1870s. We'll have up-to-date situations in the old setting."

In the movie Shane was a loner, a gun-fighting saddle tramp who moved from town to town wherever someone was willing to pay for his talent with a six-gun.

A hired killer isn't exactly the stuff of which television heroes are made, but Carradine thinks otherwise.

"Five years ago it might have been impossible for us to do the series because we couldn't have sustained a heavy-hero," he explained. "But in this day of the anti-hero, Shane is essentially a villain acting like a hero.

* * * *

"IN THE SHOW he'll be sort of a professional gunman between engagements, if you know what I mean. He won't actually be seen as a hired gun, but you'll know that it's his profession."

Carradine's profession has been acting since he was 18. Four years ago he appeared with his father in "Hamlet," an experience that heightened his self-confidence.

David's biography, written by his former press agent, describes the lad as having "the virtue of patience, a heart of gold, filled with love, strong as an ox and as loyal as St. Peter."

Confronted with this printed praise, David blushed and said, "He's not my press agent any more."

Carradine only faintly resembles his famous father. He's bigger, stronger and more a western type than a Shakespearean. But you can see for yourself next October.

DAVID CARRADINE

What do you want on a musical program?

Please leave your pow, wham and zap out of the John Gary program. We haven't had such a treat in a long time.

I was fast turning off TV and listening to good records until I heard the Gary program. TV can surely use his beautiful voice and personality as they are, nothing added, please.

I really enjoy the commercials, also.

Mrs. L. M. Arnold, L. B.

I agree that Gary is good, but I had no idea his beautiful personality could brain-wash viewers into enjoying commercials.

* * * *

One of the best new TV shows is "Swingin' Country," featuring Rusty Draper with Molly Bee and Roy Clark. Draper looks a great deal like a young version of Will Rogers.

Unlike many "country music" shows, this one has no corn, but is breezy and entertaining. The music is good.

J. Paul Gleason, L. B.

A country music show without corn is like a Benny Goodman program without a clarinet.

Congratulations to the writers of "Never Too Young."

* * * *

I have watched "Never Too Young" and enjoyed it very much this past school year. It was the first serial for we teenagers. "Never Too Young" was about us and I'm sure all those who watched it are grateful to the writers for this.

At 4 o'clock we could take a break from our homework and watch it.

Dona Susterman, L. B.

Dona, if you look hard enough and long enough, I'll bet you can find some other program to use as a break from homework.

* * * *

This is a letter written in defense of "Peyton Place."

I say defense because of the condemnation it's received from some people because of being taken from the "awful and immoral" novel of the same name.

First of all, all the players in it (the TV series) are most talented.

Secondly, none of the younger set on it have either the hillbilly haircuts (dog collars, anyone?) or sheepdog bangs which are so common nowadays.

Mrs. C. Shallcross, L. B.

Excerpted Reviews on Recent TV Programs

Programs: "Showdown" and "Chain Letter," premiered last Monday on channel 4.

The television networks somehow didn't find July 4 worthy of much special attention, but NBC-TV did manage to use Independence Day for the debut of two game shows.

The two programs which arrived Monday are daytime entries, and they feature Joe Pyne as host of the half-hour "Showdown" and Jan Murray as emcee of the 30-minute "Chain Letter."

I guess Pyne rates first attention because one's initial response is: What in the world is he doing as host of a game show? In case you are not acquainted with Pyne's reputation, he is one of the most controversial of broadcasting's collection of almost-anything-goes talk show emcees.

Anyway, discounting the usual silliness of most of these game shows on television, the debut of "Showdown" had its moments chiefly because of the generally acerbic attitude of the aforementioned Pyne. His approach was precisely right in that his manner seemed to be saying, in effect, that he knew there was a lot of nonsense, but if somebody wanted to pay him a lot for doing this stuff, it was okay with him.

His program is, essentially, simply a straight question-and-answer affair with competing teams, and the level is just about what one would expect! Two women didn't know what monogamy meant, and another contestant thought that Mickey Rooney wrote "Little Women."

I personally found this charming, but I particularly liked Pyne's attitude toward a trio of pint-sized rock-and-roll youngsters he apparently was stuck with for occasional musical selections. At one point he told them to go back to their cage, and it was a pleasure to see an adult on television being disrespectful toward children.

Anyway, "Showdown" went along like that, establishing quickly that Pyne is actually the entire program because of his brusque, authoritiative, slightly amused put-down approach, which seems to be quite a bit milder than his attitude on his talk broadcasts. And a good thing too.

Jan Murray's "Chain Letter" is simply a game in which teams use the last letters of words in the same category to see who can come up with the longest list. Murray has done this sort of show before, and somehow he manages to continue to display enthusiasm, which is the sign of a professional, even if the program looks like the work of amateurs.

Critic Rick Du Brow of UPI

Any program with Jan Murray can't be all bad, but "Chain Letter" comes pretty close. "Mad" magazine should have a ball with this one.

On "Showdown," words gurgle out of Pyne's mouth like water over Niagara Falls. One wonders how a breath manages to force itself into his lungs. Nevertheless, Pyne does an apt job with a format that, if it doesn't improve, should shortly be renamed "Closedown."

Critic Bert Resnik of "Tele Vues"

Program: "Hippodrome," aired last Tuesday on channel 2.

A new comedy-variety-circus series taped in England by a partnership of American and British firms bowed in and it was one of our less exciting international alliances.

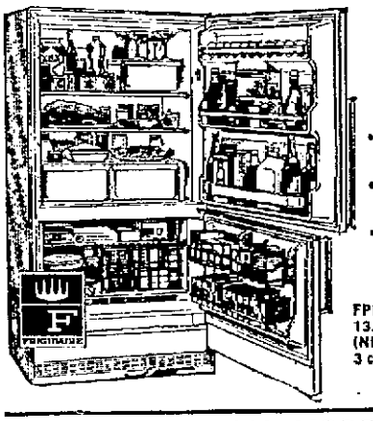

The one-hour program, beautiful to look at in color, replaces the Red Skelton show for the summer, and it is the comedian's firm that is partnered with a British company in the production.

The general format is that a different American entertainer is host each week to U.S. and British guest stars and top acts of European circuses. The premiere host was comedian Jack Carter.

HERE ARE 9 REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD BUY A HOOVER SPIN DRYING WASHER

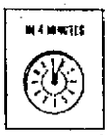

ROLLS ON LARGE CASTERS
Large easy rolling casters let the HOOVER move about with complete ease. Store it in one place . . . use it in another.

SAVES $5 ON DETERGENT
The washing action is so efficient it needs less detergent than any agitator or tumbler-type washer. It has a SUDS-SAVER, too!

FAMILY SIZE LOADS
2 Double Sheets plus pillow cases or 36 diapers, 10 men's shirts, 92% of capacity of most washers in use. Washes even the most delicate things.

NO OTHER WASHER IS SO FAST
The HOOVER washes a load of laundry in only four minutes. And gets clothes cleaner than automatics do in a full washing cycle.

TURBO-ACTION ENERGY DISK
The unique HOOVER energy disk, located on the back of the washer tub, actually surges water through the clothes. This remarkable wash action gets clothes really clean.

DRIES IN SECONDS
The clothes are spun at the amazing speed of 2500 RPM, which enables the washer to extract the water and suds in just seconds. No other unit can match the performance of the HOOVER.

SAVES $5 ON WATER
Uses only ½ the amount of water that most automatics use. Saves 100 gallons every 3 loads.

NO PLUMBING NECESSARY
Needs no plumbing, needs no installation. Just roll the HOOVER to any sink, slip on the hose and start washing. Pump empties washer automatically.

SERVICE Truly a do-it-yourself washer if servicing is ever needed, necessary. The back panel is removed by taking out only Bell replacement is a breeze. No special tool requirements two Phillips head screws.

Repeat Prize-Winning Artificial Kidney Documentary, 'Who Shall Live?', Today

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Awards and practical results for the best network documentary of the season, NBC-TV's "Who Shall Live?"—about artificial kidney machines—point up the opportunities for programs on little-understood subjects.

The one-hour broadcast, which will be repeated today (6:30 p.m. Sunday, channel 4), dealt powerfully and humanly with the lack of enough of these machines—despite their proven effectiveness—and the resultant huge cost to needy patients, and the death of those unable to "qualify" for the treatment.

"Who Shall Live?"—which draws its title primarily from the fact that other human beings must decide which of their fellow citizens have a chance to survive—tied for a first place award in the video category of the American Medical Association's annual medical journalism competition.

The broadcast also won recognition in the 1966 Ohio State awards competition conducted by the Institute for Education by Radio-Television of Ohio State University.

NOW COMES WORD from the National Dialysis Committee in North Bellmore, N.Y., concerning the program, which originally was seen Nov. 28, 1965, and was produced by Lucy Jarvis, previously known for such shows as "The Kremlin" and "The Louvre."

Enclosing excerpts from a congressional committee report submitted to the House of Representatives a while back by Rep. John E. Fogarty of Rhode Island, the National Dialysis Committee says in a letter:

"Frankly, we were inspired to further efforts because of Lucy Jarvis. The legislative presentation used as testimony on June 3, 1966, was a reflection of the more dynamic approach we are now able to assume towards those who will decide to provide more funds for treatment of kidney patients because Lucy Jarvis softened them up.

"Each new patient treated with the therapy of Dialysis on the artificial kidney will owe some portion of his life to the camera and cutting shears of Lucy Jarvis."

THE LEGISLATIVE presentation says in part, according to the excerpts:

"The committee has been greatly impressed by the rapid strides made during the past few years in the development of an artificial kidney and the techniques of hemodialysis by which impurities, normally removed from the blood by the kidneys, are removed externally.

"The necessary equipment, however, is still too complicated to operate and prohibitively costly to meet the widespread need.

"It is indeed distressing that probably as many as several thousand people will die this year who might have been saved if artificial kidney equipment were available in more than just the few centers in which this research is now being conducted . . .

"It is clear from tesimony of official and public witnesses and from personal observation on visits to artificial kidney research centers by members of the committee, that the engineering-development aspect of this work can, and must, be accelerated with a view to reducing the size, complexity and cost of the necessary equipment.

"FOR THIS PURPOSE, the committee has increased the estimate . . . for the artificial kidney program in the budget of the National Institute of Arthritis and Metabolic Diseases . . . the committee has been assured that this additional sum can be fruitfully applied to speed up work on this life-saving equipment."

Previously, NBC-TV had reported: "Following the telecast of 'Who Shall Live?', large numbers of viewers wrote to NBC News, to President Johnson and to their senators and representatives in Washington expressing their shocked and angry reactions to conditions revealed in the program.

"Mrs. Phyllis Miller of Vancouver, Wash., one of the kidney disease sufferers described on the program who could not afford treatment by the machine, received almost $30,000 in contributions from viewers around the country following the telecast."

In Louisiana, the New Orleans Touro Infirmary contracted to purchase the type of artificial kidney machine described in the program.

Dr. Ted Bloch, department of medicine chairman, reported that purchase approval came after the program was shown to the hospital's board of managers.

"That program is one of the finest medical films for lay people I've ever seen," he added.

'Teenage Revolution' a Winner

ABC News has been named the winner of the 1966 National School Bell Award for its hour-long documentary, "The Teenage Revolution," which was aired over the network last October.

The award, to ABC News and David L. Wolper Productions, was presented specifically for "Distinguished interpretation of education during the year ended April, 1966, in a single documentary program aired over a national television network."

"The Teenage Revolution" captured the increasing and more dominant role young people are playing in our society by examining the modern-day teenager through profiles of several youngsters.

Typing Education

Henry Morgan, sophisticate-at-large and panelist on "I've Got a Secret," is prone to say, regarding his education, that he "often attended public schools in New York City" and that it was there that he learned "touch typing and humility." Morgan says that he is currently spending much of his time planning to retire, "as soon as I can figure out from what."

Most Valuable Advice

By PETER BRECK

Starring in ABC-TV's (Channel 7) "The Big Valley"

Although I am regarded today as primarily a western actor—and I don't mind that at all—I actually started my career on the legitimate stage in Shakespeare and Shaw.

You can't get any better training than that and what I learned in those classic and demanding plays still serves me today . . . even in television performances that might depend more on action rather than dramatic dialogue.

When I finished a performance, I used to go to my dressing room and go over my performance. I analyzed it to see where I was right and where I was wrong. Some nights I didn't get to sleep trying to find that perfection I sought as a "pro."

One night a real old veteran in our troupe took me aside and said he had noticed me and was worried.

He said that nothing I could do would bring that performance back, that it was in the past.

"You're only as good as your last performance," he told me.

"But you've got to remember that performance is over—period. You can't bring it back . . . so forget about it."

Sure, you can learn from the past—but you should be thinking about the future. Tomorrow is more important than yesterday, but today—right now is more important than both of them. So I've learned never to look back. Look ahead because that's where the pitfalls are. The ones behind you are ancient history.

Julie Harris Set for Role of 'Anastasia'

New York Times Service

NEW YORK—Julie Harris has been signed to star in Guy Bolton's "Anastasia" on NBC-TV's "Hallmark Hall of Fame" series next season.

George Schaefer, the series' prize-winning producer, also disclosed that Hallmark had acquired the rights to Noel Coward's farce, "Blithe Spirit," for next season and had commissioned three original 90-minute plays by noted writers for televising either next season or the year after.

Hallmark, which has presented serious drama continuously over the last 16 years, will televise four new productions and one repeat program next season.

* * * *

IN ADDITION to "Anastasia" and "Blithe Spirit," Hallmark earlier had announced that it would present Sir James M. Barrie's "The Admirable Crichton" and Maxwell Anderson's "Barefoot in Athens," which will star Peter Ustinov in the role of Socrates. No decision has been reached yet on which program in the Hallmark series will be repeated.

Schaefer, who has been wtih Hallmark for 12 of its 16 years on television, said he has commissioned James Costigan, Jerome Ross and Joseph Liss to write original plays for the series.

* * * *

COSTIGAN, who is the author of one of television's classics, "Little Moon of Alban," has written "Love Among the Ruins," a sophisticated comedy set in England at the turn of the century.

Ross, a screenwriter, has written an as yet untitled psychological drama about the intertwining relationships between the first Duke of Marlborough, Sir Winston Churchill's famous ancestor, his wife, Sarah, and England's Queen Anne.

Miss Harris's appearance as Anastasia, the woman who claims she is the last surviving member of the Russian royal family, will be her ninth starring role for Hallmark.

She created the role of Brigid Mary in Costigan's 1958 TV production of "Little Moon of Alban," then appeared in the 1960 stage production and recreated the role for television in 1964.

'Noon Wine' for Jason Robards Jr.

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — ABC-TV has announced that Jason Robards Jr. and Gypsy Rose Lee have been signed to play leading roles in forthcoming television productions.

Robards will star in "ABC '67's" production of Katherine Anne Porter's short novel, "Noon Wine," the story of a Texas farmer's search for redemption after he kills a bounty-hunter who is after his Swedish farmhand. Miss Porter, who received both the National Book Award and the Pulitzer Prize for her works in 1965, published the novella in 1937 and it was later included in "Pale Horse, Pale Rider," one of her best known collections. The story, which takes place at the turn of the century, is being produced for ABC-TV's Wednesday night series by Talent Associates, which is headed by David Susskind and Daniel Melnick.

Miss Lee will appear in next season's Tuesday night series, "The Pruitts of Southampton," which stars Phyllis Diller. The former burlesque star, who now has her own syndicated TV talk show on the West Coast (9:30 a.m. daily, channel 11), will appear as Regina Wentworth, Miss Diller's arch rival in Long Island society.

Teen-Age Band

Stan Seckler of Stanton will direct his teen-age band, "The Pico Rivera Stage Band," during a performance on "Scope" at 3 p.m. today (Sunday), channel 7. Seckler is a musician with the band currently featured in the Long Beach production of "The Music Man."

Baseball Buff

The star of "The Danny Kaye Show" on CBS-TV is truly a baseball buff. Compelled to fly to London during the World Series last fall, the comedian left his watch set on Los Angeles time. As they approached the English coast, Kaye looked at the watch and nudged his seat-mate. "Let's stand up," he said. "They're playing 'The Star-Spangled Banner.'"

THE LARGEST EGG PROPORTIONATE TO THE SIZE OF THE BIRD IS LAID BY THE FLIGHTLESS KIWI...

AND THE ROLY-POLY FEMALE IN HER HAIR-LIKE PLUMAGE LEAVES THE MALE TO INCUBATE THE EGG

WHEN THE EGG HATCHES SOME 70 TO 80 DAYS LATER, THE FEMALE RETURNS

BUT INSTEAD OF RELIEVING HER MATE OF RESPONSIBILITY, SHE LAYS ANOTHER GIANT EGG

WHICH TIES PAPA DOWN FOR ANOTHER 10 TO 12 WEEKS

IT'S NO WONDER THAT THESE PRIMITIVE BIRDS MATE FOR LIFE...

FOR THE MALE HAS LITTLE CHANCE, OR IS TOO WEARY, TO EVEN LOOK AT ANOTHER FEMALE
